DEBENTURE REJECTED

Hoover to Get Tariff Wish

... Also Awards Point on Flexible Provision; Senate Must Act

... Expected to Get All Duties Sought for Products of State

By LAURENCE M. BENEDICT
Times Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(Exclusive)—The Hoover came to the support of President Hoover in splendid fashion today on the tariff legislation, voting 231 to 161, to knock out the export debenture farm relief section and later, voting, 236 to 156, to insist upon retention of the so-called flexible provision giving the executive authority to raise or lower import rates up to 50 per cent to meet shifting conditions in world markets.

The double-barreled administration victory, plus the action of the House in adopting a 2-cent tax on Cuban sugar and placing lumber and shingles on the free list, constituted notable victories for the President and, observers say, materially made over the Senate bill along lines favorable to Mr. Hoover's desire and in addition primarily benefiting the consuming public.

COMPLETE PHOTOGRAPHIC RECORDS KEPT BY BYRD

Panoramic Views, Still Photos and Motion Pictures Reveal Wonders of Antarctic

This pictorial record of the Byrd Antarctic Expedition to the West, complete made in Antarctic. All phases of photography are represented—still pictures, moving pictures and a series of panoramic views taken by air-mapping cameras. The best of the pictures appear in the Rotogravure section of today's issue of The Times. Captain McKinley, aerial photographer of the expedition, tells in the following article how the work was done and the difficulties of photography under the extraordinary climatic conditions of the polar continent.

BY ASHLEY C. McKINLEY

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive)—The Byrd Antarctic Expedition sailed south in 1928 with two primary objectives—exploration and a scientific study of the greatest unknown land in the world.

Realizing that his work was only half completed until the records were returned to civilization, Admiral Byrd included in his organization the most complete photographic unit that has ever been taken with an expedition to the polar regions. Equipment for aerial photography and moving pictures was included, as well as a very complete equipment for taking still ground pictures.

The long trip through the tropics to and from the Antarctic made it necessary to have a complete laboratory, the damp heat of the tropics being very detrimental to all undeveloped sensitized photographic material. Not only were ground pictures developed in the Antarctic but also aerial film, making it necessary to include elaborate apparatus for this work. Almost two tons of chemicals were taken for photography.

LABORATORY BUILT

When the expedition reached the base in the Antarctic the first duty of the photographic department was to construct its laboratory. What a unique place this Antarctic laboratory turned out to be! The location of the water supply made it necessary to build it next to the mess hall rather than in the administration building, as originally planned. First, a deep hole, which filled several times before it was completed, was dug in the snow next to and in front of the mess hall. In this hole two rooms were made from old boxes and extra lumber. An old washtub was used as a sink, and the kitchen range boiler, with a large blow torch placed underneath, was utilized as a water heater.

WATER FROM SNOW

Water was a serious problem to us. The only manner in which it could be obtained was by melting snow, which was frozen as hard as SWATOW (China) May 3. (AP)—An armed guard from the American destroyer Borie was forced to settle a dispute between dock coolies and members of the crew of the American steamer Golden Peak here today.

The steamer requested aid when the coolies attempted to storm the ship. The naval guard quickly restored order. One seaman of the Golden Peak was beaten and was taken to a hospital.

The Golden Peak is a freighter of 4381 net tons operated by the American-Hawaiian Steamship Company. She left San Francisco March 22 for oriental ports with a general cargo. She carries a crew of about forty-five men.

CITY'S BID TO HOOVERS SENT EARLY

Invitation to President and Wife for Memorial Day, 1931, Delivered

By a Times Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 3.—(Exclusive)—Senator Shortridge today presented to President and Mrs. Hoover an engrossed invitation to be guests of the City of Los Angeles on the occasion of the sixty-fourth observance of Memorial Day, May 30, 1931. This invitation was forwarded to the Senator by Mr. E. R. Cheeseman, chairman of the general Memorial Day committee of all veteran organizations of American wars and their affiliated organizations, and on behalf of the Mayor and City Council of Los Angeles.

The President stated that while he deeply appreciated the invitation extended to him and Mrs. Hoover he felt the date is too far in advance to give a definite reply at this time.

Oakland Finds Abducted Girl

OAKLAND, May 3. (AP)—Pearl Grant, 12-year-old Seattle girl abducted by her foster father, Everett F. Lindsay, after he had assertedly slain Mrs. Lindsay, was discovered in a rooming-house here today by police. Lindsay was not with the girl and is believed to be in Los Angeles.

The girl was discovered after J. F. Dorsey, rooming-house proprietor, notified police a man giving the name of Jack Grant had left his daughter at the rooming-house the 1st inst. and had not returned for her. Taken to the Juvenile Detention Home she was recognized as Pearl Grant from photographs forwarded here by Seattle authorities.

MEXICO CITY, May 3. (AP)—Two hundred men worked nine hours today at a cost of 1000 pesos to free a 5-year-old girl who was imprisoned between two huge blocks of stone in the downtown section.

When little Josefina Maria Lopez was taken home this afternoon she was little the worse for her experience.

Young Pilots Dare Death on Gorge Flight

CANON CITY (Colo.) May 3. (AP) Two 18-year-old youths, Frank Signer of Canon City and Foster Burns of Denver, today successfully piloted an airplane between the rugged crags of the winding Royal Gorge and under the recently constructed suspension bridge over the chasm.

Burns has been solo flying for less than a year while Singer made his first solo hop two weeks ago after seven hours' instruction. Many pilots with years of flying experience have turned back at the sight of the rough cliff walls and the Arkansas River more than 1000 feet below. The distance between the canon walls is several hundred feet and the air above the gorge is reported by pilots to abound with dangerous downward air currents.

TACOMA, May 3. (AP)—One woman received possible fatal injuries and three others were seriously hurt in a hit-and-run auto crash ten miles north of here on the Tacoma-Seattle highway today.

Mrs. R. Scarlet, 74 years of age, of Portland, is suffering from a broken nose, compressed chest and possible fractured ribs; Mrs. E. B. Walsh, 42, driver of the car containing the four women, received a severe laceration of the scalp; her daughter, Muriel Walsh, 18, a badly wrenched right knee as well as bruises and abrasions, and Mrs. H. N. Spedding, 45, a deep laceration on her left knee as well as numerous small cuts and bruises.

Comet Found, Cable Reveals

CAMBRIDGE (Mass.) May 3. (AP) The Harvard Observatory today announced receipt of a cablegram from the Central Bureau of Astronomical Telegrams at Copenhagen telling of the discovery of a new comet of ninth magnitude in the constellation corona borealis.

The discovery was announced by Prof. Kobold of Kiel, Germany, who attributed it to the observations of the Astronomers Schwassman and Wachmann.

OKLAHOMA WOMEN HURT IN TORNADO

Twister Wrecks Houses Near Tuttle and Injures Two Inmates

TUTTLE (Okla.) May 3. (AP)—Mrs. Ben Jackson, wife of a dairy farmer living half a mile west of here, was injured seriously early tonight when a tornado uncoofed their dwelling. Falling rafters narrowly missed Jackson and four children who were in the house.

Four other houses in the vicinity of Tuttle were damaged by the wind and a woman living a mile north of the city was reported injured.

The cloud, funnel-shaped, approached Tuttle from the Sooner community south of here and moved to the north. Striking about half a mile from Tuttle, the storm traveled for nearly eight miles.

TERRIFIC WIND DOES DAMAGE

ALTUS (Okla.) May 3. (AP)—Several small buildings were destroyed, the city grandstand was wrecked and trees were uprooted and hurled across streets here early tonight when a brief windstorm struck the city.

A hurried survey of the area swept by the storm failed to disclose any persons who had been injured.

The wind, which was accompanied by a heavy downpour, lasted only a few minutes and no one reported seeing a tornado cloud in the sky.

ORGAN WILL PLAY LIGHT, NOT SOUND

Unusual Effects Slated at Performance of Ibsen Play in New York

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—An organ that plays light instead of sound will take the place of the footlights and "baby spots," when "The Vikings," Ibsen's play of the northland, is produced here next week.

Seated at the piano-like keyboard of the strument, which he calls a clavilux, will be the inventor, Thomas Wilfred, operating the keys that can each slide through 100 different positions. They will be connected electrically with light projectors stationed overhead in the wings and in place of the old-time "foots."

Against a blank canvas backdrop on the stage the projectors, manipulated by the keys of the clavilux, will produce the illusion of crackling flames, surging waves, the brilliance of a Norwegian sunset. They will light the faces and illumine the gestures of the players.

The clavilux, an instrument of aluminum with ground glass lenses, has been used before as an accompaniment of light for symphonic music, notably in the rendition of Rimsky Korsakoff's "Scheherazade" by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra at Carnegie Hall in 1926.

Its use in connection with "The Vikings," however, will mark its first appearance in the professional theater.

FIRE SWEEPS LUMBER PLANT

TACOMA (Wash.) May 3. (AP)—A spectacular fire that swept the plant of the Specialty Lumber and Manufacturing Corporation at Harvard station early today did damage estimated at approximately $100,000. With the exception of a new dry kiln erected a few months ago, the plant was destroyed.

CULVER CITY COUNT HIGH

Pasadena Census Also Startling

Film Town Fastest Growing Area in Southland With 1011 Per Cent Rise

Alhambra Increases from 9096 to 20,450 in Last Decade

As Culver City took the lead as the fastest-growing city in Southern California, with a gain of 1011 per cent in ten years, census figures released yesterday revealed tremendous gains also for Pasadena and Alhambra.

Culver City now has a population of 8591, as against a population of 849 persons in 1920.

Pasadena's population was found by the enumerators to be 75,575, compared with a population of 45,345 in 1920. This is a gain of 67.3 per cent for the Crown City. Glendale, with a population just fixed at 62,607, had hoped to come somewhere near the figures for Pasadena.

Census Supervisor Ballentine, with headquarters in Monrovia, announced the figures for Alhambra as 20,450 in the present count, as against a population of only 9096 in 1920. This is a growth of 223.7 per cent for Alhambra. Included in the census taking of the Alhambra precinct are twenty-one farms, Mr. Ballentine announced.

Supervisor De Coudres at Long Beach announced the population of Bellflower as 6710, but had no figures on the population of that town for 1920. Mr. De Coudres said his office will begin the final checking of Long Beach's figures probably tomorrow.

According to Supervisor Chenoweth, supervisor of the northern district, in which Glendale and Pasadena are located, it is probable that the figures on Burbank and San Fernando will be ready some time during the early part of the coming week.

Indications yesterday were that the central district, comprising the bulk of the city of Los Angeles, will be ready for announcement as to population some time before the other districts that lie partly in Los Angeles. Under the agreement, all the supervisors will hold their figures for a simultaneous release on the Los Angeles figures. In some districts considerable work remains to be done before the final check can be made.

BAKERSFIELD WILL START RECHECK TOMORROW

BAKERSFIELD, May 3. (Exclusive) — Sixty-five Bakersfield men and women will take the field Monday morning to make an accurate check of every building in Bakersfield to determine the number of persons missed during the recent census taking. Such a survey was decided upon during a board of directors' session of the Bakersfield Civic Commercial Association, which was attended by Roland J. Veon, director of the census for this district, who asked the local civic body's aid in making the recheck.

Following the census official's request for physical and financial aid to make the city survey, President Hugh Jewett named Arthur Crites and F. W. Whitaker to join him in a committee to obtain financial aid from other Bakersfield service organizations. Acting under the direction of their own organization, the three men agreed to underwrite the expense of the survey and after consultation with other civic bodies, announced that funds had been

MORE RAIN EXPECTED

Storm Warnings Ordered Up

Normal Fall for All of May Exceeded Yesterday in Two Hours

Downpour Sweeps Length of Coast With Snow in Mountains

Los Angeles received yesterday afternoon more rain from the general storm which covered all Southern California and the Pacific Coast than the amount recorded as the fifty-two-year normal rainfall for the entire month of May.

Readings at the United States Weather Bureau disclosed that .76 of an inch of rain had fallen here in the twenty-four hours prior to 8 o'clock yesterday evening and reports indicated nearly an inch had fallen in several near-by cities. The storm brought the season's rainfall to 11.24 inches, compared with a normal of 14.78 inches. Last year's seasonal fall for the same period was 12.81 inches. The normal rainfall for May is .46 of an inch.

MORE DUE TODAY

More rain is expected today, according to the forecast of the Weather Bureau last night, which read:

"Unsettled weather Sunday and Monday, with probable showers Sunday; temperature below normal."

Yesterday's highest temperature was 61 deg. at noon, as against a high of 80 deg. a year ago. The lowest temperature was 55 deg., as against 50 deg. a year ago.

The officials at the bureau received a warning last night from San Francisco to hoist storm warnings for southwesterly winds for the twenty-four hours from yesterday evening at 7 o'clock. The warning message said the winds would be from fresh to strong and southerly, with occasional gales at sea.

The observers said they had received reports of rain from every station on the Pacific Coast and that the center of the storm was 1100 miles off Eureka, but moving slowly.

STREETS FLOODED

At the height of the storm yesterday many downtown streets were running gutter full to the dismay of pedestrians splashing from street cars and stepping plump drains brought an avalanche of calls to the City Engineering Department.

Reports of snow in the San Bernardino Mountains were general with from one to three inches reported from Big Bear, Lake Arrowhead and Cajon Pass. Automobile traffic, however, was not interrupted at a late hour last night and it was not expected that roads will be closed as a result of the storm.

F. E. Wadsworth, superintendent of Big Pines Park, reported last night that snow started to fall yesterday morning at 10 o'clock at the park and continued until the white blanket was 6 feet deep on the ground by dusk. He said a blizzard was expected during the night and advised motorists who intended making the trip to the camp today to take tire chains with them. Wadsworth added that all roads are open and will be passable today unless an exceptionally heavy fall of snow drifts during the night.

WINTER SPORTS SLATED

The officials at the camp were preparing yesterday for the entertainment of a large number of visitors and announced that winter sports of all kinds will be held, which, according to the superin-

ART LASHES AT RELIGION

Two Satirical Paintings Cause Stir Among Salon Patrons in London

[Copyright, 1930, Press Publishing Co.]

LONDON, May 3. (Exclusive)—Two biting satires on religion features the annual spring exhibition of the Royal Academy Society, the private view of which was held yesterday.

One of these, entitled "Were You There When They Crucified My Lord?" by Mary Simmons, is a mocking canvas. The crucifixion is depicted in a modern setting. A top-heavy crowd jeers on the right. A few women here and there have become hysterical. There is a bewildered looking crowd of children perched on a near-by tree. Men with faces twisted into sneers crowd around. In the background there is a saloon from which drinkers have rushed out to see the sight. Just beyond is a lighted church with a service in progress while the tragedy is enacted outside.

The other picture, by John Keating, an Irish painter, shows Homo Sapiens high above the roofs of a skyscraper city. In one of his hands is a gas mask, and in the other a bishop's mitre. A fleet of attacking airplanes swarms overhead.

Those privileged to see the private view today crowded around these two pictures. One of the most puzzled was Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald, who stood before the crucifixion picture some minutes discussing with Lady Lavery, wife of a famous artist, what it was all about.

BYRD PHOTOGRAPHERS MAKE PICTURE RECORDS

ack by the sub-zero temperature. The rooms were lined with paper, as the temperature of 70 deg. above zero had to be maintained here when the outside temperature was as much as 70 deg. below. This first seemed almost impossible, but Mother Nature, who, though very rough at times in the Antarctic, is often helpful, took a hand and covered the laboratory with drift snow, so that from the outside it was impossible to tell that the little shack was hidden beneath the surface.

This snow served as an insulator, and there was no difficulty in keeping our laboratory as warm as desired—that is, from the waist up. Often the temperature would be 80 deg. above and we could work without our shirts, while our feet would freeze with the heavy socks and fur mukluks on. On the whole, we had a great little laboratory. The construction had just been completed when the sun dipped below the horizon for a five months' stay.

WINTER SHOTS

The photographic department kept busy during the long winter night taking flashlights of our winter light in Little America, often to the discomfort of the remaining inhabitants, as our flashlight powder filled our houses with smoke. But our world was a happy one, so no kicks were registered. Several outside shots were made by the aid of flares.

The most interesting were among the pressure ice, and they were both beautiful and frightful, presenting scenes such as one would picture in Dante's Inferno. Our helpers carried lighted flares as they climbed among the masses of broken ice. This photography was not accomplished without some hazard and discomfort, as it was impossible in the dark to see the many crevices, and the temperature was 80 deg. below zero. There was just enough breeze to send the cold through every opening in one's clothes. When the pictures were developed, however, we felt fully repaid for our outing.

When the sun again appeared, Little America became a very busy place. Drivers were exercising their dogs; the aviation crew was taking the planes out of their snow hangars; fresh seal meat was being obtained as food for men and dogs. Every department was preparing for the summer work. All this must be recorded by both moving and ground pictures. There were so many activities at this time that it was impossible for the aerial surveyor, to whom had been given the extra duty of official photographer, to cover everything.

There were thirty-five cameras on the expedition, so everybody in Little America contributed to our collection of ground pictures. Capt. Parker and Dean Smith were hardly if ever without a camera. They were regular picture fans. Their work was surely appreciated by the photographer. Some of the best pictures made in the Antarctic were taken by Prof. L. M. Gould on his 1200-mile dog-sled trip between the base and the Queen Maud Range. Our collection would not be complete without his contribution. Among his pictures were many views of trail light and the many mountains in the Queen Maud Range which had never before been seen.

INTENSE COLD

Even though the light had returned, the temperature remained between 60 and 40 deg. below zero for the next three months. This period of intense cold caused the film to break, cameras to jam, and frequently we had to come in and thaw ourselves out before taking a picture. When operating a camera—whether it be motion picture, ground or aerial—in the Antarctic, one must be prepared for many vexations. Moving parts bend, due to contraction; moisture condenses on the lens; and often fingers are burned until the tips appear to have been repeatedly put upon a hot stove. Our cameras were left outdoors as much as possible to prevent sweating of the lenses, but it was often very difficult to keep the snow out when it was drifting. Drift snow has a way of getting into a tight camera case.

The most interesting ground work, from our point of view, were pictures taken on the bay ice during the winter and spring. The ice conditions were changing daily. At times the view looked like fairyland. The ice was thrown about in confusion in every imaginable shape, some of it fifty feet high. Later in the season the bay ice was cracked in many places, small lakes were formed and icicles were draped from the pressure ice. The scene reflected in the lake with the Barrier as a background supplied many beautiful pictures. Also on the bay we were able to make many good shots of seals, penguins and killer whales.

Our photographic trips to the bay ice were made by dog teams, the sleds serving as carrier for camera and equipment, while we on skis were towed behind with ropes. Often men, dogs, or both would fall into cracks, some of which were open to the water. Towing on skis behind a dog team, especially when the dogs have a light load, is a great sport filled with many thrills. Beginners, as most of us were, would be dragged on their backs as much as they were pulled on their skis. On the whole, the camera trip to the bay was a day of adventure.

The Weddell seal, whose main characteristic is laziness, is usually an excellent poser, but the Ross seal, having more pep, will often charge the cameraman; therefore, we were always sure of our footing when taking his picture. One day when Capt. Parker was on the bay making seal pictures, he was fortunate in seeing a Weddell and a Ross seal fighting. Upon his return to camp he was telling his story. My first question was: "Did you get the picture?" He, in his excitement, did not remember. Fortunately, when the film was developed, the picture was there—a good one at that.

BAY OF WHALES

About a month before the City of New York arrived at the Bay of Whales to relieve a rather awkward situation, we were surprised on our way to breakfast by a great uproar on the bay, which is usually wrapped in dead silence except for an occasional cracking of the ice. After breakfast the entire population of Little America, with as many cameras, adjourned to the bay. At the first crack about a half mile from our base we found about a dozen big whales having a great time.

It was a sight of a lifetime to see these enormous mammals diving, blowing, and at times shooting their noses out of the water much higher than our heads. Often they were so close that we could poke them with our ski sticks. I do not believe that ever before such a whale picture was offered to photographers, and we surely made the best of the opportunity. Dozens of still pictures were taken, not to mention hundreds of feet of motion-picture film.

OVERLAPPING PHOTOS

When the airplanes had been dug out of their snow hangars and the test flight had been made, the way was open for aerial flight and aerial survey. Aerial survey in the United States is usually accomplished by taking a series of overlapping photographs with the camera pointing vertically down and the surface of the film parallel to the ground. From these pictures a very accurate line may can be drawn over a network of control points which have been obtained by the usual ground methods.

Exploration aerial mapping presents an entirely different problem, coverage and detail rather than accuracy being of primary importance on a long exploration flight in the Antarctic. It was for this reason that the decision was made to make an oblique mapping instead of a vertical one. Civilization is, at the present time, much more concerned with whether there is land or not and the details of the land, if any, than with the exact location of a certain peak. Accuracy was, of course, of great importance. Every effort, therefore, was made to add to the accuracy of the oblique maps. While navigation served as the main control, ground controls were relied upon when available.

NETWORK OF CONTROL

On the Bay of Whales, where our base was, a very accurate network of control points was obtained. Likewise, the first 480 miles of the polar flight were controlled by data obtained by our geological party. We were also fortunate in having many well-known points in the Rockefeller Range. Oblique photographs were taken at a predetermined angle from the horizontal. This known factor will prove useful when the horizon does not show on the photograph. The elevation was recorded and, with the known factor, the focal length of the lens, reasonably accurate measurements can be taken from the photographs.

Seven flights, during which aerial mapping was done, were made during our stay in the Antarctic. The two outstanding flights were the polar flight and the eastern flight. During the polar flight oblique photographs were taken at twenty degrees from the horizontal, using a nine-and-one-half-inch focal length lens. The flight resulted in a strip or photographic panorama over a stretch about 800 miles long. The pictures were taken while we were going to the pole and returning to Little America, and the width of the ground covered varies according to the elevation of the airplane above the surface.

MAPS OF COAST LINE

On the eastern flight, mapping photographs were made of some 400 miles of coast line, starting at Little America and going northeast. The photographs on this flight also include the new mountains discovered by Admiral Byrd in Marie Byrd Land. From the scientist's and explorer's point of view this flight is equal in value to any made in the Antarctic.

A flight was also made to Discovery Inlet, a distance of about ninety miles, and thus the length of the coast line mapped by photography was in all about 800 miles. From Discovery Inlet we turned south and flew inland for 100 miles. At first it was decided to make a vertical map of the Bay of Whales. We made such a map of the coast line of the bay, but so much interesting area remained unmapped that I finally concluded to cover an area of 800 square miles of obliques. This should prove a very accurate map, due to the number of ground observations made in that vicinity.

TROUT SPEEDED TO PRESIDENT

Lake Arrowhead Catch Sent Hoover by Plane-Train Fast Schedule

GLENDALE, May 3. (AP)—Forty-eight hours after they were hooked at Lake Arrowhead, the T.A.T.-Maddux Airlines announced eight lake trout totaling thirteen pounds were delivered to the White House at 10 o'clock today for President Hoover's Sunday breakfast. The trout, caught early Thursday morning, were speeded east over the company's plane-train route.

HOOVER GIVEN TARIFF WISHES

House Rejects Debenture Plan of Measure

Letter to Tilson Cited in Forecast of Veto

Californians Back President, Including Democrat

all-around protection under the tariff system than any State in the Union. This is due largely to the basically sound claims of the State and to the efforts of Senator Shortridge.

MAY BACK DOWN

The best guess by observers is that the Senate will finally back down completely on the debenture, and that perhaps a compromise flexible scheme will be evolved in further conference between the two houses whereby the President will continue to have rate changing authority, but with his orders for increases or decreases subject to sixty or ninety-day veto by Congress. Such a plan has been suggested by Speaker Longworth and House Republican leaders.

The House voted against the export debenture after the administration had thrown all its weight against the scheme, President Hoover personally entering the fray with a letter to Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the Republican floor leader. In the letter, the President declared his opposition to the plan to be as strong as ever and cited a Tariff Commission estimate that the debenture, on the basis of present exports, would cost the Federal government $280,000,000 a year.

LETTER TO TILSON

President Hoover's letter to Mr. Tilson follows:

"The Hon. John Q. Tilson, House of Representatives.

"My dear Tilson:

"I have your letter of inquiry as to whether I see any reason to change the views which I expressed on April 30, last year, upon the so-called debenture plan introduced by the Senate into the tariff bill. I do not.

"Some minor alterations have been made in the plan which do not go to the essential fact that the practical working of it will depress and not elevate prices to the farmers. The plan in the present bill presents an additional objection in that the export subsidies proposed vary with different agricultural products and thus are widely different to different farmers. They vary from about 9 per cent upon the cost of production of rye to apparently near 100 per cent on tobacco. In the latter case, growers could apparently afford to raise their product and export it for the subsidy alone.

"Since my previous statement the Tariff Commission has estimated the cost of the plan to the Treasury if put into operation and on the basis of present exports, at about $280,000,000 per annum.

"Yours faithfully,

[Signed] "HERBERT HOOVER."

WARNS OF VETO

Warning of a possible veto on the entire tariff measure was seconded by Representative Tilson in reading the President's debenture letter of the 1st inst. and also the communication from the Executive to Congress on the same subject a year ago. "I ask every fair-minded man who will read those extracts," the Republican leader said, "if he can fairly say there is any question as to what the President will do with this bill if it should reach the other end of the avenue with this provision (debenture) in it. In my judgment, based on the statements the President has made, he could not approve a bill containing such a provision."

"Does the gentleman mean to infer," asked Montague, Democrat, of Virginia, "that the President will veto the bill if this provision is inserted?"

"I cannot imagine any other thing," Tilson replied.

ALL BACK HOOVER

All members of the California delegation, including the lone Democrat, Lea, of Santa Rosa, voted against the debenture and for retention of the flexible clause.

Forty-eight Republicans and the one Farmer-Labor member, Kvale, of Minnesota, voted with 112 Democrats for the debenture, while thirty-seven Democrats and 194 Republicans opposed it.

Eight Democrats and 228 Republicans voted against the Senate flexible provision, while twelve Republicans and Kvale combined with 141 Democrats for it.

The eight Democrats in opposition were Connery, Douglass, Granfield and McCormack, all of Massachusetts; Drane, Owen and Yon, all of Florida, and O'Connor of Louisiana.

The twelve Republicans for it were Browne, Cooper, Hull, Kading, Lampert, Peavy, Schneider and Stafford, all of Wisconsin; Christgau, Minnesota; La Guardia, New York; Lambertson, Kansas, and Sinclair, North Dakota.

MORE RAIN DUE TO FALL TODAY

tendent, is an unusual event for May.

Other mountain points reported heavy fall of rain with Opid's Camp on the slopes of Mt. Wilson topping the list with 2.33 inches of rain during the twenty-four hours ending at 6 o'clock yesterday evening. Additional totals in excess of an inch were given from Topanga Ranger Station, 1.35; Pacoima Dam, 1.02; Alta Canada, 1.75; Loomis Ranch, 1.41, and Mt. Wilson, 1.35.

All local sporting activity was halted yesterday by the rain. The Los Angeles-Oakland baseball game at Wrigley Field, the Southern California high school track championship meet at Los Angeles High School and the Trojan-Bruin baseball game scheduled for U.C.L.A. were all postponed.

Three events on the prep meet were run off and will be counted in finals which will be run off Tuesday, weather permitting. In the morning Nichols of Hemet won the javelin and Smith of Paso Robles won the discus. Only the 880-yard event was run in the afternoon, Joe Rathbun of Long Beach winning in a sea of mud, while the favorites slid and fell. The time of 2m. 2 3-5s. was remarkably good, considering the poor conditions.

The Hollywood-Rover soccer game for the California cup, the automobile races at the Legion Speedway, a polo game at the Uplifters' Club and the Wrigley Field double-header all probably will be called off today, officials said.

An open-air boxing show scheduled for last night also was indefinitely postponed.

NORTH AND CENTRAL STATE AREAS FELTED

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. (Exclusive)—Although moving eastward, the widespread depression overlying the entire West from the Canadian to the Mexican border pelted Northern and Central California with rain again today and deposited a moderate amount of snow in the higher altitudes of the Sierras.

The movement east is steady, but Forecaster Reed expects its influence to remain at least part of tomorrow. He predicts showers in the morning, low temperatures and additional snowfall in the mountains.

Four inches of snow fell at Soda Spring. There are eleven inches on the level there.

Precipitation in inches reported by official northern stations at 5 p.m. was:

MIAMI (Ariz.) May 3. (AP)—Approximately an inch of rain fell here last night and today. Skies were clearing tonight.

WINSLOW (Ariz.) May 3. (AP)—Rain fell in Winslow throughout last night and part of today. The sun came from behind the clouds about noon and it was clear by mid-afternoon.

DIVORCE ISSUED TO LADY HEATH

Flyer Obtains Decree in Reno Court

Iron Master Described as Penurious

Alimony Not Asked and No Contest Made

RENO, May 3. (AP)—On the ground of extreme cruelty, Lady Mary Heath, aviatrix, was granted a divorce here today from Sir James Heath, British iron master.

The decree went by default as the wealthy Briton failed to contest the suit. Evidence was heard in the chambers of Judge Thomas F. Moran, disappointing a large crowd gathered in the courtroom.

Among her allegations of cruelty Lady Heath said her aged husband was penurious. "I think he is a bit 'touched,'" the plaintiff told the court. She explained she meant by "touched" that her husband was mentally affected, in regard to money matters especially.

NO ALIMONY ASKED

The flyer said Sir James had never told her what he is worth but that she thought his income to be $200,000 to $300,000 annually. No mention was made of alimony in the suit. It was understood there was a prenuptial financial arrangement.

Three minutes after the wedding ceremony, Lady Heath said, her husband told her he was going to make a will and that his daughter by a former marriage would be the principal beneficiary and that she, his wife, would get nothing. She also testified that Sir James said if a child were born he would not acknowledge his parentage as he did not want the expense of raising it. It also was testified the iron master refused to pay his wife's bills.

INJURED IN CRASH

Lady Heath recited her experiences with her husband who is 75 years of age. Whereas she gave her age as 31. She said when she left England for America to lecture on aviation she was "flat." Her husband, she said, has never written to her and she has no idea what he might think about a reconciliation. They lived together a while in South America, but everywhere they went, she asserted, he refused to pay her bills after telling her to charge her purchases to him.

The flyer recently recovered from a serious injury sustained in an airplane fall in Cleveland, O.

Wood to Quiz Hyde on Fund

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—Chairman Wood of the House Appropriations Committee has called Secretary Hyde before his group to explain the need for the appropriation of $6,902,000 asked March 20 for Mediterranean fruit fly eradication work.

Secretary Hyde and Agriculture Department insect experts are to appear before the committee Monday.

HUSBAND DIVORCES AUTHOR'S DAUGHTER

OAKLAND, May 3. (Exclusive)—Long lecture tours to undisclosed destinations for indefinite periods today won an interlocutory decree of divorce for Charles Malamuth, assistant professor of Slavic languages at the University of California, from Joan London Malamuth, daughter of the late Jack London. It was she who took the lecture tours, Malamuth testified, and when he protested was told he was stifling Mrs. Malamuth's individuality. Superior Judge Allen granted the decree.

LINDBERGH GAY ON HIS RETURN

He Makes 'Leisurely' Hop at 135 Miles an Hour

Jokes With Reporters About Rumor of Accident

Latin-American Night Mail Service Predicted

ROOSEVELT FIELD (N. Y.) May 3. (AP)—In sunny mood, Col. Lindbergh came home today after flying the blue waters of the Caribbean on the inaugural flight of the new seven-day air mail linking North and South America.

Today's hop was a nonstop jump from Miami, Fla., at an average of about 135 miles an hour. "Just leisurely flying," he said. "I'd turned over the mail in Miami to another plane so there was nothing to hurry about." His plane was the specially built racer in which he recently set a new transcontinental record.

JOKES WITH REPORTER

Landing some distance from a crowd gathered to see him come in, the colonel taxied directly into a hangar. He chatted with reporters for a few minutes before going to New York, joking about a report that he had been killed while in Panama and asking if any stories had been printed that "we" was about to make another trans-Atlantic flight.

"I believe that night air-mail service will be put in effect as soon as facilities, beacons and the like, are installed along the routes through Central and South America," he said. "It may be some time before night passenger service in Latin America becomes an actuality, but it is one of the next logical developments."

His belief night flying offers the next progress in aviation service between Americas was founded on his opinion that the route he just opened, lying almost straight across the tropical waters from Miami to Cristobal, Canal Zone, cannot be shortened materially.

RADIO FACILITIES GOOD

"Radio communication facilities have been perfected to a point of 100 per cent efficiency as far as operation of mail and passenger planes between North and South America is concerned," Lindbergh continued. "During the flight to Cristobal and return we were in constant communication with several radio stations along the route."

He said he had no immediate plans to announce and did not say where he was going after reaching New York, but it was taken for granted that he would go directly to Englewood, N. J., to rejoin his wife at the home of her parents, Ambassador and Mrs. Dwight W. Morrow.

Col. Lindbergh made the hop from Miami, approximately 1200 miles, in eight hours and fifty-seven minutes.

AIRCRAFT SHOW TALK WILL BE BROADCAST

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—Col. Lindbergh will address the radio audience Sunday evening as a feature of the New York aircraft show.

Arrangements have been made by the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia Broadcasting System to put his talk on the air for fifteen minutes, beginning at 4:15 p.m. Pacific standard time.

These persons will be former election registrars and thoroughly familiar with the residents in their respective districts.

FOLSOM PRISON AND VALLEY FIGURES GIVEN

SACRAMENTO, May 3. (AP)—The 1930 population figures for five towns in Sacramento Valley and Folsom State prison were announced today by L. B. Rowland, supervisor of Federal census for this district. These figures are official, but preliminary and subject to correction.

The population of Folsom prison including guards, their families and prisoners, is 2366, compared with 1201 as shown by the 1920 census. This is an increase of 97 per cent as compared with a 10 per cent increase between 1910 and 1920 census counts. In 1910 the prison reservation population was 1144.

Other census figures follow: Gridley, Butte county, 1939, compared with 1636 in 1920; Marysville, Yuba county, 8760, compared with 5461 in 1920; Yuba City, Sutter county, 3606, compared with 1708 in 1920, an increase of 111 per cent; Maxwell, Colusa county, 806, no report in 1920; North Sacramento, Sacramento county, 2093, no report in 1920.

Rowland said he hoped to be able to announce the official totals for Oroville and Chico by Monday.

BLACK ART LOVE CULT DESCRIBED

New York Woman Relates Weird Tale of Kidnaping and Nude Orgies

NIAGARA FALLS (N. Y.) May 3. (Exclusive)—Weird mystic prayers at the foot of an altar to which a nude woman was strapped were mumbled by New York members of the Order of the Black Mask.

This was the strange story added today to her tale of a world-wide love cult by Mrs. Elizabeth Mowrey, 24 years of age, who charges Antonio Melidona, 34, a "prince" of the order, held her his love slave in a dingy attic here.

Declaring many New York women are members of the cult, which had its origin among German university students and their girls, Mrs. Mowery insisted Melidona kidnaped her from her husband, Robert Mowrey of Brooklyn, and held her prisoner here.

The black art rites she described, she says, took place at the home of King Nicolas, the Buffalo ruler of the order, who thus far has not been further identified.

Mrs. Mowery said that when the men of the cult, each one owner of a woman slave, met for worship with their slaves, all appeared in black masks and stripped to the waist.

Melidona, who is fighting the kidnaping charge as well as Federal efforts to deport him, was granted a week's delay when the case was called in Police Court this morning. He was arrested after the woman was found in her attic prison.

LILLIAN GISH MAY BE CAST WITH NEGRO

Part in "Othello", With Paul Robeson as Moor Planned for Broadway

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive) Lillian Gish, the wistful blond actress who was depicted in "The Birth of a Nation" fifteen or more years ago, leaping from a cliff to her death when pursued by a colored man, may soon share honors with a Negro actor in a Broadway play.

Jed Harris, the theatrical producer, sailed on the Leviathan today for England. When Harris reaches London, he will endeavor to persuade Paul Robeson, colored actor and concert singer, to return with him to New York.

Harris wants Robeson to play Othello in his revival of the Shakespearean tragedy, with Miss Gish as Desdemona. The show will open at the Cort Theater, which Harris has leased for a year when the current attraction, "Uncle Vanya," minus Miss Gish, its star, takes to the road.

Reformers and foes of miscegnation may rant at the daring plan of Harris, but Miss Gish has already agreed to play Desdemona against any Othello chosen for her, it is said.

Robeson, who played the Jules Bledsoe (Old Man River) part in the British "Showboat" company, is a Rutgers University graduate, a Phi Beta Kappa man, a former all-American football star, and a lawyer.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND

ALAMEDA, May 3. WOMAN FLYER'S LOOP MARK HIGH

Laura Ingalls at St. Louis Turns 344 Circles

Previous Feminine Record Was Only Forty-six

Aviatrix's Tank Runs Dry or She'd Have Made 400

ST. LOUIS, May 3. (AP)—Miss Laura Ingalls, 25 years of age, of New York City, established a new women's record for consecutive loops in an airplane by executing 344 loops at Lambert-St. Louis Field late today. The former record of forty-six loops was held by Miss Mildred Kauffman of Kansas City.

Miss Ingalls made sixty-six more loops which did not count, as she had to stop to pump gasoline from a reserve tank.

"I'm terribly disappointed about that because my goal was 400 loops," she said. "I wasn't at all cold or uncomfortable and could have stayed up until 8 o'clock."

She ascended at 4 p.m. and came down at 8:40 p.m., central standard time. It required one hour and three minutes to execute the 344 loops at a height of about 9000 feet.

The record is official, as she was observed by representatives of the Federation Aeronautique Internationale, who used field glasses and counting devices to check the number of loops.

Miss Ingalls recently won her transport pilot's license, being the fifteenth woman in the United States to qualify for such a license.

ECLIPSE STUDY SUCCESS TOLD

omona College Scientist Gives Data on Results

xpedition Efforts Featured by Sound Film Work

henomenon Checked from Air as Well as Ground

CLAREMONT, May 3. (Exclusive)—Results of the Pomona College Observatory expedition to observe the total eclipse of the sun last Monday under the direction of Dr. F. P. Brackett and Dr. W. T. Whitney, revealed some interesting data which will prove extremely valuable for use in future observations, it was revealed today when Dr. Brackett released his statement on the phenomenon to The Times today. Dr. Brackett's statement follows:

"The expedition of the Pomona College Observatory was unlike the other eclipse expeditions in notable respects. The immediate object was to photograph the moon's shadow on the earth with motion-picture cameras from airplanes at high altitudes and to time these pictures by time signals broadcast from government stations received by short-wave radio sets and recorded on the sound-picture film.

ULTIMATE PURPOSE

"The ultimate purpose of the expedition was thus to locate more accurately the moon's position in reference to the earth and sun and so to improve future predictions. Two stations were established on the ground and two airplanes were used, making four divisions of the expedition besides observations made of partial eclipse in the observatory at home.

"Ground stations were established at Ramm's ranch near Comptonville and at Honey Lake near the California-Nevada line. At both places instruments were set up—one to photograph the sun's corona, two to photograph the Bally's beads phenomena.

FILM EQUIPMENT

"There were two telephoto motion-picture cameras for a pictorial study of the eclipse through both partial phases and totality, one for photographing the 'flash spectrum,' also a set of photometers automatically recording the light intensity throughout the eclipse at several points across the path.

"The morning was cloudy at both stations, but the clouds broke away frequently and especially during totality, permitting most of the instruments at Ramms ranch to operate. The director, Dr. Brackett, from his post, and his associates, Stanley Shaver and a number of astronomy students, were able to observe the rare sight of a total eclipse of the sun lasting for only a single second.

PLANE OPERATIONS

"In the air one plane with Tommy Fowler and Al Button and George Woodward, cameraman, reached an altitude of more than 19,000 feet. Flying west over the path until free from clouds, they trained their camera on what they judged to be the shadow as it appeared and disappeared. While these pictures leave something to be decided, the performance was excellent.

"The other plane, commanded by Capt. A. M. Stevens and piloted by Lieut. Corkill, reached an altitude of 18,400 feet with a sound camera in the hands of Capt. Stevens and Mr. Bokley. These men for the first time in history say definitely the complete shadow of the moon appear mountain like in the west and sweep across on the surface below to disappear in the east. More than that, the motion picture they took shows this shadow dimly but definitely on the surface of the clouds. Whether the flares set off on the ground and the marks of identification can be located in the pictures awaits further study. It is possible that the ultimate purpose of the expedition in this respect may not be quite reached, but the achievement is, nevertheless, an astronomical accomplishment."

Only Weighed 105 Pounds; He Now Weighs 130

"I wouldn't take five hundred dollars for the good Sargon has done me. For twelve years I had one of the worst cases of indigestion a man ever had, and three bottles of this wonderful medicine literally relieved me. I was down to 105 pounds and now weigh 130 an actual gain of twenty-five pounds," said J. T. Slatter recently at his home, 1941 Washington St., San Francisco. Mr. Slatter is engaged in the planing mill business.

"My whole system was acid and I couldn't digest a thing I ate. I'd be miserable for hours. My liver was sluggish; my tongue was coated, and I had a disagreeable taste in my mouth all the time. My endurance was at such a low ebb I couldn't walk five blocks without resting. I was weak and nervous and a good night's rest was out of the question. I was constantly taking laxatives for chronic constipation which had bothered me for twenty years. I had a tired, worn-out feeling all the time; I lost lots of weight and my work was a burden to me.

"The first bottle of Sargon helped me, and my improvement continued. The way my strength and energy returned was remarkable. I eat anything I want and my food digests perfectly. I'm gaining in weight right along! I sleep fine, and get up mornings ready for work.

"Sargon Soft Mass Pills rid me of constipation, biliousness, coated tongue and bad breath.

"Sargon has my hearty endorsement."

Sargon may be obtained at all Liggett Drug Stores and Liggett's Drug Stores in Los Angeles and other cities.—[Advertisement.

CRISIS IN INDIA DRAWS NEARER

Firmer Government Attitude Noted by Observers

Lack of Major Disturbances Held Ominous Sign

Rebellion Seethes Fiercer for Calm Surface

LONDON, May 3. (AP)—Observers of the Indian situation tonight could not escape the impression of a decided stiffening of the government's attitude.

Whatever the potent of a superficial quiet which for most of the week pervaded Peshawar, one fact stood out clearly. The British government is fully alive to all events in India and is ready to use arms against any aggression upon its northwest frontier.

It has not escaped the government's observers that beneath a seemingly tranquil surface events have been boiling.

Clashes in Peshawar and surrounding districts have been frequent. Workers' congress propagandists have been particularly active in the villages, where misrepresentations regarding the Sarda Act against child marriage has played a prominent part in attempts to arouse excitement, although it has been pointed out that the Congress party was a staunch supporter of the measure in the Assembly.

It is understood that propaganda has been carried on across the frontier, though thus far little response has been evident. The government recognizes, however, that the wild tribesmen of the region are ready to turn any difficulty of the British raj to their own advantage.

FORCE IF NEEDED

Experienced observers today, therefore, made it unmistakable that the government could quickly be induced to show its position as to armed force in the event of necessity.

Today was celebrated throughout North India as "Peshawar martyr's day" and the government expressed satisfaction that it passed without disorders of major nature.

Only at Calcutta were the police called into action, charging into a procession escorting V. J. Patel, former president of the Legislative Assembly. Patel arrived in Hoorah, a suburb. Several persons were reported to have been injured.

There were further disturbances in the evening when a crowd gathered in the hope of hearing Patel speak. One up-country man was seriously injured and several others suffered lesser hurts. Patel did not make an appearance.

MEASURES PLANNED

An extraordinary gazette, issued today at Simla, gave notice that the application of the act for prevention of seditious meetings will be applied to the Peshawar district and the whole northwestern frontier.

The Statesman and the Bengalee today were the only two newspapers which had not suspended publication in protest against the government's press ordinance. The Indian Chamber of Commerce telegraphed the Viceroy protesting against the decree.

EUROPEANS URGE FIRMER ATTITUDE

BOMBAY, May 3. (AP)—The European Association's Bombay branch today was understood to have written Gov. Sir Frederick Sykes urging that the government adopt a firmer attitude for the maintenance of law and order. The association urged the arrest of all who incite people to break the law, inasmuch as the present policy is interpreted as weakness which is bringing the law into contempt.

REBEL CONGRESSMAN TAKEN BY POLICE

AMRITSAR (India) May 3. (AP)—Dr. Kitchlow, chairman of the reception committee of the Lahore Congress, today was arrested, charged with sedition.

The police were forced to scale the walls of the doctor's grounds to make the arrest. Entrance to his house was effected by battering the doors, all of which had been locked against the coming of the officers.

Upon receiving the news of his arrest, Dr. Kitchlow's supporters proclaimed a hartal, or cessation of work, whereupon the streets were picketed by troops and police.

The scene of the arrest is opposite Jainwalla Bagh, where, in April, 1919, Gen. Dyer's troops fired on a mob of threatening natives.

EX-KAISER SHOWS POWER

Former German Emperor Forces Burgomaster of Doorn to Quit in Row Over Policies

[Copyright, 1930, by Press Publishing Company]

DOORN (Holland) May 3. (Exclusive)—The ex-Kaiser has forced the Burgomaster of Doorn to resign. The population of the little Dutch town where the ex-Kaiser has spent the last ten years looks upon him as the first citizen of the community who has full rights to let his voice and desires be heard concerning affairs affecting the local administration.

When the former Emperor let it be known that he did not approve of the policies of Baron Schlamelpennick Van Der Oye, who was Mayor of Doorn for four years, the people took the hint and ousted him.

The successor of the Baron is Mynheer M. J. Thomassen Van Der Hoop. At the festival of inauguration of the new Mayor Kaiser Wilhelm was represented in the person of his adjutant in full uniform, spiked helmet, gleaming boots and spurs and the spotless cuirass of the Prussian Guard. The people of Doorn, it seems, don't mind this martial display in the least. In the first place, it's picturesque, and then, the ex-Kaiser is the biggest taxpayer of the community. He is the biggest tourist drawing card Doorn ever had.

He is also the biggest customer in the local stores. He pays cash for everything he buys. He is the most generous local contributor to the upkeep of the poor of the community.

WHALEN HOLDS RED EVIDENCE

Documents Not to be Given to Soviet Agents

Criminal Inquiry Under Way, Commissioner Says

Photographic Copies Only to be Made Available

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—Documents purporting to show that soviet agents have been sent here from Russia to foment strikes and riots may or may not be forgeries, but Police Commissioner Whalen regards them as evidence and he is going to hang on to them.

The commissioner made some of the documents public yesterday and they were immediately declared spurious by Peter A. Bogdanov, chairman of Amtorg, soviet trading corporation. One of the papers was a letter on Amtorg stationery signed with the name of an Amtorg official and listing more than a score of asserted secret soviet agents in this country. Bogdanov's name was on the list.

After denying that Amtorg, the official purchasing agent of the U. S. S. R. in America, is anything but a trade organization and asserting that the papers are all forgeries, Bogdanov wrote the commissioner asking for permission to determine their authenticity. Only photographic copies of the papers have been made public, the originals being kept in the possession of the police.

LABOR DEPARTMENT INQUIRY DEMANDED

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—Chairman Johnson of the House Immigration Committee today asked the Labor Department for information concerning the manner of entry into this country of some thirty aliens named in documents made public in New York yesterday as Communist agents.

TYPHOON TOLL BELIEVED 200

Japanese Fishing Fleet Lost in Heavy Storm

Damage of $2,500,000 Done Among Islands

Landslides Crush Homes, Adding to Terror

TOKIO, May 3. (AP)—Nearly 200 Japanese fishermen are believed to have perished in a sudden typhoon which lashed their large fleet last night between the islands of Saghalien and Hokkaido.

Dispatches to the Rengo News Agency stated that ninety-four bodies have been recovered, but more than 100 men are missing. Five hundred fishing boats were wrecked, and damage estimated at $2,500,000 was done.

Lured by herring schools within the bay, 10,000 fishermen aboard 2000 boats put to sea from Odomari, a fishing town of Southern Saghalien. A majority of the male population of the town was aboard the boats.

Suddenly and without warning, the typhoon struck with terrific violence. Some boats went down quickly, others were swamped as they ran for the harbor, while still others were smashed upon the rocky shores of Odomari Bay. One-fourth of the great fleet was lost.

The typhoon came at the peak of a prosperous fishing season. Along the beaches a rich catch was drying. This was swept away.

At the height of the storm, landslides fell from the bluffs upon the city, destroying numerous homes of those who had lost fathers or sons.

Rescuers working upon small steamers and motorboats saved some 200 fishermen alive among the wreckage of their boats or clinging to rocks. Later only bodies were found and fears were felt for the missing.

German Ship Owners Freed of Kidnaping Count

HAMBURG (Germany) May 3. (AP) A verdict of acquittal today was returned in the case of three owners of the German ship Falke, accused of abduction of German sailors in connection with the landing of a small insurgent army on the Venezuelan coast last July.

The defendants, Felix Prenzlau, Felix Kramarsky and Capt. Ernst Zipplitt, had maintained a defense that their course was justifiable.

The Falke, a merchantman, landed at Willemstad, Curacao, and were virtually in possession of that city until their departure with a large number of Venezuelan revolutionaries. These met defeat soon afterward at the hands of Venezuelan Federal troops. The crew of the Falke said they assisted under duress.

Last of Great Railroad Merger Plans Dropped

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—The last of the great independent plans for consolidation of railroads in eastern territory which has been submitted to the Interstate Commerce Commission was withdrawn today when the Delaware and Hudson Company gave formal notice that it will no longer ask consideration of a petition it filed last year.

The Delaware and Hudson Company, which is a holding corporation not engaged in railroad operation, asked authority to acquire among others, the New Haven, Boston and Maine, Reading and Western Maryland systems, proposing to operate them all as a collection of terminal transportation agencies reaching the North Atlantic coast and serving equally all east and west trunk lines.

MOTHERS START TRIP OF SORROW

First of Gold Star Pilgrim Groups Entrain

Steamer Sailing Wednesday to Carry 232

Government's Guests Spared Expense and Care

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—Two hundred and thirty-two women, many wives whose horizons have been limited to rows of corn or cotton and sage brush glimpsed from their kitchen windows, are tomorrow starting on a 5000-mile journey by rail and steamer.

They are the first contingent of the 6000 gold-star widows and mothers who will be taken this spring and summer on one of the most unique journeys of sentiment ever undertaken by any government. They are to visit the graves of their sons and husbands in the four cemeteries in France.

FIRST TO START

The first woman to start on the pilgrimage was Mrs. Helen Simkins of Salem, Iowa. Mrs. Simkin is 68 years of age. Because no Sunday trains run out of Salem she was scheduled to leave her home this morning. Mrs. Simkin has been supplied by the War Department with a complete itinerary showing where she will take a bus, where a train and what time she will leave each place. Every step of her trip has been carefully mapped out for her by Capt. R. E. Johnson, who, acting for the quartermaster-general of the Army, has charge of all transportation for the gold-star pilgrimage.

MOTHERS IN GROUP

Ten women who will sail with the first contingent on Wednesday will arrive in Washington Monday on their way to New York. They constitute the first group from the West and South. They are Mrs. Rosa Shelton, Fayetteville, Ark.; Mrs. Emma Taylor, Hunter, Ark.; Mrs. Minnie Throckmorton, Red Cloud, Neb.; Mrs. Nola Durham, Chester, Neb.; Mrs. Minnie Cannon, Peru, Neb.; Mrs. Lillian Garrison, Union, Ky.; Mrs. Minnie Baker, Williamstown, Ky.; Mrs. Theresa Phillips, Chrstien, Okla.; Mrs. Adelia Werner, Perry, Okla., and Mrs. Simkin, Salem, Iowa.

A delegation of fifteen Ohio women will pass through here Tuesday. The War Department has made no plans for a stopover here but Maj.-Gen. Charles P. Summerall, chief of staff of the Army, will go to New York to see the entire delegation of 222 women sail down the bay Wednesday. They will leave at 11 a.m., on the United States Line's steamship America. A reception at the City Hall and an evening entertainment has been arranged for Tuesday.

ONE EACH WEEK

The pilgrimages, which will sail from New York each week throughout the summer, have been arranged with military precision and thoroughness. The women are relieved of all responsibility and expense. No matter how remote from civilization she may live each woman has her ticket delivered to her door by agents employed by the government.

Word of Mrs. Simkin's journey from Salem, Iowa, to that faraway grave of her son, Frank L. Simkin in Sureness Cemetery in France, has been sent to every division point agent, every conductor and brakeman along her route of travel, thus it is with every woman making the trip.

The little black-and-gold identification folder carried by each mother and widow, the blue-and-gold badge pinned to her dress, will obtain for her such courtesy and service as probably no group of women traveling together has ever had.

WAR'S LOST LEGION SOUGHT

Allied Governments Asked to Search for Thousands of Soldiers Not Accounted For

LONDON, May 3. (AP)—One last appeal is to be made to the Allied governments to locate some of the army of missing men who disappeared between 1914 and 1918.

The "Prisoners of War Support Association" is asking veterans of the various countries to organize campaigns of search to see if the fate of such prisoners of war as have not returned to their homes can be determined.

Nearly 48,000 men are missed by France and 8000 by Great Britain. Italy, by energetic search, has traced all but 3000 of the soldiers who did not return. The figures for Russia and the split-up Austro-Hungarian empire are not known, but a large registered figure is shown by Germany, where relatives are still waiting for 24,000 men.

German official circles assume that many prisoners of war sent to Siberia first postponed travel through Russia during the hectic days of revolution and then abandoned intention to return. Many of these men married under assumed names and cannot return because of possible bigamy charges.

Numerous prisoners were shot trying to escape from war-time prison compounds and as they had removed all identification marks, there is no blame attached to any government for failure to record these deaths.

Finally there are the tragic cases of men who never came back because hardships destroyed their memories.

Negotiations which had been in progress among American, English, German, French, Italian and Belgian interests, it was made known, resulted in establishment of a syndicate which will function for eight years. The American Cyanamid Company of New York represents American interests in the combine.

MORROW MAPS RACE FOR TOGA

Senate Seat by Appointment of Larson Rejected

Envoy Will Make Campaign Before Mexico Trip

He Will Remain Diplomat Until After Primary

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—Rejecting an opportunity to sit in the United States Senate by appointment, Dwight W. Morrow announced today that he will open his campaign for the Republican Senatorial nomination from New Jersey within the next ten days with a view to entering the Senate at the opening of the December session by election of the people.

If nominated and elected in November, Morrow will succeed Walter E. Edge, now Ambassador to France, during the short term from December, 1930, to March, 1931. He will be a candidate also for the six-year term beginning in 1931.

OFFER REJECTED

Morrow announced he had rejected the offer of Gov. Larson and Senator Baird that the latter resign immediately to make way for Morrow's appointment.

He said also he had postponed until after the primary election on June 17 his proposed trip to Mexico City. Some matters left pending when he sailed for the London naval conference required the Ambassador's attention and a previously announced plan indicated he would make the trip to the Mexican capital before opening his campaign.

In announcing the changed plan, Morrow said, moreover, he will fulfill his promise to Mexican officials by returning after the election.

RUN AS DIPLOMAT

Under the present arrangement Morrow will campaign for the nomination as a member of the Diplomatic Corps. In announcing his candidacy last December Morrow expressed his purpose to resign from the State Department before entering the home political campaign.

Morrow gave no indication of the planks to be embodied in his State platform. These, it was understood, will be made public for the first time in his opening campaign speech, to be delivered at Englewood, N. J., his home, some time within the next ten days.

The Ambassador will go to New York tomorrow and will spend several days attending to personal matters. He planned to make a trip to Amherst College, in Massachusetts, to see his son, a student there.

Morrow expressed a willingness to respond to any call from the Senate Foreign Relations Committee considering the London treaty.

Favorite Sister of Phillips Dies

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—Mrs. Carolyn Prevert, the sister at whose urging the late David Graham Phillips left newspaper work to become a popular novelist, died last night after a brief illness.

She was the favorite sister of Phillips, and after he was slain nineteen years ago in front of the old Princeton Club in Gramercy Park she brought out for posthumous publication his novel, "Susan Lenox—Her Fall and Rise."

Phillips was shot to death by a musician who believed his sister had been slandered in one of Phillips's novels.

Negro Robber's Shot Kills Girl

CHICAGO, May 3. (AP)—Alice Voight, 25 years of age, died today of a bullet wound inflicted by a Negro robber who shot her while she was sitting in an automobile with a policeman, Herbert Last.

Last said he and Miss Voight had returned from a drive and were parked in front of her home when the Negro thrust a pistol into their faces. Seeing the policeman's uniform, the Negro became excited and fired, Last said. Last chased the Negro, firing four shots, but the other escaped.

WEBB HOLDS STATE CANNOT TAKE LAND

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. (AP)—Atty.-Gen. Webb today ruled that Federal land taken over by homesteaders and then abandoned because of inability to pay State taxes, reverts to Federal ownership and cannot be used or taken over by the State and sold for taxes. The ruling was made at the request of State Forester Pratt, who inquired whether the State owned and could use such abandoned land, especially in connection with the public park project.

BRIDGE IN NORTH APPROVED

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—Construction of a new bridge across Redwood Creek on the Bayshore Highway at Redwood City, Cal., was approved today by the War Department.

ANOTHER TWIST GIVEN PRETZEL

Husky Tidbit to Be Turned Into Mollycoddle With Paper Dress

MILWAUKEE, May 3. (AP)—The health department is putting envelopes on pretzels.

The department holds it is not very sanitary to have a bowl of pretzels sitting around. With many hands burrowing into it. For that reason pretzels hereafter must be wrapped in something.

This is the first official recognition of this humble tidbit. Many old timers, with long memories, expressed themselves as outraged over what they called "turning big husky pretzels into sanitary mollycoddles."

United Press Staff Correspondent

CHICAGO, April 9.—What a gland expert can do for a great corporation was told today by Dr. James H. Sutton, who has been hired by the Illinois Central Railroad as consulting endocrinologist for its 60,000 employes.

He got the job—the first of its kind in the world—because a fireman developed a nervous ailment that cost the railroad a lot of money before a gland expert corrected the trouble.

Dr. G. G. Dewald, chief surgeon of the Illinois Central medical staff, then obtained the services of Dr. Sutton.

"Detective investigation has been conducted of late with reference to ill health among industrial workers resulting from disturbances of the glands of internal secretion," Dewald explained.

Restored to Normalcy

"It is felt that treatment of these conditions will restore individuals, who might be classified because of an abnormal glandular condition, to the status of useful workers."

Just what these important glands are and how they affect a person was described by the railroad's new endocrinologist. He said:

"The endocrine or ductless glands are so-called because they have no duct or tube through which their secretions are delivered to the blood. They are ten in number, twelve in number, four of which are essential to life.

"The others are necessary to proper action of the race or to differentiate us from vegetative organisms.

"The pituitary gland is located in the head just between the temples and back of the root of the nose. It really is two glands. The front part of it influences the growth and proper development of the bones, the voluntary muscles and sexual apparatus.

Controls Height

"Failure of this part to function properly during youth leads to a lack of height and to a poorly developed muscular system. If it functions excessively an overgrown person results.

"The back part of the pituitary, or posterior lobe, has to do with the handling of starch, sugar and water in the body. If it fails to do its work properly right the person so affected is on fat.

"The thyroid is located in the throat. Goiter is an enlargement of the thyroid gland.

"This toxic thyroidism causes nervousness, dry skin, and a lack of pep and endurance. A slowing down of mental processes may also mark poor performances.

"The parathyroids, four in number, are about the size of a bean and are located in the back of the throat and behind the thyroid.

Relate to Emergency

"The adrenals are two in number, like the pituitary each is made up of two glands. The medulla, or inner gland, is believed to be inactive during normal life, but when some person encounters an emergency, such as fear or danger, the adrenal medulla sends an extra amount of its secretion into the blood stream. This causes a rearrangement of the blood forces so that we are better able to meet the emergency or overcome some one or something.

"The cortex is the part of the adrenal that is being experimented with in connection with cancer.

"Disturbances of certain glands may lead to a great deal of nervousness and to a great deal of sexual disturbance among women sufferers.

"The sex glands, the ovaries or testes, are probably well known to you, as you probably will be of the effects of these disturbances in women."

Serum from Adrenal Gland vs. Cancer Growths?

Years of patient research in the field of pain in hundreds of persons suffering from cancer would indicate that the work of Drs. Cutler and Pendergrass, the surgical team at the Cook County hospital in Chicago, in the California Medical Journal, may be of great importance in the cancer field, as stating: "Our demonstrations have proved to our satisfaction that malignancy can be transmitted by a serum from the adrenal glands."

The above research is merely an example of one of the many important discoveries which have recently been made in connection with the glands of internal secretion, which the physician performs in every-day practice body, and to show how the discoveries of Dr. Wheeler's renowned associates in the Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler Institute, that is future, modern practice of medicine will be based upon proper glandular treatment—is being verified.

Results Obtained Through Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler's Method of Painless Glandular Transplant Treatment Have Attracted World-Wide Attention.

The following reproduction of letter from Thomas W. Pack is an example of the marked effectiveness of the results obtained from this type of treatment.

Feb. 13, 1930

Clayton E. Wheeler, A.B., M.D.
535 Powell Street
San Francisco, California

Dear Doctor Wheeler:

It is now just 6 months since you gave me the last treatment, and as my case was such an exceptional one, that you asked me to let you know from time to time how I was getting along.

You know that when I first went to see you about taking your treatment I was in a dreadful condition all run down, nervous as I could be, could not sleep, no vitality, no appetite, and what I did eat distressed me terribly, very high blood pressure. The day before I went to you for my first treatment I had my blood pressure taken by one of the best Specialists and it was 240, and when I went to you for my second treatment it was 220.

Today my blood pressure is NORMAL. I eat anything I want with positively no discomfort, I sleep like a child, my vitality is wonderful, and I am feeling better than I have for 20 years, all due to your wonderful Gland treatment.

I met a lady a few days ago who has known me for over 25 years, and she said "What in the world have you done, You surely have found the Fountain of Youth."

These are all FACTS and I only wish that I could broadcast all of this to the whole world.

Doctor, you are privileged to use this letter and my name if by so doing it will be the means of benefiting some poor miserable sufferer as I was before you gave me your wonderful gland treatment.

With all good wishes and warmest personal regards, I am, believe me

Most cordially yours,

Thomas W. Pack

The Crime of Bodily Neglect That Robs You of Health, of Happiness, of Advancement

No man or woman ever progressed by evading facts. Facts must be seen, met, and reckoned with. Facts must be faced too often, they will lick you.

And the facts of Life, of Health, of Happiness especially demand your attention now—not tomorrow, not next week, not next year—now. Your Future starts from this minute.

And now, while you are reading, you may be committing or continuing a crime against yourself and against your family, unless you are not absolutely and positively sure that your health is at its peak, giving you full, driving energy to do your day's work well, without fatigue, happily. You are ill if you are ill, despondent, tired, physically or mentally below par. Face the facts—and overcome them!

What are these facts! They are the result of years of the most careful, scientific study on a subject that once baffled the medical world—the Function of the Ductless or Endocrine Glands.

Steinach, Kammerer, Voronoff, Schneider, and other world-inspired scientists of Europe and America brought their genius to the study of Endocrinology—and their labors were rewarded by a wealth of facts almost revolutionary in Biology and Body Chemistry.

Then came the research work of Dr. Clayton E. Wheeler, a young American scientist, former clinical instructor at Stanford University and House Surgeon at San Francisco Hospital—earnest, original, studious, daring to seek new truths, willing to sacrifice to that end, and daring to cut away from hampering traditions.

Dr. Wheeler's long study of his chosen subject—The Ductless Glands—was crowned with the birth of a new technique, a new method, and a most astounding success proved now over 17,000 times.

The fact—the simple, logical, and incontrovertible fact—is that the Ductless or Endocrine Glands control the Chemistry of the body.

The fact is that perfect health is a matter of Glandular Balance every minute of every day of your life.

The fact is that if you have any of the illnesses listed below you may be a victim of Glandular Imbalance which can react favorably to The Wheeler Method—a simple, quick, painless treatment that does not scar, cut or mar; does not incapacitate for work, and restores Nature's own way and can bring untold happiness through renewed health, more energy.

Remember—The Wheeler Method has been proved—over 17,000 times. Remember—it may be the answer to your prayer for Perfect Health and Efficiency which is your birthright.

And remember—consultation is Free. Dr. Wheeler is glad to give his time to those in ill-health—or to those far-sighted people who look ahead to preserve their energies.

CHECK OVER YOURSELF—NOW. Perhaps you can read with great profit yourself the FREE BOOKLET—logical, informative, interesting—tells what you want to know about diseases which react well to gland treatment: ANEMIA, ARTHRITIS, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, BLADDER TROUBLES, CERTAIN FORMS OF HEADACHES, DEMENTIA SENILE, DIABETES, DISEASES INCIDENTAL TO OLD AGE, HARDENING OF THE ARTERIES, HIGH BLOOD PRESSURE, EPILEPSY, EYE and EAR WEAKNESS DUE TO SENILITY, INTESTINAL DISTURBANCES, INABILITY TO CONCENTRATE, IMPAIRMENT OF MEMORY, MALNUTRITION, NERVOUSNESS, NEURASTHENIA, PSORIASIS, AGITANS, PULMONARY DISORDERS, RHEUMATISM, SCIATIC PAINS, and MANY OTHER CHRONIC AILMENTS, INCLUDING DEVITALIZATION.

CLAYTON E. WHEELER, A.B., M.D.

No charge is made by Dr. Wheeler for consultation. If you live convenient, an appointment should be made in advance by telephoning WAshington 2311.

Office hours: Daily, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m.; Monday evening 7 to 9 o'clock. Take westbound "S" car from downtown, get off on Wilshire where it crosses Wilshire and walk ½ block east to 3110 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles. San Francisco Office, 535 Powell St.

PLANES HERALD HUGE AIR SHOW

Commercial Ships Roar Out Poem to Aviation

Millions in Equipment at New York Exhibit

Broadcast from Skies on Two National Chains

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—Wings over Manhattan beat a paean of praise to American aviation today during the New York air salon at Madison Square Garden.

Flying in long columns which passed and recrossed each other over the island of Manhattan, eighty-odd planes, ranging from a giant new 32-passenger, thirty-two passenger ship to little two-seated training planes, maneuvered over the city at once.

COMMERCIAL TRIUMPH

It wasn't the army, it wasn't the navy, it was commercial aviation, the phase in which the future airport pilots are trained—the great ships, the transport elephants of the air that put on the show.

Down below them in the Garden were $1,000,000 worth of the newest planes in flying; many of them passed close with those maneuvers through the clear sky above the city.

Right along with the air argosy was a flying broadcasting station, experimental radio telephone apparatus of the Bell Laboratories, arranged for the nonce into an aerial studio.

BROADCAST FROM SKY

From this plane Capt. Eddie Rickenbacker, ranking American ace of the World War; Graham McNamee and Ted Husing described for radio audience the maneuvers of the fleet and reporters telephoned to staffs in Madison Square Garden a picture story of the show.

The broadcast was carried over the chains of both the National Broadcasting Company and the Columbia system.

It was a perfect day for the aerial maneuvers, fifty-mile visibility, not a cloud, a warm sun, and only a gentle breeze.

Betrothal of Princess and Duke Denied

SEVILLE (Spain) May 3. (AP)—The Duke of Miranda, chief of the royal household, responding to inquiries by reporters today denied that an engagement exists between Princess Beatriz and the Italian Duke of Spoleto.

The Italian Duke recently was the guest of the royal family of Spain and it had been persistently reported that the betrothal of Princess Beatriz might result.

However, in well-informed circles connected with the palace it still is suggested that the match easily might be in the making, although not yet officially decided.

RAIN MAROONS ARMY FLYERS

Eight from Wrecked Ship Wait at Fresno

Demolished Ship Stripped for Souvenirs

Six "Bail Out" When Craft Loses Propellor

FRESNO, May 3. (Exclusive)—Lieut. W. A. Maxwell and seven army enlisted men, who miraculously escaped death in a plane crash ten miles south of here yesterday, are reported still here tonight awaiting transportation to March Field at Riverside and Rockwell Field, San Diego, their home fields.

Two planes were expected from March Field today to return the stranded flyers south, but were not started because of bad weather over the Tehachapis.

What is left of the wrecked ship, since souvenir hunters got through with it, is lying where it crashed near Oleander. The wreckage will be taken back to March Field, Maxwell said.

Maxwell and Staff Sergeant J. H. Arthur of March Field, with six enlisted men from Rockwell Field, were returning to their home fields from Mather Field, Sacramento, yesterday. Fearing bad weather over the mountains, they landed at Bakersfield then started back to Sacramento. While flying over this county, a propeller blade came off and the vibration caused parts of the ship to break loose. The six enlisted men jumped in parachutes. Lieut. Maxwell and Sergt. Arthur stayed with the craft and brought it down without injury to themselves, but the ship was demolished.

WEATHER MEN TELL SECRETS

Meteorologists Mull Over Topics of Their Trade

Cotton Crop Forecasts Held Only 3 Per Cent Off

"Eye" of Hurricane Painted by Marine Observer

WASHINGTON, May 3. (Exclusive)—Weather and the boll weevil have been made to tell as early as September 1 how much cotton would be harvested in the United States during the following fall.

This new method of prediction, which involves a consideration of seventy-five variables by means of mathematical coefficients, was described here for the first time this afternoon by J. B. Kincer of the United States Weather Bureau before the American Meteorological Society.

Mr. Kincer has worked backward with weather data for the past twenty years and finds that his predictions for this period differ from the actual production by an average of only 3 per cent. He uses such information as amount of rainfall, number of rainy days, relative humidity, amount of sunshine, and average, highest and lowest temperatures.

More than a score of different codes used by ships of all nations to report weather conditions at sea to the meteorological offices of the world have been consolidated into one simplified form, it was reported by Dr. J. A. Patterson of the meteorological office at Toronto, Can. This international co-operation, the result of ten years' effort, will greatly facilitate weather study and prediction in every country.

Dr. Patterson also described plans for a year of great international polar exploration and study in 1932 and 1933. More than a score of stations will be established in the Arctic and Antarctic by nearly as many countries. They will especially observe effects of the earth's magnetism.

There is often an area of quiet atmosphere in the midst of hurricanes from which blue sky and twinkling stars can be seen overhead, while a short distance away are raging 100-mile-an-hour winds, W. E. Hurd, marine expert of the Weather Bureau, called this strange phenomenon the "eye" of the storm.

New Kind of Salts Taking Country By Storm

They Revitalize the System—Induce Youthful Activity—Keep Body in Splendid Condition—Free from Fat

It doesn't take long for Americans to wake up to a good thing—only a few months ago Kruschen Salts were introduced into this country and the welcome news of their superior goodness and swift rejuvenating power traveled so fast that at one time the supply was many carloads behind the demand.

All of which goes to prove that Americans know good salts when they take them and want their friends to benefit also.

Kruschen Salts are taken for their health building value all over the world—they are the largest selling medicinal salts in Great Britain today.

Kruschen Salts are different from other salts—Kruschen is six salts in one—the very same six salts that nature put into the human body at the beginning of creation and demands you have them there or your health won't be as good as it should be.

Unlike most salts Kruschen isn't simply a laxative—if that's all you want any old kind of salts with cost a cent will do — but is that all you want?

When you take Kruschen Salts you not only stimulate your bowels, liver and kidneys to function naturally and profitably, but you supply every internal organ, gland, nerve and fibre in the body with nature's own revitalizing and reconstructing elements.

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that lasts 4 weeks costs but $1.25 at any Owl Drug Co., Liggett Drug Store or any drug store in America—take one half a teaspoonful in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—in just a few days you will notice changes in activity and life forces begin to assert themselves.

Before the bottle is empty you'll feel years younger—eyes will brighten—step grow springlier—nerves steadier—you'll sleep sound, enjoy your meals and after a hard day's work you'll be ready for wholesome recreation—one million Americans know all this—ask your druggist.

DOUGLAS PLANS FOR DAM FIGHT

Arizona Representative Will Wage Battle in House

Every Effort to be Made for Appropriation Defeat

Sincerity of State Suit Threat Questioned at Capital

By a "Times" Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 3. (Exclusive)—Characterizing Boulder Dam as the "damnedest gold brick ever to come before Congress," Representative Douglas of Arizona declared today he will use "every honorable means" in an effort to defeat the pending appropriation of $10,660,000 to begin work on the Colorado River project.

Mr. Douglas made his statement after reading press dispatches from Phoenix stating that Arizona will file suit to prevent the building of the dam if Congress grants the initial appropriation. His was the only comment forthcoming in Washington today on the "formal notice" served by Arizona that she intends to bring suit in an attempt to block the river development. Secretary Wilbur had "nothing to say" and of the Arizona Senators, Hayden was out of the city and Ashurst said he is "leaving the matter entirely up to the Arizona Colorado River Commission."

STATE SINCERITY DOUBTED

It is not believed Representative Douglas or other objectors can hold up the appropriation which the Interior Department is requesting to get Boulder Dam actually under way, and on the other hand there is considerable doubt as to the sincerity of the Arizona move announced yesterday by Charles Ward and the State Attorney-General. It was pointed out here today that originally Arizona was going to file an injunction suit as soon as the power contracts were made, this being the formal step assertedly infringing upon her rights as a sovereign State. But the power contracts were completed and no suit by Arizona. Now the State is waiting to see whether Congress, as it most assuredly will, acts favorably on the initial appropriation for the project.

With Congress scheduled to adjourn in June, and with the Supreme Court quitting for the summer at about the same time, work on Boulder Dam probably will be well under way before a suit can be brought and receive a hearing before the high tribunal.

CAPITAL VIEWS

The feeling here is that the opposition to Boulder Dam in Arizona is now mostly political, and that after the primary and general election of this year the State will drop its obstruction tactics and threats of court action. However, this is only the Washington view and maybe the State really will go through with a legal fight.

Representative Douglas, in his statement, declared that the Federal Treasury never will be reimbursed for its $165,000,000 expenditure for Boulder Dam, that the recomendation of the Gilbert Engineering Commission for an agreement for division of water with Mexico has not been complied with and that every purpose save generation of power can be served with a $22,000,000 dam.

"I have believed beforehand and believe now," he said, "that this project is primarily for power purposes and is an entering wedge in a broad general scheme for public ownership and operation. Flood control, and a twenty-five-year supply of domestic water, could be obtained by the expenditure of not more than $22,000,000. The only logical excuse for an appropriation in excess of that is for the development of power, and there cannot be any justification for the United States constructing a gigantic power project of this kind."

Reinhardt Takes Initial Step in Film Campaign

BERLIN, May 3. (AP)—The first step toward making his dream of an "United Artists of Europe" come true was taken today by Max Reinhardt, celebrated screen-and-stage producer. He contracted with Curtis Melnitz for the production in German, French and English of a musical talking picture based upon Jacques Offenbach's "Paris Life."

Melnitz resigned recently the Berlin directorship of the United Artists' Corporation of America to head the Curtis Melnitz Film Production Corporation.

Melnitz said today, "Our company's slogan is 'European films made in Europe by European artists.'"

Officers Slay Young Bandit

KANSAS CITY, May 3. (AP)—A 19-year-old lad, who gave the name of Jimmy Callahan of Chicago, was shot and fatally wounded here late last night by one of three patrolmen who fired at him after he held up and robbed a street-car motorman.

He was wounded in the abdomen by slugs from a riot gun as he started to level a pistol at Lloyd Grimes, a patrolman.

Wealthy Widow Named in Suit

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. (AP)—Mrs. Helen J. Balis, wealthy 58-year-old widow of Santa Rosa, today was named defendant in a suit for $100,000 damages filed by John P. Kerber, 28, who asserts Mrs. Balis maliciously caused his false imprisonment last March on a charge he had swindled her of $7000 she advanced him for stock transactions.

The charge subsequently was dismissed by Superior Judge Lazarus.

TRAIN KILLS WIDOW

SAN JOSE, May 3. (AP)—Mrs. Agnes Foster of Palo Alto, a widow, was killed by a Southern Pacific train at Mountain View near here today.

FACTS OF LEADERSHIP

THIRTY years ago in a little shop in Akron I began to make tires. I put my name on them to certify that they were the best tires I knew how to make and that I was ready to back them up.

• • • •

The little shop has grown to a great factory which employs fifteen thousand workmen. Every one of these workers is a part owner of the business—every one of them is a stockholder. They have backed the quality of their product with their savings.

• • • •

From Akron we have pressed out through the world. We have plants in Los Angeles, Boston, Fall River and New Bedford. We have plants in Canada and in England. We have a plant at Singapore—in the heart of the East Indies—so that we may buy the raw rubber where it is grown. We have offices and expert buyers in every important rubber growing center in the world.

• • • •

When the British Rubber Restriction Act sought to raise the price of rubber, Firestone fought it practically alone and unaided. And, in order that this country might never again have to beg its rubber from a foreign power, Firestone planted an outpost of American life in Liberia on the west coast of Africa—the Negro Republic founded by Americans in the days of President Monroe. There we have a million acres to insure that America may always have rubber at a fair price.

• • • •

The first little shop could make a dozen tires a day. Today we can make eighty thousand a day. That is progress. We will not make a tire that is just a tire. Every tire must express all that we know about tires and its fitness for its use. That is why we have progressed.

• • • •

Such is the spirit which has taken Firestone into absolute tire leadership. Such is the spirit which maintains the leadership. Never has the leadership faltered. The record of Firestone is the record of the march of improvement in the tire industry. For Firestone brought out for automobile use:

• • • •

—The first straight side tire

—The first rubber non-skid tread

—The first commercial demountable rim

—The first patented Gum-Dipping Process

—The first balloon tire

• • • •

Each of these five inventions marked a new era in tire building. Together they made possible the safe and economical high speed motoring of today.

• • • •

An automobile is no better than its tires.

• • • •

Firestone has:

—kept ahead of the tire makers.

—kept ahead for the automobile makers.

—kept ahead for car owners in safety, comfort and economy.

• • • •

That is leadership.

The ultimate test of leadership is performance.

• • • •

—Firestone Gum-dipped Tires hold all the world's records on road and track for safety, mileage, speed and endurance.

—for ten consecutive years they have won the 500 mile Indianapolis Endurance Race.

—were on the winning cars in the Pike's Peak Race—where a slip meant death.

—were on the Studebaker car which on a board track in Atlantic City in 1928 went 30,000 miles in 26,326 minutes.

—were on the G.M.C. truck, carrying a two-ton load, that hung up the coast to coast endurance record.

—ran 71,351 miles on a Detroit taxicab, before the first tire was replaced.

—and for 10 years Firestone has sold more tires on a mileage cost basis to taxicab and bus lines than any other manufacturer and now equips the world's largest taxi fleet and world's longest bus line.

• • • •

Such are the facts of Firestone leadership.

• • • •

Each year we have learned more about tires. Each year we have put that added knowledge into our tires to give added values.

• • • •

And so we can say, with all the facts before us, that, while there are many good tires, the best is Firestone.

CHAMBER'S HEAD EXPLAINS STAND

Object of Attack on Farm Board Outlined

Government Competition in Business Rapped

Resolution Directed at Use of Public Funds

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—The stand of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States on governmental aid for agriculture was defined today by its president, William Butterworth, as "opposed to any permanent policy in the employment of public funds for the purpose of participating in business in competition with established agencies."

In a statement explaining the attitude of the chamber as expressed in its resolution advocating repeal of sections of the Agricultural Marketing Act, Butterworth said the chamber did not want to be understood as being opposed "to the interest and purposes of improving the agricultural marketing system."

AIM OF RESOLUTION

"The discussions leading up to the resolution and its intent were directed largely against one or two sections of the act," he said. "It was recognized that the balance of the act contains many constructive features of assistance to agriculture."

The resolution urged repeal of the authority of the Federal Farm Board to use Federal funds for the "purpose of participation in business in competition with established agencies." It advocated, however, continuance of the Federal Farm Board as an agency for the dissemination of information and for ascertaining and dealing with overproduction.

CONFERENCE URGED

It also recommended that the chamber call a conference of "wide representation, including farm cooperative leaders, to study and define measures of sound and effective aid to agriculture."

The resolution, adopted after Chairman Legge of the Farm Board had debated with fellow members of the chamber, brought from Legge the assertion "the chamber proposes to make the farm board impotent and adopt some more resolutions of sympathy for agriculture."

Legge said the "Farm Board's client is the farmer and we are going to continue to serve him just as the Agricultural Marketing Act intended we should—for his benefit and not the benefit of someone else."

CHINATOWNS MOURN FUNDS

Loss of $37,000 Given to Willie Lee Causes Unrest Among Orientals in Eastern Cities

CHICAGO, May 3. (Exclusive)—All the excitement that seemed to be stirring the Chinatowns of Chicago and New York into another of their tong wars has nothing to do with guns and knives and such weapons of oriental feuds, it developed today, but has something very important to do with the supposedly joint disappearance of Willie Lee and some $37,000.

The suspected disappearance of Willie and the money came to light today after police of Chicago and New York began inquiries into rumors that trouble was brewing, that Hip Sings and On Leongs were making preparations for another of their routine scraps. Prominent Chinese leaders, however, denied that any tong feud impended at the moment. In fact, the New York Chinese bosses, imbued with the eastern "contempt" of things western, suggested that any trouble pending might be found being inspired in Chicago.

COLLECTS AND GOES

Lee's job, according to reports, was to gather funds for the Mandarin Temple at 202 West Twenty-second street. He collected all right, the reports added, especially in Pittsburgh, Washington, Philadelphia and Detroit, and his funds totaled $37,000. But the temple for some reason failed to flourish and creditors demanded money. Willie didn't have it.

Yesterday he told police that Harry Lee could be blamed for some of his troubles, and added naively that Harry had threatened him. Capt. John Prendergast investigated and absolved Harry Lee.

FACES GUN CHARGE

In the meantime Frank Moy, "Mayor" of Chinatown, went to Harry's defense, not knowing that Harry had been exculpated of threatening Willie by Capt. Prendergast.

Frank made the mistake of toting a gun with him, for which he was arrested. Today Moy was arraigned before Judge McCarthy and his case continued to Tuesday.

And still, in the meantime, Willie Lee is at large and so is the $37,000 or what's left of it, according to reports.

LEGGE TO STICK ON FARM BOARD

Chairman Will Remain for Another Year

Teague Also Expected to Retain Post

Marketing Problems Not Yet Solved

WASHINGTON, May 3. (Exclusive)—Alexander Legge will continue as chairman of the Federal Farm Board for at least another year, it was learned on good authority today. His retention by President Hoover is regarded as the administration's answer to the repeated attacks made upon the board by the United States Chamber of Commerce, culminating in the resolution adopted at the chamber's annual meeting here a few days ago demanding that the Farm Relief Act be repealed and the board disbanded.

From the same reliable source, it was learned that every effort is being made to induce C. C. Teague of Santa Paula, Cal., to stay on as the Farm Board member representing fruits and vegetables, and that President Hoover confidently expects the Californian to comply.

PROBLEMS NOT SOLVED

Both Legge and Teague took their posts on the Farm Board at considerable personal sacrifice and with the distinct understanding that they would be free to step out after one year. The year for both will be up within the next couple of months. When they accepted appointment, however, it was thought that within the first year of the board's existence the farm-relief program would be well in hand, that all the major details and policies would be worked out, and the rest would be mainly a task of intelligent administration that could be intrusted to others than the pioneer members of the board.

But this has not proven the case. If anything, the Farm Board is in a more difficult position than ever. While it has formulated a definite program, it has not had sufficient time to work it out. The efficacy of the relief movement has not demonstrated itself. At the moment, despite the efforts of the board in making loans to co-operative organizations, the average price of farm products is 10 per cent below those of a year ago.

TEST APPROACHING

Under the circumstances, President Hoover does not want to disorganize the board, in which he has confidence, and is using his persuasion to get Legge, Teague and other present members to continue in the job.

The President feels strongly that Chairman Legge's continued leadership is needed for the further development of the marketing cooperative movement, especially in the approaching months when the ground work which the board has laid will be put to the test with the harvesting of this year's crops. He feels the same way about Mr. Teague, who is considered, next to Legge, the outstanding personality on the board.

It is believed no great effort on the part of the President will be required to get Legge to continue. Legge is a two-fisted man, if ever there was one, and the way he has been baited and challenged by Julius Barnes and the United States chamber probably will make him stick to the job regardless of normal personal considerations. Indeed, it is doubted that he could be forced out with anything less than a derrick until he has it out with the organized business interests which are so critical of his efforts to date.

TEAGUE'S WORK DONE

With Mr. Teague, it is somewhat a different matter. He was induced to take a place on the board only after the most exhaustive effort on the part of the President. He was "drafted," in the true sense of the term, and agreed to serve only for the one year. He is most anxious to get back to California and the management of the grape growers' and walnut growers' exchanges. Moreover, he has about completed his major objective, having worked out relief plans for the industries he primarily represents on the board.

But despite his own wishes, President Hoover is insisting that Teague remain on the board for another year and indications are the President will have his way. No less than Chairman Legge, Mr. Teague has the respect and confidence of Congress, the administration and farm organizations, and his continuance with Legge is certain to be widely approved.

Titled Woman Killed by Fall

BRIGHTON (Eng.) May 3. (Exclusive)—The mutilated body of a woman which was found jammed between two rocks at the bottom of a high cliff near this popular resort was identified this morning by Lord Haldon as that of his wife, Lady Haldon.

The aged nobleman, whose wife had disappeared Thursday morning, hurried to Brighton when he heard that an unknown woman had fallen over a cliff. He arrived on the verge of a nervous breakdown and nearly collapsed with grief when he was shown the broken body in a local morgue.

QUIET AGAIN PREVAILS AT OHIO PRISON

Conditions Near Normal; Six Hundred of Convicts Work in Yard

COLUMBUS (O.) May 3. (AP)—For the first time since the tragic Easter Monday fire when 320 convicts, locked in their cells, were killed, conditions in Ohio penitentiary today were almost normal with the Ohio National Guard in control of the situation.

More than 600 prisoners, some of whom revolted after the fire, worked in the prison yard during the day. Thirty-eight men, confined in the barbed-wire stockade pending repairs to cell blocks, refused to go to work, and these were placed in solitary confinement cells by the soldiers.

Mike Dorn, serving one to fifteen years for burglary, and who escaped during the excitement incident to the fire, was returned to the prison during the day. He was captured at Cleveland.

There were no further developments during the day on the two fire investigation reports made to Gov. Cooper by the Attorney-General and the fire marshal. It is expected that after further study of the reports, the Governor will have some additional statement to make.

Rope of Sheets Rescues Woman

SEATTLE, May 3. (AP)—The heroism of Henry Dick saved Mrs. Katherine Stewart from probable death early today, when the Richmond Inn, near Richmond Beach, burned to the ground. Mrs. Stewart had fainted in a second floor room and Dick carried the unconscious woman down a rope of bed sheets to safety.

They were co-owners of the inn, destroyed at a loss of approximately $20,000. The fire is believed to have been caused by an overheated kitchen stove.

Four Men Killed in Quarry Blast

UPTON (Ky.) May 3. (AP)—Premature explosion of liquid oxygen used in blasting a rock quarry killed four men here late today and injured a half-dozen others. Reginald D. Lanier, 28 years of age, superintendent of the oxygen products corporation plant at Isleiy, Ky., was among those who lost their lives.

The names of the others killed were given as Robert and Charles Hornback, brothers, and George McDougal, a Negro.

RIVERSIDE CELEBRATES BOYS' DAY

Japanese Festival Given Advance Observance by Nippon Athletes

RIVERSIDE, May 3. (Exclusive)—The annual Japanese Boys' Festival, which will be celebrated throughout Japan Monday, was observed here today at Mission Inn with a dozen Japanese boys and men demonstrating their prowess at archery, fencing and wrestling.

H. Satow, 60 years of age, Los Angeles business man and archery enthusiast, gave an exhibition on a thirty-yard range and presented his star pupil, Tatashi Harase, 11. Other archers on the program were H. Hosake, Tamaki Yonshikaa and S. Magano.

H. Ahita, one of Japan's outstanding fencers, was a feature attraction. He came to the United States about a year ago for an exhibition tour and plans to leave soon for Europe. Fencing and wrestling contests also were offered by K. Tyaitaki, Y. Hata and C. Koushi, all of Los Angeles.

Despite the rain a large group of American boys as well as adults witnessed the festival program, which is sponsored each year by Frank Miller, proprietor of the Inn.

SLEEP WITHOUT "DRUGS" SAYS EMINENT SPECIALIST

Former Battle Creek Sanitarium Physician Relates Amazing Flaxolyn Discovery Relieves Constipation Condition Naturally and Brings Sound, Restful Sleep by Perfecting Digestion.

Thousands of people here who formerly suffered nights of sleeplessness and days of agonising stomach distress due to constipation, now feel fit, eat with keen appetites and sleep serenely since adding Nature's own formula, Dr. Lantz's Herbal Flaxolyn.

According to the statement issued by Dr. A. W. Herr (M. D.) formerly physician at the Battle Creek Sanitarium, "Flaxolyn relieves in a natural way that dreaded condition called constipation. In many cases where autointoxication prevented sleep, the use of Flaxolyn has been the means of so toning the colon that natural sleep is now the usual thing and health has taken on a different meaning for these people."

Dr. George Starr White, of Los Angeles (M.D., LL.D., F.R.S.A., London,) prominent health writer and specialist, aroused stomach sufferers by taking an open stand in praise of Flaxolyn when he said last week "I know of no remedy that can equal Herbal Flaxolyn as a corrective—no more natural formula for 'self poisoning' due to constipation."

Dr. Benedict Lust (M.D., N.D.,) president of the American Naturopathic Association, says: "Flaxolyn is a natural formula and priceless in all digestive ills."

That is the unique feature of Flaxolyn—it is a remarkable NON-LAXATIVE—NOT A DRUG

Hundreds of other doctors and health sanatoriums all over the world have used Flaxolyn in the treatment of such symptoms as dizzy spells, liver disorders, indigestion, sick headaches, general fatigue, sleepless nights, and have already written in praise of Flaxolyn.

Don't wait. Start taking Flaxolyn today. Does not gripe, because it is natural. You will feel the tonic change at once. You will enjoy renewed vigor, a firmer grip on life.

FLAXOLYN FORMULA

Originated by Dr. Harris H. Lantz (M. D., D.O.) to fill his own needs and the needs of his patients. Flaxolyn contains valuable, approved medicaments—including Bile Salts, Vitamine extracts and the following herbs:

1. Baked Flaxseed—Relaxes congestion; acts as astringent.
2. Sarsaparilla Roots—Contains an effective blood remedy.
3. Alfalfa Buchu Leaves—Act on kidneys and bladder.
4. Jamaica Ginger Roots—Quickens flow of vital digestive juices.
5. Dandelion Roots—Act on the intestinal canal.
6. Cardamom Seeds—Act on the stomach lining. Appetite tonic.
7. Chiamg Bitterb—Invigorates the stomach.
8. Spanish Licorice Roots—Remove mucus that may be clogging and poisoning the digestive organs.
9. Oulver Roots—Help to stimulate natural bile-flow.
10. Gentian Roots—Create a keener appetite.
11. Belgian Valerian Roots—Help to tone the nerves and induce the restful sleep of health.
12. California Bark—Cleans the colon; removes foreign matter from intestines.

Dr. Ovidio Marandino, stomach specialist of Florence, Italy, says: "After putting Flaxolyn to the test, I recommend it to my patients, old or young."

Prof. Dr. Remy Hirsh, great German specialist, says: "In correcting faulty elimination, Flaxolyn gives a source of new strength, aids complexion."

Dr. Benedict Lust, founder of the American School of Naturopathy, writes: "I recommend Flaxolyn heartily as an aid to those ailing, due to conditions caused by constipation."

STUDENTS CHEVROLET ESSAY CONTEST

CHEVROLET

TO THE prize winners announced herewith, the Chevrolet Dealers of Southern California extend their congratulations. And to every one of the contestants their sincerest thanks, and their regrets that there could not have been an award for every essay. ¶ The boys and girls of today are exacting users of motor cars... their judgments are keen... their standards those of today and tomorrow. Their eyes are toward the future. The sincere good words for Chevrolet... out of their own experience... that thousands of the entrants in this contest had to say, were the most satisfying things that any motor car dealer could wish to hear about his car.

BERNARD N. MOORE, STUDENT AT CAL. INSTITUTE OF TECHNOLOGY AT PASADENA, WINS IN COLLEGE DIVISION

Bernard N. Moore, of 1026 West 20th Street, Los Angeles, student at the California Institute of Technology at Pasadena, is the winner of the Chevrolet Collegiate Sport Roadster in the College Division. His father, M. S. Moore, is head of the Chemistry Department at Polytechnic High School, from which young Moore graduated. He won a scholarship in a contest given by the American Chemists Society and since then has been a star student at California Institute of Technology at Pasadena. His uncle, Dr. E. C. Moore, is director of the University of California at Los Angeles. Young Moore is a member of the Tau Beta Pi, honorary engineering society.

A SON SPEAKS TO HIS FATHER

"Dad, I want a new Chevrolet. It's a six that gives the mileage of a four. It pulls at low speeds as well as high and you can idle her down to a few miles an hour and then step on her and she won't buck. She's smooth and quiet and that means long life. The clutch works like velvet and the rear end is in a honey-type one-piece housing. It holds the curves and doesn't sway because there are four semi-elliptic springs. The brakes are big and won't squeak.

"The bodies are as good as the rest of the car. They are made by Fisher of metal and wood construction that is stronger than steel or wood alone. They don't drum and they don't get squeaky. They have quality upholstery, the seat fits your back, and if you are tall or short all you have to do to adjust the seat is to turn a knob.

"And the G.M.A.C. rates from out the small difference in price between this car and any four. General Motors, the world's largest maker of automobiles, has all its engineering and research facilities back of the car. And I've driven, see, dad."

"Why buy a four when a six is so cheap?"

EVERETT SMITH, AGED 14, STUDENT AT JACOB A. RIIS HIGH SCHOOL WINS ROADSTER WITH ESSAY SHOWING ORIGINALITY

Everett Smith, aged 14, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Smith, of 4271 East 61st Street, Los Angeles, and a student in the 8-A class of the Jacob A. Riis High School, winner of the Chevrolet Collegiate Sport Roadster in the High School Division, is an "average boy," according to Homer K. Watson, principal of the school. He studies diligently and plays hard. He is one of the star soccer players on his high school team.

Everett's essay follows:

"Faster—Smoother—Better." To me those words were a challenge—a challenge to prove or disprove their accuracy. "They may be true," I thought, "then again, they may be 'just another slogan'." If the slogan had been "Beauty—Comfort—Economy," it would have gone unchallenged, for these qualities were very evident in the New Chevrolet Six. But "Faster—Smoother—Better" required investigation.

So I asked a garage mechanic about it. His enthusiasm was remarkable and resulted in a long trip with him in his New Chevrolet Six the following Sunday. We traveled all kinds of roads, and I was surprised with the quiet, smooth operation and the entire absence of vibration at all speeds. I was pleased with the smooth, quick stops we made when necessary, and the quick pick-up that got us through the densest traffic with the utmost speed. Before the day's end I knew every reason for the New Chevrolet's remarkable performance, which space does not allow mentioning here. Chevrolet would be popular at a much higher price, but I am glad that its cost permits the multitude to enjoy The Greatest Chevrolet in Chevrolet History—a six in the price range of the four.

LEARNED TO READ AND WRITE SINCE LAST SEPTEMBER—GERARD LAUB'S ESSAY WINS IN GRAMMAR SCHOOL CLASS

Gerard Laub, aged 11, son of Mr. and Mrs. G. M. Laub, of 342 West 51st Street, Los Angeles, student in the Adjustment Class at Main Street Grammar School, submitted the winning essay in the Grammar School Division.

Gerard, aged 11, has learned to read and write since last September. His father, a worker in the oil industry, moved to Berner's, Dutch East Indies, five years ago, when Gerard was a little tot of 6 years. They stayed in the foreign land five years, returning to Los Angeles last year. Gerard started school last September. He was put in the Adjustment Class at the Main Street Grammar School. There he has shown unusual ability and industry, according to Miss Grace E. Finney, principal of the school. He entered the essay in the Students' Chevrolet Essay contest without the knowledge of his teachers or parents—writing his ideas in his own hand. The judges chose the brief essay for its boyish simplicity and sincerity, as well as the thought embodied in it.

Here is the prize winning essay:

My daddy's car is a Chevrolet Six and we like it because it is so comfortable and warm and lots of fun for us when school is out. I'm only a small boy and having lived in a foreign country half of my life and all of us riding a bicycle, we are all pleased to possess a luxurious Chevrolet.

I can't say much about its "innards," as the seafaring folk say, but my daddy has had his a long time and we go over mountains and desert and have had no trouble.

The motor runs so quietly that we sometimes think it is stopped, but we go merrily along.

STATEMENT OF JUDGES

The Chevrolet Dealers of Southern California turned over to us for judging the thousands of essays submitted in the Students' Chevrolet Essay Contest by students in colleges, high schools and grammar schools in Southern California. The task of judging these essays was not easy—though it was pleasant, because of the uniformly high quality of most of the papers submitted.

In all cases, originality of thought and expression governed our decisions. We were looking for essays telling what the students thought of the Chevrolet motor car in their own way. We read carefully all the papers submitted and were surprised by the great number of original and thoughtful papers submitted. Many times, the decision was a very close one—but after ample consideration, we were able to arrive at unanimous awards as represented in the list submitted herewith.

JAMESON FACES LOBBY INQUIRY

Large Dry Contributor to Testify Tuesday

Bishop Cannon Also Will be Put on Stand

Charges by Leader of Wets Cause of Action

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—An investigation of funds contributed by E. C. Jameson, New York capitalist, to Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Southern Methodist Church for the 1928 anti-Smith campaign in Virginia was determined upon today by the Senate lobby committee.

The committee directed Jameson to appear next Tuesday for questioning concerning the contributions. It took this action after Representative Tinkham, Republican, Massachusetts, had charged that $65,300 was contributed, but only $17,000 accounted for.

CANNON SILENT

Cannon, who was chairman of the Virginia anti-Smith committee during the 1928 Presidential campaign, will be called later. He said he had no comment to make at present.

Jameson was described by Tinkham in his testimony before the lobby committee as the largest single contributor to the Hoover campaign. Tinkham said reports showed $172,000 had been donated by Jameson.

The Massachusetts Representative, who is an outspoken wet, added that Cannon had explained he acted as banker for the Virginia committee, advancing it his personal funds when necessary and being repaid when funds were available.

McBRIDE CALLED

After questioning Jameson, the committee will adjourn until Thursday when F. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League, will testify. The adjournment will be taken at the request of Senator Blaine, Republican, Wisconsin, the only wet member of the committee, who will be unable to be present Wednesday.

Chairman Caraway said the committee had been given access to the league's records at its Washington offices and that if the desired information was not obtained there it will be secured from the national headquarters at Westerville, O.

Other dry organizations will be investigated later, including the Methodist Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, the Federal Council of Churches and the Southern Methodist Board of Temperance and Social Service, of which Bishop Cannon is chairman.

NEW WILLIAM WALKER LINKED WITH NICARAGUA

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. (Exclusive)—According to a radio dispatch from the War Department received at Maj.-Gen. John L. Hines's headquarters at the Presidio of San Francisco, William Walker again operates in Nicaragua. Some seventy-five years have passed since the name of William Walker, famous American filibuster, figured prominently in the news in Nicaragua. War, bloodshed and revolution might well have been the headlines of the news items connected with that William Walker, who was born in Tennessee in 1824 and shot at Trujillo seventy years ago.

Today another William Walker of West Pittson, Pa., operates in Nicaragua. He is an agent of progress. War and revolution are in no way associated with his visit. This William Walker is a civilian employee of the Army Engineers and is an expert diamond setter and diamond drill operator. He will superintend the operations of two diamond core drilling outfits which were recently purchased and forwarded to Maj. Dan I. Sultan of Oxford, Miss., officer in charge of a Nicaragua canal survey to make borings in the exploration of possible dam and lock sites along the route of the proposed Nicaraguan Canal.

HIP-SLAPPING QUIZ STARTED

Inquiry Results from Liner Bremen Incident

Customs Men Deny Practice Had Been Resorted To

Ship Officials Declare There Were No Wild Parties

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—Reported hip-slapping of visitors on the North German Lloyd liner Bremen by customs men in search of liquor, a practice forbidden by Treasury Department order, was under investigation both here and in Washington today, despite denials from both a customs man and a line official that there had been no such search.

Reports of the hip-slapping, which was ordered stopped some time ago by Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Seymour J. Lowman, were published in morning newspapers and inquiries were begun at once.

ORDER STILL IN EFFECT

The surveyor and the assistant collector of the port of New York said that so far as they knew the Lowman order was still in effect, and that they would question customs men on duty when the Bremen sailed last night. In Washington another investigation was begun by the Treasury Department to determine if visitors actually had been subjected to any improper official attentions.

The first customs man questioned was John Cronin, roundsman at the Brooklyn pier from which the Bremen sailed. He said he and his two assistants had confined all their efforts to seeing that there was no sale or transfer of liquor aboard, and that no passengers or visitors had been searched.

WILD PARTIES DENIED

This statement was corroborated by H. Schuengel, resident director of the line, who was present at the sailing and described it as unusually quiet and orderly. He said visitors were not numerous and that so far as he knew none was searched. A few packages visitors carried from the ship to the pier were ordered opened, he said, in accordance with the usual custom, but he had neither seen nor been told of any instance of personal search.

Schuengel said that there had been no "wild parties" nor any sort of undue hilarity on the Bremen to attract unusual attention from the customs men and that no complaints were made to the line by anyone who had been on the ship.

BILLS TO CURB JUDGES' WHIMS

New Measures in Committee Supersede Jones Law

Conditional Penalties Set Without Variation

Gallon of Liquor Placed in Misdemeanor Class

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—The authority given Federal judges under the Jones Act to discriminate between casual and habitual violators of the prohibition law is eliminated and misdemeanor offenses with maximum penalties fixed under a bill introduced today by Representative Stobbs, Republican, Massachusetts.

The measure provides that the manufacture, sale or transportation of a gallon or less of intoxicating liquor constitutes misdemeanor unless the accused is a habitual violator. The maximum penalty is a fine of $500, six months imprisonment or both.

FIVE-AND-TEN SUBSTITUTE

Representative Stobbs introduced the bill as a substitute for a measure being considered by the House Judiciary Committee which has been objected to by Atty.-Gen. Mitchell. It is to be considered on Tuesday by the committee, of which Stobbs is a member, along with the law enforcement commission's proposals to strengthen the dry laws and relieve Federal court congestion.

The purpose of the bill, Stobbs said, is to prevent the practice of some Federal judges in imposing heavy penalties on casual violators.

"Under the Jones law every violator is subjected to a felony charge," Stobbs said. "Judges have been known to send a man to prison for two years for selling two drinks of liquor. A man with a flask may be sent to prison as long as a man with a large quantity of liquor. On the other hand, this bill requires judges who are inclined to be too lenient to impose heavy penalties on habitual violators."

Stobbs introduced another bill to define the manufacture, sale or transportation of a gallon of liquor as a misdemeanor under the Volstead Act. This measure, he said, will have to be enacted in event the Law Enforcement Commission's measure to authorize juryless trials before United States commissioners is approved.

DRY WANTS ACTION

Representative Sparks, Republican, Kansas, a dry member of the House Judiciary Committee, said he will insist the group take action on the bills to repeal the Eighteenth Amendment, on which prolonged hearings were held. He said he is confident the measures will be adversely reported by the committee, which is predominantly dry.

At the same time Representative La Guardia, Republican, New York, a wet, petitioned the House to discharge the Judiciary Committee from considering the Dyer bill to legalize 2.75 per cent beer. It requires 218 signatures, a majority of the House, to effect this.

PACIFIC TRAVEL TRIPLES DURING PAST TEN YEARS

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive) Twenty years ago "going abroad" meant going to Europe when the American spoke of traveling. Only an occasional passenger ship took any other route, and it usually bore passengers bent on business rather than pleasure. But today's travel tendencies make another story.

No fewer than eight lines are now running passenger vessels to Pacific and Asiatic ports, notes Roger Shaw, writing in The Golden Book for May. These have more than tripled the accommodations offered for travel in the Pacific since the war. And, not illogically, many habitual travelers who have wearied of the European scene are now finding new vistas to excite the eye in Australia, New Zealand, Hawaii, the Philippines and other Pacific islands, in China, India and the west coast ports of South America.

One line has established a cruise of 24,000 miles, or approximately the distance around the world, in which the liner never leaves the Pacific. Another circumnavigates South America, a distance of 17,462 miles in seventy-one days, beginning and ending its cruise at Los Angeles. The regular routes between the United States and Hawaii, Japan and the Chinese ports are served today by vessels which, while smaller than the greatest Atlantic liners, are their equals in every other respect.

AIR LINES GET MAIL RENEWALS

Certificates Filed With Five Major Operators by Postmaster-General

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—Postmaster-General Brown today awarded certificates of renewal of contracts with the operators of five main artery air-mail routes whose present contracts with the department expire on Monday.

At the same time, acting under the new Air Mail Act, the Postmaster-General revised the rates of pay for those five lines. The certificates will run until April 5, 1936, and the new rates will be effective until December 31, next.

The routes and operators include:

No. 3—Chicago to Fort Worth and Dallas, Tex., and return, National Air Transport.

No. 4—Salt Lake City, Utah via Las Vegas, Nev., to Los Angeles, and return, Western Air Express.

No. 5—Salt Lake City via Boise, Idaho, to Pasco, Wash., and return, Walter E. Varney.

At the same time the Postmaster-General announced that the service on Route No. 4 has been extended from Los Angeles to San Diego and on Route 5 from Pasco, Wash., to Spokane, Portland and Seattle.

'PHONE' SALESMEN AT WORK

Sale of Stock Over Telephone Revived in Los Angeles Again; Practice Considered Unethical

BY EARLE E. CROWE

In the wake of the stock market's revival has come a renewal of operations by telephone stock salesmen. Promoters interested in the distribution of the cheaper grade of securities are reported to have lately imported a horde of experts in the telephone racket, who now are operating from "boiler rooms" in the Spring-street financial district.

This invasion explains the mysterious telephone calls received by residents throughout the city. Using the telephone book, the workers in the "boiler rooms" deliver a canned sales talk that usually results in a considerable percentage of transactions among people unfamiliar with the stock market. The telephone racket is considered unethical by reputable brokers and should be regarded with suspicion by prospective security buyers.

PROFITS PROMISED

Sometimes the telephone salesman attempts to sell his invisible client a well-known listed security on the strength of inside information and the promise of a quick rise. Messengers call for the payment in cash, a fictitious confirmation is given, but the hopeful investor never does locate the broker or the stock. This vicious type of fraud in the sale of securities is difficult to check.

Switching investors from good stocks to bad is an old trick of the telephone salesman. Honest brokers are careful in recommending a switch in investments and always urge full and careful investigation of available facts before urging the investor to act. But the professional telephone salesman attemps in one interview to sow the seeds of doubt in the investor's mind about his own security, and unload an untried or worthless stock in exchange.

Recent return of professional "switchers" to the eastern markets has prompted the National Better Business Bureau to issue this warning:

WARNING GIVEN

"The dishonest 'switcher's' method is to deride the value and future prospect of your stock. He may tell you your stock is now worthless or that it will shortly tumble in value. He gives various reasons in support of his contention. Yet he offers to take your 'bad' investment off your hands, and absorb the 'loss' himself, if you will exchange it for the particular issue which he recommends. He urges immediate action and endeavors to clinch the switch at one interview.

To avoid losses at the hands of these operators, the National Better Business Bureau suggests investors observe the following rules.

(1.) Investigate the reliability of the salesman and the house he represents.

(2.) Investigate the security offered you in exchange.

(3.) Has the company a successful record?

(4.) Has the security a good earnings record?

(5.) Has the security sound future prospects?

(6.) Has the security a quick resale market?

(7.) Has the security a loan value at your bank?

(8.) Has the security a fair market price?

Sheet and Tube Fight Develops on Wider Front

YOUNGSTOWN (O.) May 3. (AP) Officials of Youngstown Sheet and Tube Company said today their action in suspending from transfer all stocks whose holders demanded cash in connection with the company's pending merger with Bethlehem Steel Corporation will mean that such stock is prohibited from voting and also from drawing dividends.

Observers saw two possibilities if this statement holds good. One is that at a meeting of directors called for Monday directors representing the Cyrus E. Eaton interests may be ousted. Eaton is leader of the antimerger forces. At a recent directors' meeting four members, including Eaton himself, were elected to represent his interests.

The other question is the ability or willingness of merger opponents to continue a long legal battle while millions of dollars' worth of their stock is drawing no income from dividends.

Local Exchange Trading Mounts

Showing a substantial increase in the volume of trading for the third consecutive month, the California Stock Exchange yesterday reported that the volume for the month of April was 220,021 shares with a total market value of $1,732,866.47 as compared with 191,826 shares valued at $1,386,327.25 in March and 100,631 shares valued at $616,725.96 in February. The combined total of trading from the opening day, January 15, last, to the 1st inst., was 545,114 shares with a total market value of $3,877,105.75.

The record day on the exchange was April 30, last, when the volume was 20,963 shares with a market value of $183,985.45.

BROKERS SCAN MARKET SKY

Los Angeles Dealers Review Reaction and Voice Opinions as to Future Trend

How brokers of Los Angeles regard the action of the stock market in the past week, together with their views as to the future course of security prices, is summarized in the following opinions:

After backing and filling for several days selling became general in the latter part of the week, giving an appearance that real liquidation was under way. It is now apparent that gains in the market since the first of the year have considerably outrun actual business improvement, making some readjustment necessary. It is still too early to predict whether this correction has gone far enough and our inclination would be to watch from the sidelines what is going on until the course of development is a little more clearly outlined.—John O. Knight, Los Angeles Investment Securities Company.

Calling of margins over the week-end will doubtless result in considerable distressed selling on Monday, the 5th inst., and will probably result in lower prices, but the decline has now reached a point where strong banking support is necessary and will probably be extended. We doubt if the downward movement at this particular time will extend very much below the prices which will be recorded tomorrow. Perhaps the most important financial program on the present horizon will be a flotation of the "reparation bonds," and any unusual market decline which would bring in its trend an unfavorable buyer's psychology would militate against a successful distribution of these bonds, and, as a consequence, it seems reasonable to assume that strong measures will shortly be taken to prevent much further liquidation in the stock market. At the same time, a quiet market with an absence of unrestrained pool activities would exactly suit the picture desired by international bankers, and this end has been reached by the extensive declines of the past two weeks.—Franklin H. Donnell, Jones, Hubbard & Donnell.

As in November, we regard the early days of the coming week an excellent time for the shrewd investor and speculator to purchase high-grade securities, representing equities in industries that are bound to progress along with the growth of the United States.—C. C. Streeter, C. C. Streeter & Company.

Selling late Friday and at the opening Saturday resembled panicky liquidation by frightened holders who thought they saw in the abrupt decline in prices the approach of a condition which might resemble that of last fall. In our opinion, such an attitude is wholly erroneous. There may be and undoubtedly are a substantial number of stocks whose earnings positions and near term outlook do not entitle them to purchase consideration, but, on the other hand, in the market situation like this we would have no hesitancy in buying the strong units among the food, amusement and oil divisions of the market.—Norman B. Courteney, E. A. Pierce & Co.

Failure of business to recover as rapidly as had been anticipated, combined with continued weakness in commodity prices, finally exerted their effect upon the market. The too rapid recovery of stocks and the continued effort of bulls to hang on to their stocks at inflated prices caused a sharp break instead of an orderly reaction in the market, bringing out panicky selling and carrying stocks to levels which are not really justified. This indicates lower levels, but the wise investor will take advantage of this situation and make long commitments in those selective issues where the price is justified by earnings.—Fred F. Schrader, Dean, Witter & Co.

Two good signs—odd-lot houses large buyers of stocks on balance and an increase of 13 per cent in construction contracts in April as compared with March. Rails showed good resistance to the general downward trend.—J. D. Kennedy, H. J. Barneson & Co.

The sharp reaction at the close of last week should bring out a considerable volume of forced liquidation at the opening of Monday's session, to be followed with an upward turn in price levels as result of short covering late Monday and Tuesday. Following that, the market may be expected to assume an irregular trend during a period of accumulation for several weeks. Although there are decided bargains in the list, other stocks have failed to complete the technical correction that appears necessary, and we would make trading commitments with only the greatest caution. Purchases of the better issues can now be made on any reactions, however, for good profit later in the year.—Wilcox Drake, Wilcox, Drake & Co.

In a market such as we are witnessing at the present time it is neither advisable to attempt to guess the bottom nor to trade with an idea of calling the turn. With late tape trading conditions prevailing, trading profits can be wiped out instantaneously and traders may be whipsawed back and forth without any control whatsoever over their accounts. We would not be inclined to re-enter the market until such a time as an orderly structure is witnessed and until stocks are able to show gains and hold the same against unfavorable developments.—Frank F. Hargear, Sutro & Co.

The market during the latter sessions of the past week experienced the most drastic shakeout since the collapse of last fall. A corrective action was inevitable and long past due. Its severity was accentuated by the fact of its delay in arrival. Much deflation has been accomplished in a very short period of time. It is to be expected that the next few days will see the market on a much more firm foundation for a steady normal improvement. We expect to see the major oil stocks reflecting the improved outlook for the industry. We feel that such stocks may be confidently bought at current levels and on any further recessions with a reasonable assurance of a comparatively early profit.—Frank L. Gardner, Banks, Huntley & Co.

FEATURES OF WEEK ON MART TOLD

Sharp Break in Stocks and Easing of Credit Conditions Lead

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—The cumulative effect of unfavorable earnings statements, drooping commodity prices and a decline in share quotations since early April overflowed late this week into a powerful wave of liquidation on the stock markets.

Prices melted away rapidly on Friday and again today as many professional operators turned decidedly bearish and pools liquidated holdings. The result was that several leading shares on the New York Stock Exchange made some of the widest declines since early last December.

The favorable turn in world credit, based on the rate reductions by the banks of England and France and the New York Federal Reserve Bank, found the stock market willing to admit it had painted too rosy a picture of current business conditions. The steps toward easier money were seen as an indication that all was not yet right with industry and that although the cheapening of credit would hasten recovery, it might be well to admit the improvement had been gradual.

The week, however, did not lack bright spots. Most important was the lowering of the central bank rates, which resulted immediately in 3 per cent call money in New York and a marked easing in time accomodations. Bonds, which had been laboring under the weight of new financing, picked up rather decisively. This in itself was encouraging, for a strong bond market is regarded as a fundamental requisite of business recovery. Furthermore, the success of the German reparations loan depends upon the strength of that market, and there is a general desire in international banking circles for an oversubscription to the issue.

Ticker Tales Heard in Wall Street Rounds

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive) Considerable pressure was applied to Radio Corporation of America again today and the stock yielded almost 10 points to 46. This compares with a high of over 60 established a little more than a week ago. Persistent buying was going on in Radio prior to passing of control in the market to the operators for the decline. Radio still has some distance to travel before it touches the so-called panic low. There are many who feel that when the market again turns upward Radio will be in the foreground.

It is understood that earnings of Loew's, Inc., so far since beginning of the current quarter have been running ahead of the same time a year ago. In view of remarkable earnings in the first six months and with a continuance of present favorable operations there is every reason to expect a showing by Loew's Inc., for the fiscal year to end August 31, next, substantially in excess of the $15,000,000 estimate made by an official last November.

First-quarter earnings of United Biscuit Company of America showed the largest proportionate gain in earnings over the corresponding period of 1929 of all reporting food companies and accordingly seems headed for another year of record profits. The company has enjoyed increased earnings in each year since its establishment in 1926. It is reliably estimated that 1930 earnings should amount to between $5 and $5.50 a share on 484,438 shares of common stock outstanding.

Entrance of Bancamerica-Blair interests into affairs of General Foods should be generally regarded as a constructive development. It is pointed out that the stock was of one engaged in an important and growing industry which had been somewhat neglected by investment trusts. Under its present management an extensive expansion progam has been followed, resulting in a greater diversification of its lines through the acquisition of companies making and selling well-known trademarked brands of foods.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—Relatively easy Liverpool cables, reports of favorable weather for the progress of the crop, and weakness in the stock market seemed responsible for declines in cotton here today. The demand for old crop positions was less active than recently, while there was considerable switching, realizing or liquidation and some southern selling of new crop months. May contracts sold off to 14.12 and the new October to 14.20, with the close barely steady at net declines of 13 to 20 points.

WHEAT SITUATION BEARISH

Prospect of Huge Carryover Both in United States and Canada Viewed as Discouraging

BY JOHN F. SINCLAIR

[Copyright, 1930, by the North American Newspaper Alliance]

NEW YORK, May 3.—To say that wheat authorities in both the United States and Canada are doing some tall thinking these days is to utter a truism.

May wheat $1 a bushel in Chicago! Pretty bad, pretty bad! But maybe prices will change and the carryover will save the situation, think some.

Let's take the Canadian situation first. The Dominion Bureau of Statistics says that Canada will have a carryover on August 1 of 115,000,000 bushels, as against 104,000,000 bushels in 1929.

But this does not, as one observer points out, take care of the amount of Canada's wheat in storage in the United States. This, if added, would increase Canada's carryover from 20,000,000 to 25,000,000 bushels. So to get it down to 115,000,000, Canada must export between April 1 and July 31 at least as much as she exported last year. Not much encouragement in this.

What of the United States? The Department of Agriculture figures show 280,000,000 bushels of wheat available in the country for export from April 1 to June 30 or for carryover.

"Unless the United States exports much faster than a year ago, the supply on hand July 1, 1930, will be greater than that of last year, which approximated 340,000,000 bushels," says the Wall Street Journal. Not a very rosy picture, either.

Of course, between now and harvest time, Argentina and Australia will be pretty much out of the market, so Europe is expected to turn to North America for her supply.

But wait. Figures show that from August 1, 1929, to the end of last week, the world exports of wheat were 451,000,000 bushels, against 697,000,000 a year ago and 491,000,000 two years ago.

Reading these figures, one might expect wheat exports to be smaller this year than last year and the American carryover proportionately larger.

The one favorable factor from the American and Canadian points of view, which are practically one, seems to be that Argentina and Australia, particularly Argentina, will have poorer crops this year because of drought.

So the disaster of one nation may turn out to be the good fortune of another—in wheat raising.

Sugar prices have reached new low levels. Willett & Gray, authoritative sugar statisticians since 1890, announce that on Wednesday raw sold at 3.30 cents a pound, while the July position in the future market dipped to 1.53 cents—prices slightly below the levels reached in 1902, just twenty-eight years ago.

Why is sugar dropping? The free marketing in sugar, which has been in effect since the abolition of the Cuban single selling agency two or three weeks ago, has doubtless been an important contributing cause.

"What we need right now, in my opinion, instead of two-score or more refineries, all competing and overlapping each other, is about four or five strong well-organized refineries supplying the nation," said Rudolph Spreckels, in discussing sugar prices the other day.

But this "sweet" dream is far from realization, although such a move has been under way for some time.

CHAIN STORE SALES IN SHARP INCREASE

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive) April sales of Edison Brothers Stores, Inc., totaled $501,153, a gain of 68.9 per cent over the same month last year while the sales for the first four months of this year amounted to $1,405,237, an increase of 29.4 per cent over the same period last year.

Cotton Outlook in Central Belt Best for Years

MEMPHIS, May 3. (Exclusive)—Showers worth millions of dollars to farmers and especially cotton growers, began falling throughout Arkansas and parts of Louisiana, with great promise of badly needed rains in Mississippi, Tennessee and Alabama to give the cotton crop one of its most auspicious beginnings in the valley in a decade.

With unreduced acreage, lower fertilizer prices, abundance of good seed, excellent and early seed beds, and cheap labor, with the possibility of less weevil damage, early at least, prospects at this time point to a big crop in this section of the belt, despite efforts of State agricultural colleges, bankers, etc., to obtain reduction.

Planting in the delta, on both sides of the Mississippi river, as far north as Clarksdale, Miss., is from 40 to 60 per cent completed, but only a small portion has come up because of dry weather. Farther north, planting is about 20 or 25 per cent completed, but with rainfall this week-end, followed by clear weather for a day or two, planting would take on a spurt that would permit the crop to come to a stand at the earliest date in a long time.

April Building Contracts Gain

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive) April construction contracts awarded in the metropolitan area of New York aggregated $101,051,700, according to F. W. Dodge Corporation. This was 13 per cent greater than the March total of $89,749,700. The total for April last year was $153,113,400.

Since the first of the year contracts for building and engineering projects let in the metropolitan area of New York have amounted to $336,094,300 as against $400,382,100 a year ago.

STOCKS TUMBLE IN SALES FLOOD

Turnover Sets New Mark for Saturday Session

Scores of Issues Lose from Five to 18 Points

Slump Laid to Petering Out of Trade Optimism

NEW YORK, May 3. (AP)—The stock ticker recorded fresh triumphs for the bears today in a tumultuous two-hour session that broke all volume records for a Saturday and that saw net declines of 5 to 18 points in scores of leading issues.

In general, the pattern of the market resembled Friday's. There was heavy liquidation at the opening as blocks of 5000 to 30,000 shares, representing a large bundle of overnight selling orders, were dumped. A ghost of a rally appeared after the first outburst had been assuaged, but then the market staggered downward under the burden of another load of last-minute sales. Transactions in the final thirty minutes reached the enormous total of 1,627,900 shares, bringing the day's business to 4,867,500 shares, the largest for a two-hour day in the market's history. An hour and fifty-six minutes after the close of the session the ticker tape printed the last sale.

The character of the selling likewise differed little from yesterday's. It was a repetition of the story of weakened margin accounts, persistent short selling by powerful operators and liquidation by pools whose holdings of stocks had been only moderately diminished since the market reached its 1930 peak early in April. And once more there was virtually no covering at the close.

So much action was crowded into the short space of two hours that the movement seemed at times to be assuming more substantial proportions than it actually attained. The price index for ninety stocks lost 5.8 points, exactly the extent of the Friday loss, and the individual groups—rails, industrials and utilities—recorded changes closely approximating those of the previous session.

Whatever the immediate impetus to the break, it was generally agreed that the basic cause was the realization that speculative activity early in the year had been following the will-o'-the-wisp, taking broad liberties with the recuperative powers of commerce and industry. First-quarter earnings statements, particularly those of the railroad companies, failed to support excessive optimism and the bullish estimates heard in February had to be revised to conform with the cold figures of April.

Many high-grade investment shares were hard hit. United States Steel, General Electric, American Telephone, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Eastman Kodak and Detroit Edison, among others, lost from 5 to 6 points, while Westinghouse tumbled 12 7-8 under the pressure of the late selling. The day's largest net loss was in Auburn Auto, off 17 7-8. Vanadium Steel dropped 16 3-4, Radio and J. I. Case 15, Columbia Gas and Electric 5, Paramount 8, Du Pont 5, Public Service of New Jersey 6¼ and Standard Gas and Electric 7.

Foreign exchanges were dull, with the French franc easing.

NEW YORK BOND PRICES

NEW YORK, May 3.—(AP)—Slight price recessions occurred in dull Saturday trading in bonds today, sales, however, were the second largest for a two-hour day of the year, due principally to the heavy selling of the most active speculative issues.

Among the high-grade investment items there was considerable activity in the rail group and in a select list of utility and industrial bonds. United States governments were dull. Foreign bonds were firm, with several good gains recorded.

In sympathy with the stock market movement Warner Brothers' Pictures 6s touched a new low for the year at 104½. American Telephone 4½s lost 4¼ points on a large turnover.

There was a mixed movement in the rail group. Chicago and Alton 3½s certificates rose 2¼ to a high for the year at 70¼ as did Illinois Central Omaha sinking funds, adding 1¼ to 77.

Oils were popular among the industrials. Phillips Petroleum 5½s rounded its high of the year at 96. Sinclair Consolidated Oil 7½s and Humble Oil Refining 5s receded slightly. Standard of New Jersey 5s and Standard of New York 4½s rose ½ of a point each.

There was an unusually light market in United States governments. Liberty fourth 4¼s sold at 102.

The quotations represent sales of bonds (in thousands of dollars) and the high, low and closing prices in order given. Ex-rights (transactions in stocks dealt in without the same) are the low, and both low and close when same as high.

CATTLE—Receipts several hundred larger than last week met with a slow demand and declines were effected in all departments. Steers were largely 25@50c lower, while cows were steady to 25c lower, the dairy types showing the least changes. Bulls were fully 25c lower. Bulk of receipts were from California points, with a few loads from intermountain and Arizona sections. Grass cattle did not show much increase in numbers but such stock is expected in larger numbers with a corresponding decline in feed lot and supplementary fed cattle.

Two loads of 1430 to 1109-pound intermountain steers early in the week made 11.00@11.25 with bulk of better grade 947 to 1186-pound California and intermountain steers going at 11.00@11.50. A load of Arizona steers scored 10.60 with 720 to 837-pound Mexican steers at 10.00@10.35 early. Several lots of Mexicans on late days brought 9.25@9.75 with some very light weight expected to sell late around 9.00 or below.

A load of 782-pound heifers made 9.85 with other rather plain kinds at 9.00@9.50 and low grades down to 8.00 and below. Two loads of heifers going cashed at 9.25@9.35 with a few choice weight cows at $ 8.50@9.00. Bulk of medium to low grade cows, mostly California, brought 8.35@8.75 with common to medium kinds numerous at 7.50@8.00. Low cutters and cutters turned mostly at 6.75@7.50 with small lots of strong weight cutters at 8.00. A few good butcher bulls made 9.00@9.25 with bulk medium bulls at 8.75@9.15 and cutter types down to 8.00.

CALVES—After last week's decline, receipts fell off and prices held about steady with very few standing at 10.50@11.00. Top paid for a load of 199-pound Californias and several small bunches. Bulk of desirable vealers and calves brought 10.00@10.50 with plainer and heavy calves at 9.00@10.50 and culls down to 7.00.

HOGS—Considerably lighter receipts and an improved dressed market reflected in a better demand with closing prices 25@40c higher than last week's close. Some 220-pound 11.25, paid for three loads of 179 to 196-pound Nebraska and Texas butchers. A load of 240-pound New Mexico brought 11.00 and a few head with 250-pound weights made 10.90. Bulk of 145 to 200-pound butchers from Nebraska, Texas, Colorado and Arizona sold at 10.50@10.85 with 205-pound Colorados at 10.85. Two loads of 185 to 195-pound California hogs scaled 10.75 and a few head of 170 to 180-pound trucked-in butchers brought 10.50@10.85 with weights and local fed hogs at 10.25@10.50. Packing sows ranged from 9.50@9.90 and a few lots of pigs brought 10.00@10.50.

SHEEP—Week's receipts were about half as large as a week previous but still fully sufficient for the demand. Nothing of good to choice quality was available but the undercurrent was lower, nearly every class showing quotations are 50c@$1.00 under a week ago on spring lambs. Feet are unchanged. A couple of packers paid 12.00 for spring lambs early in the week, but 11.50 was the early top for the week. A deck of 92-pound Arizonas made 8.85 with a deck of 96-pound trucked-ins at 8.75. Other decks of 88-pound trucked-in lambs brought 8.60@8.75, some of these lightly sorted as "90s." Good to choice 90 to 105-pound lambs for the close quoted at 8.75@8.50. Two decks of 132-pound California ewes made 6.75 with 43 and 45-pound clippers at 6.50@6.75. Aged ewes brought 4.00 with top cut at 5.00. Cull ewes sold down to 2.00.

Wheat Futures Follow Stocks in Price Slump

CHICAGO, May 3. (AP)—Despite rivalry transient rallies, wheat today followed the stock market down hill, overwhelmed at the last by heavy selling orders that came pouring in from eastern sources. May delivery of wheat broke the season's bottom-price records, and touched as low as 78¾c, a point where the forecast value here from 1929 to 1930, inclusive, has been 131¾. Contributing to weakness of the wheat market today was a forecast of frequent showers over the entire grain belt throughout the coming week.

Closing quotations on wheat were nervous at nearly the day's lowest level. Monday's export business, reported by Broomhall & Co., cabled altogether to fifty-odd thousand bushels, was not encouraging. Comparative slowness of export demand today for North American wheat, however, did not prevent a heavy run of offerings here from sellers who had received indications pointed to considerable amounts of wheat as having been bought for European account by the buying of the past week. Nevertheless, the backwardness of overseas demand for wheat from the United States and Canada, together with lower Liverpool quotations today than had been looked for, created a good deal of speculative comment. Apparent vanishing of chances for disposing of present big supplies in North America before the need of caring for another crop arrives.

On the other hand, reassuring reports were also current here today that without cutting prices, Farm Board allies have been making a general sales drive for wheat for export and to domestic millers as well. Such put speedy stress, too, on talk that Russia would soon have to lay off during the season's most trying periods. In this connection, a leading Chicago crop expert pointed out that self-effects to the United States winter wheat crop, especially in the Southwest, are likely to develop before abnormal warm weather tending to bring about excessive root growth prevailed when the crop should have been dormant. He said that these unfavorable conditions predominate hereafter a general thinning out of the crop may result.

Corn was swayed by the action of wheat and by reports that corn planting is progressing under ideal conditions. Oats eased at times through the absence of any heavy selling which found buying support here.

Provisions went lower because of scattered selling which found buying support slow.

CARGO OF AUTOS IN LINER HOLDS

Carrier California Arrives With 280 Shipment

Sister Ships of Fleet Also to Give Same Service

Advantages Told by Official of Panama-Pacific

BY WALDO DRAKE

Regular delivery of automobiles from New York by the three express liners of the Panama-Pacific Line was inaugurated yesterday by the electric liner California bringing in 280 machines, the largest consignment yet brought to the Pacific Coast by ship.

Officials of the line said yesterday that plans are being formulated whereby a certain quota of practically every car in the higher-priced field will be carried via the intercoastal route. Since the cars can be delivered throughout Southern California on the fourteenth day out of New York, it was pointed out that the all-water route would afford dispatch equal to transcontinental rail shipment.

The California yesterday paid her twentieth visit to Los Angeles Harbor since she came out on her maiden voyage two years ago as pathfinder of Panama-Pacific Line's electric fleet. In that time the 33,000-ton speedster has covered more than 200,000 miles without once being an hour behind schedule or suffering even a minor casualty. On this westbound voyage, in addition to 350 passengers she brought out 5800 tons of New York cargo and 7500 stems of bananas from the canal.

CHINESE DETENTION TANGLE STILL UNRAVELED

Dr. Chun Young Chan, asserted new Chinese Consul to Los Angeles arriving two weeks ago, continues in detention at the port immigration station, pending a determination of his dual status as an American and a Chinese citizen.

Immigration papers received here from Honolulu where he first reentered America, have failed to clarify the issue, according to C. G. Gatley, immigration inspector in charge here.

The Hawaiian papers, Gatley said, indicate he had presented State Department passports to immigration officers there indicating he is an American, but to customs officials he had represented himself as a Chinese official.

The paradoxical role of dual citizenship failed to gain passage through local portals, however, and Mr. Gatley said he is awaiting advice from Washington before a board hearing is given Dr. Chan. Customs officials here say they are granting him no diplomatic exemptions and will levy duty on much of his thirty pieces of baggage.

The steamer Montana put in for bunkers yesterday en route from Prescott for New York, where she will be turned back to the International Mercantile Marine after two years' charter to the Dollar Steamship Lines. The Montauk also was turned back recently. The Stanley Dollar also was in yesterday discharging freight from the Orient and loading, and the liner President Jefferson is due at noon today to disembark passengers and discharge cargo from the Orient.

Beginning with the Cingalese Prince, out of here the 20th inst., all globe-girdling motor ships of the Prince Line will include Tsingtao as an additional oriental port, according to R. V. Ross, agent for the line and for Furness-Pacific, Ltd.

One hundred and fifty-eight ships arrived at the port last week, a gain of twelve vessels over the previous seven days, according to the Marine Exchange. By trades, there were forty-nine freighters, fifty-six passenger carriers, forty-two tankers and eleven lumber vessels.

Oil shipments totaled 2,246,948 barrels last week, an increase of 269,805. Lumber receipts were only 14,777,000 feet, against 21,070,000 feet the week previous.

The departure for Honolulu yesterday noon of a carload of Kansas broomcorn aboard the Lasco liner City of Los Angeles offered an example of unusual dispatch in freight handling. The carload left Wichita via the Santa Fe on April 26, arrived in Los Angeles yesterday morning and will be delivered in Honolulu on the morning of the 9th inst.

Port shipping men learned with regret yesterday of the resignation of J. G. Peyton, for the past two years superintendent of the California Yacht Club. Mr. Peyton, a veteran of the railroad and shipping industries, has been succeeded by R. A. Dill of Arizona.

Two of the American-Hawaiian Line's intercoastal steamers will be in port today, the Ohioan, discharging 2400 tons of general from New York and Boston, and the Iowan, in from the north to load out 1800 tons of cotton, wool and canned goods for the North Atlantic.

Lasco's cabin liner Calawaii was in from Honolulu at noon yesterday with 206 passengers and 2000 tons of laland freight, including fresh and canned pineapples, green coffee, bagasse, sugar and mail. Capt. A. A. Sawyer reported boisterous weather for the first three days out of Honolulu.

LIGHT RAYS HURT RADIO RECEPTION

Amateur Operator Tests Conditions During Recent Eclipse of Sun

SACRAMENTO, May 3. (AP)—Following radio experiments performed by Arthur A. Clarke, Sacramento, with the assistance of other amateur operators in various parts of the country during the recent eclipse of the sun, Clarke believes it was shown that light rays dim the air waves which carry sound.

While the sun was shining on the morning of the eclipse, Clarke at his station, WSHYF, found reception poor, the usual daytime condition. As the moon's shadow slipped over the face of the sun, reception improved, he found, until he was able to carry on a code conversation with a station in Milwaukee. For several minutes after totality of the eclipse there was noticeable improvement in reception, and Clarke talked with an amateur operator at Regina, Sask., at 11:33 a.m.

As the sun came out of obscurity the usual daytime conditions returned, Clarke said.

Early American Coin Discovered

AUBURN (Neb.) May 3. (AP)—One of the first pieces of American currency ever issued has been found by Mrs. Jess Little of Auburn, among her possessions. The currency was printed in 1776, and is one-third of a dollar. The engraving can be read easily.

On one side of the note are the words "according to a resolution of Congress passed at Philadelphia February 17, 1776," and the signature of B. Brannan, an ancestor of Mrs. Little. There also is a small diagram of a sun dial, below which are the words "Mind your Business."

Mata a 194 un Tifón en el Japón

TOKIO, Mayo 3.—Hoy han llegado noticias de la muerte de 194 personas, cuando menos, y de daños a la propiedad valorados en $2,500,000; todo como resultado del tifón que hizo estragos anoche a lo largo de la parte sur de la Isla de Sagahllen y de la costa septentrional de Hokkaido. Los funcionarios del gobierno imperial han puesto hoy en movimiento, para socorrer a los damnificados, las organizaciones de auxilios y de rescate.

Dice una información llegada de Odomari que se han recogido allí noventa y cuatro cadáveres de pescadores ahogados, y que han desaparecido más de 100 personas. El tifón sopló anoche sobre la Bahía de Odomari, que se halla en el extremo meridional de Sagahallen. A la sazón, se habían hecho a la mar 2000 botes con 10,000 pescadores, con el fin de aprovecharse de los grandes cardúmenes de arenques que estaban pasando.

Museo de Productos en Méjico

CIUDAD DE MEJICO, Mayo 3.—En un museo agrícola e industrial recientemente establecido en una dependencia del ministerio de Agricultura, aquí en un punto de los alrededores, se está exhibiendo una gran variedad de productos agrícolas mejicanos de las zonas templada, semitropical y tropical, así como numerosos artículos fabricados a mano por mejicanos.

Uno de los departamentos más interesantes del nuevo museo es el de maderas. Hay muestras de gran número de palos preciosos, muchos de los cuales son desconocidos en los mercados. Se ven allí por supuesto, caoba, cedro y pino colorado, que abundan en muchas partes de la República; y se exhiben igualmente otras maderas preciosas más raras, como la caobilla, el croton lucidum, el cedralla ocorato, y diversas variedades de ébano.

Una lista oficial de las varias maderas de Méjico contiene 300 variedades; pero todavía no hay sino unas cuantas de ellas en el nuevo museo. Estímase que la mitad de la caoba que se consume en los Estados Unidos proviene de Méjico, donde crece en los estados meridionales de Chiapas, Tabasco, Veracruz y Campeche. En el territorio, aun semicivilizado de Quintana Roo, usan la abundante caoba que allí se produce para hacer canoas.

La Carretera Ha Despertado a Acapulco a la Actividad Mercantil

CIUDAD DE MEJICO, Mayo 3.—Con la terminación de la carretera de la ciudad de Méjico al puerto tropical de Acapulco, en el Océano Pacífico, el precio de la propiedad raíz en dicho lugar ha subido como de 2 a 70 pesos ($35) el metro cuadrado, y Acapulco se ha convertido en una estación de turismo.

Durante la semana de Pascua hubo en Acapulco un movimiento de turistas como nunca se había soñado allí, pues 10,000 excursionistas de recreo, tanto mejicanos como extranjeros, cayeron sobre esa playa tropical, y muchos más habrían ido, de haber tenido Acapulco abundancia de alojamientos decentes.

CLERGY BACKS WATER BOND

Church Leaders Indorse Issue as Matter of Most Vital Importance to City

An urgent appeal to the people of Los Angeles to support the $38,-000,000 water bonds was voiced by prominent church men of the city yesterday as they united in affirming their own approval of the bonds.

As the campaign for the bonds hit its stride yesterday, appointment of Bruce A. Findley as director of the campaign was announced by the citizens' water bonds campaign committee. Mr. Findlay was formerly assistant superintendent of city schools, is an official of the Chamber of Commerce and formerly was director of personnel of one of the downtown department stores. The purpose of the campaign is to acquaint the voters with the facts attendant upon the proposed bond issue, with the certainty that once the facts are understood the success of the bonds will be assured.

The active support and the appeal of the church men follows the action of the Ministerial Association in unanimously indorsing the water bonds.

INDORSEMENTS GIVEN

Among those yesterday on record as urging their church members to awaken to the serious water situation facing Los Angeles and to support the water bond issue were: Rt. Rev. John J. Cantwell, bishop of the Catholic diocese of Los Angeles and San Diego; Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin, Temple B'nai B'rith; Rabbi Ernest R. Trattner, and the Rev. E. P. Ryland, secretary of the Church Federation of Los Angeles.

Speaking as the head of the United Church Brotherhood, Eli F. Bush yesterday was on record emphatically urging the imperative necessity of the water bonds, and pointing out that every dollar of the issue vitally is needed to meet the serious situation confronting the city.

Among the prominent churchmen and laymen who stressed the civic necessity of the water bonds were the following, together with a brief expression from each:

Rt. Rev. John J. Cantwell: Seldom has a community been called upon to vote upon a more important issue than the water bonds on the 20th inst. election ballot. It will be many years before the Colorado River can be made to send its water to our cities in Southern California. In the meantime, our present water supply must be increased to meet our actual needs.

"There is no physical necessity more important than water. We cannot live as individuals or as a city without water—and a reliable supply of water. That Los Angeles today stands in dire need of more water there can be no doubt. By all means, let us vote the water bonds the 20th inst."

Rev. E. P. Ryland, secretary of the Church Federation of Los Angeles, representing 350 Protestant churches: "I think the water situation is pretty much a matter of life and death with us. I am absolutely and heartily in favor of the water bonds."

Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin, Temple B'nai B'rith: "This water bond issue is one that affects the very life of our city. They should be supported by every citizen. These bonds ought particularly to commend themselves to our citizens for the reason that they will not increase taxes in any way, but will be repaid entirely from earnings of our Water Bureau in accordance with the provision of the new city charter."

Rabbi Earnest R. Trattner: "Los

McCLELLAN, 'SOURDOUGH,' LED FIGHT FOR BEACHES

R. F. McClellan, County Supervisor, who died suddenly yesterday morning, had behind him a picturesque background that few men still in public life can boast. He overred he was the only remaining "sourdough" holding public office on the Pacific Coast.

Up to few days before his death he delighted in recounting his days as a placer miner in California and Alaska. Born in a small Maine village he was taken by his parents to a settlement in Minnesota, where he studied at a country school and eventually became County Surveyor. At the age of 19 years he was appointed State Surveyor. But when news of the gold strikes in California and Alaska reached him. Mr. McClellan abandoned his career as a surveyor and started West.

His technical knowledge stood him in good stead and he amassed a fortune in placer mining in California. He returned to Minnesota and acquired extensive holdings in timber lands. The lure of gold, however, remained with him and he came back west. He went into Alaska, crossed the Valdez glacier and made his way into Dawson. From there he returned to the Copper River Valley and accidentally discovered what has been designated as the world's greatest copper mine, the Great Bonanza at Kinnecott.

The discovery led him to invest in the building of Alaska's first railroad running from Cordova to Kinnecott. The huge copper vein was acquired by the Guggenheim interests a few years later for $41,-000,000. With this stake Mr. McClellan, after sixteen years in Alaska, retired to California.

He had known intimately Jack London, Robert W. Service, Rex Beach and other notables of the Alaskan country and often told the story of how he and Robert Service had been treated to a meal by an Indian who used cough syrup as a flavor over the flap jacks. Mr. McClellan explained that he and Service did not detect the camouflage until they later examined their medicine kit.

When Mr. McClellan reached Los Angeles with considerable money and no place to store it, he decided to establish a bank. He founded the State Bank of Sawtelle and a few years later the Bank of Palms. Later he established the Bank of Westgate and the Citizens' State Bank of Santa Monica.

Although the banks flourished Mr.

SUPERVISORS' CHAIRMAN DIES

R. F. McClellan Succumbs of Heart Disease

Career of Veteran Official Had Colorful Events

County Flags at Half-Staff; Associates Pay Tribute

The long and colorful career of Reuben F. McClellan, member of the County Board of Supervisors for the last fourteen years, came to a sudden close at 6:30 a.m. yesterday when the veteran public official succumbed to heart disease at the Santa Monica Hospital.

Mr. McClellan had been confined in the hospital for more than six weeks and was reported to have been suffering from an attack of pneumonia following influenza. However, he improved somewhat and was thought to be on the road to recovery. Fears were later expressed that a heart ailment from which he had suffered for some years might be aggravated, which proved to be the case, it was announced.

LEAVES WIDOW AND CHILD

Mr. McClellan leaves his widow, Mrs. Elma McClellan, and a 1-year-old son, R. F. McClellan, Jr., besides two brothers, Harry McClellan and Frank McClellan of Bellingham, Wash.

Arrangements for the funeral services will not be completed until word is received from the brothers. They had spent two weeks at the bedside during Mr. McClellan's relapse, but left for their home Wednesday, when it appeared he was improving. It was definitely determined that burial should be in Forest Lawn Memorial Park.

Seventy-one years ago, Mr. McClellan was born in Mt. Kittarden, Me., the son of John and Emily McClellan. The family moved to Minnesota when McClellan was a child and there he grew to young manhood. As a young man he took up surveying and also worked in the timber industry. As a surveyor he did considerable work for the government.

DISCOVERED MINE

In 1898 he organized a party that went into Alaska and discovered the famous bonanza mine to which the Guggenheim interests built a railroad at the cost of many millions of dollars.

It was at about that time that Mr. McClellan established his family at Sawtelle, where he maintained his home for many years. He was interested in the banking business, and in 1906 he and W. E. Sawtelle organized the Citizens' State Bank of Sawtelle. While at Sawtelle Mr. McClellan became interested in politics and was a member of the Sawtelle City Council and a member of the school board.

Mr. McClellan's first wife was Grace G. Loring. There was a son, Neil Dow McClellan, World War veteran, who was killed in an airplane accident near Sawtelle in July 1925. The son had two children.

BOARD CHAIRMAN

Mr. McClellan was first elected to the Board of Supervisors in 1916, which office he held ever since, having been in his fourth term, which began two years ago. He had been chairman of the board since 1920.

He remarried in November of 1923, selecting for his bride Elma Brunty, a 23-year-old book-keeper in the office of the County Auditor's office.

In 1924 Mr. McClellan very nearly died from the effects of a heart attack which seized him while he was at the county recreation camp at Big Pines, and it was some days

TWO KILLED IN TRAFFIC; ONE DYING

Crashes Result Fatally; Auto and Bus Collision Sends Man to Hospital

Jackson F. Dughli of Lynwood was killed instantly at 12:30 a.m. yesterday when the auto which he was driving crashed into a trailer in tow of a truck at Telegraph and Butler roads, according to a report from the sheriff's office. The body was taken to the Murphy Memorial Hospital at Whittier and later removed to the White-Emerson undertaking parlor, Whittier. An inquest will be conducted at 9:30 a.m. next Tuesday. According to officers' reports, the truck, which was loaded with pipe, and which was driven by Jack Owens of Norwalk, is the property of the Getty Oil Company.

Paul Straus of 179 Lotus avenue, Pasadena, was killed when the car he was driving collided with a larger machine at 9:10 a.m. yesterday at Rosemead avenue and Huntington Drive, according to reports from the sheriff's office. The heavier car was driven by George A. Brown, 503 West Colton street, Redlands. According to information furnished investigating officers, the two autos careened into a ditch, following the impact, and Straus was pinned under one of them. He was taken to the Alhambra Hospital and there was pronounced dead. The body will be at F. A. Utter & Son's undertaking parlor, Alhambra, pending an inquest at 1:30 p.m. tomorrow.

A collision in which his car is said to have crashed into a Los Angeles Railway bus as it was making a left turn at Griffith Park Boulevard and Stockland street yesterday probably will cost the life of E. D. Yard, 40, of 431 North Maryland street, Glendale. Witnesses told police that Yard was driving south on Griffith Park Boulevard and his machine crashed into the rear of the heavy vehicle as it swung around the corner. The bus driver gave his name as J. R. McAlpine. Yard was taken to Georgia-street Receiving Hospital, where police surgeons reported his skull is fractured and he probably is injured internally.

Goldsborough Plans Hop From Colton Today

Held at Colton by low ceiling during the daylight hours yesterday, Frank Goldsborough, 19-year-old New York aviator, who is endeavoring to establish a junior transcontinental flight record, will wait until today to complete his trip. He landed in a bean field at Colton Friday night, forced down by coming darkness and lack of fuel, after flying from El Paso, Tex. So far he has clipped fifteen hours from the previous junior transcontinental flight record of forty-eight hours.

He telephoned yesterday from Colton to the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Kimball, 2452 South La Brea avenue, where he will be a house guest during his stay here, that he will not take off until 11 o'clock today and will land at the Western Air Express flying field at Alhambra.

MORE JULIAN CALLS ISSUED

Half-Score New Witnesses Being Sought

Tuesday Time Limit Set for Making Indictments

Rumor of No Other Charges Being Likely Heard

Armed with grand-jury subpoenas a squad of the District Attorney's investigators yesterday sought more than half a score of Julian case witnesses whom the inquisitorial body wishes to question before Tuesday, the last day upon which indictments can be returned in the major Julian cases under the provisions of the law of limitations.

Although the names of the witnesses sought were not revealed, it was learned that among their number are many names entirely new to the investigation. Although the subpoena servers were successful in locating several of those wanted yesterday, it was declared that the identities of none would be revealed for fear of frightening the others away before the grand-jury papers could be served upon them.

NEW CHARGES UNLIKELY

Despite the activity of the grand jury and the prosecutor's office, rumors continued to grow in strength yesterday that there was little possibility of more indictments in the Julian case and that leads the grand jurors have been running down during the past two weeks have proved largely hearsay and productive of no evidence upon which an indictment could be based.

Of the more than two-score men already indicted in the Julian cases, fourteen charged with conspiracy to commit usury are scheduled to come up for trial in Superior Judge Aggeler's court at 10 a.m. Tuesday. It is understood that case, however, will probably be postponed for one week.

BRIBE TRIAL TOMORROW

Frank C. Grider, former Julian case juror, indicted for assertedly accepting a bribe, is scheduled for trial tomorrow morning in Superior Judge Wilson's court, but Grider's case, too, it was learned, will probably be continued by stipulation between Dept. Dist.-Attys. Costello and Jones and Defense Attorneys Beirne and Rush.

In the Julian stockholders' civil suit against the Los Angeles Stock Exchange and various brokers, eight more brokers yesterday asked for a writ of prohibition in Division Two of the Appellate Court directing that Superior Judge Tappaan be stopped from taking further depositions in the civil suit. In substance, the writs are attempts to have the civil suit quashed by the upper court. The writs are returnable Monday.

NIX ORDERS LAVINE-CASE QUIZ

Investigation of the search and seizure of documents and papers at the apartment of Miss Leontine Johnson, on trial with Morris Lavine, and accused of a $75,000 extortion plot, was ordered yesterday by City Prosecutor Nix.

The move of Nix follows an order of Superior Judge Schauer to arrest Jack Chrisa, veteran District Attorney's office investigator, and

HERE is a fact that you can put down as final: you will always be disappointed in the places you have heard most about.

There are two things I have always wanted to see in Mexico City—the floating gardens of Xochimilco and the Thieves' Market. I was interested by everything else in Mexico City except Xochimilco and the Thieves' Market.

Xochimilco looks like a sad edition of Coney Island with an irrigation ditch around it. The Thieves' Market is a 5-and-10-cent store in a soiled condition and scattered along the street in dirty little booths. If the stuff on sale represents the thieving activities of the place, they can't be said to be among our best burglars.

BEAUTY

Everything else about Mexico City is interesting. It is one of the most beautiful cities in the world. It is just such a city as Los Angeles could have been, had some of our early City Councilmen had brains instead of sawdust in their skulls. It is a city of wide and magnificent boulevards; of beautiful monuments. The monument to the fathers of Mexican independence is one of the finest things of the kind in the world.

OUR ART

Looking at this superb work of art and at the splendid monument to Benito Juarez in the Alameda, I happened to think of the piece de resistance of municipal art in Los Angeles—the fountain in Pershing Park where four infants afflicted with dropsy uphold our artistic traditions.

NOCHE TRISTE

The kick I get out of Mexico City, however, is its historic spots. It gives you a very queer chill trickling down your backbone to realize that you are standing on a street which used to be the great causeway of the old Aztec city of Montezuma. The battlefield of Noche Triste.

It was on this causeway that the finest blood of old Spain gushed through the armor of chivalry as the knights of Spain went down before the arrows of Montezuma's outraged warriors.

SAN QUENTIN'S DANGER'S TOLD

Fire Hazards Described by Former Convict

Shops Building of Wood and Declared Trap

Lock System in Cell Blocks Adds to Perils

BY EX-CONVICT NO. XXXXXX

(This article on the peril of a disastrous fire at San Quentin prison is written by the author of a widely discussed series of prison articles recently published in The Times.)

More than 320 men were burned to death or suffocated by smoke in the recent fire at the Ohio State penitentiary.

The same conditions exist in the State of California as in Ohio. Here, also, are the cell blocks overcrowded, as I showed in a series of articles published in the Los Angeles Times last January. Kid McCoy, in charge of the fire department at San Quentin, has been called on frequently to extinguish small fires on the prison grounds. A major fire has never yet occurred.

The shops building, wherein are confined approximately 1000 men during working hours, has only one means of exit—an iron stairway on the outside of the building. The building is entirely of wood. If a fire should occur, without doubt this stairway would collapse, leaving stranded on the upper floor many hundreds of convicts. The building is so old that its floors have rotted and only the spark of a carelessly thrown cigarette is necessary to double the Ohio disaster. Though the floors are wetted down twice daily in each department and cigarettes are barred, in the washrooms and behind the backs of the guards inmates constantly sneak a smoke.

CELL-BLOCK HOUSING

The cell blocks, themselves, at San Quentin are housed in three major fire-proof buildings known as the east wing, west wing and new prison. Massive steel doors are locked as the last convict enters daily. Inside of these large doors are the cell blocks themselves, consisting of rows 250 cells long. They are four tiers in height, one cell directly above another.

There is but one opening to each cell. The door, made of iron bars placed about three inches apart, contains an enormous eight-inch lock. These locks are opened individually. In addition to this lock, which is strong enough to hold any man living, is a long iron bar extending down over the top of the cell door and covering about fifty cells. A heavy lever, at its extreme right end, raises and lowers this bar. This lever is locked and there have been times when the keys have been mislaid and prisoners had to remain in their cells until new ones could be obtained.

RELEASE AND LOCK-UP

When everything goes well it takes approximately thirty minutes to release all of the prisoners from their cells during the morning unlock, and the same length of time for the evening lock-up. This is because only one bar is raised at a time. A trusty unlocks each individual cell lock and then, standing at the end, awaits the word of the guard to pull the fulcrum release, the second restraining lever. As this bar slides up it makes a grating noise and the prisoners within swing open the doors together. As this first group of a few hundred prisoners marches downstairs on their way to breakfast, the bar on the floor below is lifted and the process repeated until all have emerged from that block. Then the other two buildings follow suit.

It is a slow, orderly process and cannot be hastened without confusion. In the event of fire it seems reasonable to anticipate that the time required for unlocking cells would be greater than under normal circumstances.

BAR-LOCK SYSTEM

When it is remembered that each cell, with its enormous lock and an additional iron bar, is placed on the inside of either a steel or concrete prison house, with massive iron doors guarding the entrance, which are likewise locked; and that this prison house is placed inside a yard with walls surrounding the yards, with the doors through these walls all securely locked and barred; and that the entire yard and prison house are inside of the massive gray walls of the penitentiary proper with its enormous barred gates, the question arises, "To what purpose is this second iron bar over the cell itself?"

Should a fire occur in any penitentiary using this bar system—and it is in vogue in almost all of our penal institutions—and should this bar stick or fail to function at the psychological time, nothing under the sun could save the unfortunate beings confined there. The only method of release would be by cutting through this iron bar with acetylene torches in front of each and every cell, as the bar extends across them all. This task would take many hours and, as in the Ohio fire, it would be impossible in the face of smoke and flame.

It is necessary to confine felons so that they may not be allowed their freedom but when that confinement is carried beyond the point of safety, so that it takes their lives, then it is time to consider the danger of such methods.

One lock to a cell, when it is about eight inches square, is sufficient to confine the strongest of men. If the second restraining lever placed upon these cells endangers the lives of the inmates, then it would appear that it should be removed.

CANINE CARNERA TO BE VIEWED

Gigantic Great Dane Entered in Show

Canis Major and Wally Albright

DOGDOM has its giants as well as the prize ring.

This fact will be demonstrated at the Hollywood Dog Show, the 24th and 25th inst., in the Ambassador Auditorium, when a veritable Carnera of the canine world will be conspicuous in the blue-blood entries.

He is Canis Major, a Great Dane of such proportions that he serves little Wally Albright and other neighborhood children as a pony.

The show, the fourteenth event of the Los Angeles Kennel Club, is expected to draw more than 1000 canine aristocrats from all parts of the country, according to Jack Bradshaw, the director-general. Advance entries indicate that every known breed of dogs will be represented.

Saturday, the 10th inst., has been set as the final date for entries. Trophies provided for the forthcoming show are said to exceed in number and value any collection of prizes ever offered for a like event in this part of the country.

SEVEN RED DEFENDANTS ARRAIGNED

Additional Demonstrators Plead Not Guilty and Ask For Jury Trial

Seven additional Communist sympathizers, arrested in connection with the May Day demonstrations near the Plaza Thursday, were arraigned before Municipal Judge Curtis yesterday on various charges. The first eleven men and women arrested were arraigned Friday.

In each case yesterday the defendants pleaded not guilty and asked jury trial, which was set for the 20th inst., the same date on which five other Communist sympathizers, arraigned Friday, are to be tried. Frank Stark, charged with interfering with an officer, was ordered released on $500 bail to await trial and Martin Shapiro, charged with parading without a permit; Carl Hummil, accused of violating the handbill ordinance by distributing Red literature, and Jack Olsen, Harry Snyder, Max Rosenstein and Morris Naidich, all charged with blocking the sidewalk, were released on $100 bail each.

MANY IN FIELD FOR SUPERVISOR

Gov. Young Will Appoint McClellan Successor

Mayors of Three Cities May Aspire to Board

Term of Chairman Would Have Expired in 1932

A successor to R. F. McClellan, chairman of the Board of Supervisors, who died suddenly Saturday morning, will be named by Gov. Young. The Governor's appointee will serve until after the November election, as the law requires the unexpired term to be filled at the first general election following a vacancy.

The term of Mr. McClellan will expire in 1932. Members of the Board of Supervisors, expressing the deepest regret over the passing of the veteran public official, declined to discuss what action is likely to be taken with regard to naming a new chairman of the board.

QUIET CAMPAIGN

Because of the known seriousness of Mr. McClellan's illness, rumors have been current for several weeks that he would resign and a quiet campaign has been in progress by several aspirants for the place.

Mayors of at least three suburban cities in the Fourth District, which includes the southwestern section of the county, have been mentioned as possible candidates. They are Mayor Michaels of Santa Monica, Mayor Hauge of Long Beach and Mayor Lawrence of Inglewood, who ran against Mr. McClellan at his last election and later was appointed field secretary, at a salary of $225 a month.

OTHERS SUGGESTED

Others whose friends say will be suggested to Gov. Young for appointment are Eugene W. Biscailuz of Santa Monica, now with the State Motor Vehicle Department, John R. Quinn, who ran for Mayor of Los Angeles, A. E. (Chick) Henning, member of the City Council, and Harry J. Borde, owner of the Miramar Hotel, banker and attorney.

The Fourth Supervisor District includes the western half of the city of Long Beach, the "shoestring strip" running to the harbor district of Los Angeles, and the territory, to the west, including the cities of Redondo Beach, Gardena, Inglewood, Culver City, Beverly Hills, the Venice district, Santa Monica, and Malibu township to the Ventura county line. Some territory in the southwestern part of Los Angeles is included, and when Supervisor McClellan moved from Sawtelle to Beverly Hills last year, the boundary was moved east to include his home.

PRAISE FOR CHAIRMAN

The death of Mr. McClellan brought forth statements of regret from fellow-public officials and words of praise for his services in public office. Supervisor Wright, who served for nearly ten years on the board with Mr. McClellan, said that the latter's death came as a great shock. "My services of almost ten years with him on the Board of Supervisors has led me to recognise and deeply appreciate his splendid qualities both as a citizen and public official," said Mr. Wright. "As chairman of the board he at all times displayed a rare sense of fairness and good judgment. He had unbounded faith in the future of Los Angeles county and was a friend of every citizen who sought his counsel and advice. The county has lost a most faithful public servant."

ADMIRABLE EXECUTIVE

County Counsel Mattoon said: "A man of true statesmanlike qualities, imbued with the loftiest ideals of public service and possessed of unswerving loyalty and patriotism in the performance of the duties of his office, these were the attributes that distinguished R. F. McClellan. He combined these qualities of staunchness, fortitude and gentleness which made him loved of all with whom he came in contact. His vigor of action and the directness and devotion of purpose which characterized his public acts made him an admirable executive. Los Angeles county mourns the loss of a great leader and one whose place it will be extremely difficult to fill."

Fred T. Beaty, Supervisor, said: "The news of Mr. McClellan's death comes to me as a message of great personal loss. During the three and one-half years in which we have been associated on the Board of Supervisors, I have found his counsel invaluable and his co-operation always generous and courteous. Los Angeles county has sustained a great loss in the passing of this stalwart, progressive first citizen, and it will be difficult to find for his place anyone with the same sense of public duty and responsibility to public trust as were manifested by Mr. McClellan."

Supervisor Graves said that although Mr. McClellan's associates on the board and in the county organization knew he was quite ill, news of his death came as a shock.

"Los Angeles county will feel keenly the loss of Mr. McClellan," said Mr. Graves. "As a veteran in the county service, his experience and knowledge of county affairs were invaluable. We will miss him as our leader."

Supervisor Shaw said: "The death of Supervisor R. F. McClellan deprives Southern California of one of its most respected and beloved citizens. During the short time I had served with him on the Board of Supervisors, I found him to be one of the finest characters I have known and I deeply feel his sudden death."

YOUNG TO FILL VACANCY

During the last six weeks, while Chairman McClellan was unable to attend meetings, the other Supervisors have rotated as temporary chairman in his absence, choosing a chairman pro tem from their number. This procedure will be continued, they announced, until one of the Supervisors is elected permanent chairman, possibly next week.

Gov. Young will fill by appointment the vacancy on the Board of Supervisors, the appointee to serve until the August primaries, when he or some other candidate will be chosen to serve out the remaining two years of Mr. McClellan's uncompleted term.

Members of the Board of Supervisors, although not meeting yesterday, individually expressed regret at the passing of Supervisor McClellan and Supervisor Shaw, chairman pro tem, instructed County Counsel Mattoon to draw up resolutions of regret which will be adopted tomorrow. Flags on the Courthouse were ordered at half-mast, as a token of official mourning.

M'CLELLAN HAD COLORFUL LIFE

McClellan could not stay away from the open country. He frequently fished in the section of Big Pines. He decided it should be acquired as a recreational camp for the citizens of the county. He entered politics and after his election as County Supervisor he continued advocating the acquisition of the Big Pines territory as a public park until it was accomplished.

Mr. McClellan also advocated the acquisition of the beaches as public property. He spent most of his time outdoors and besides fishing one of his recreations was horseback riding.

CLERGY BACKS WATER BONDS

Angeles is face to face with an actual water shortage, and unless the $38,800,000 water bond issue is adopted the 20th inst. there can be no doubt but that property values will be adversely affected.

"These water bonds are not assessments against the people's property; they are revenue producing, and will be repaid, principal and interest, from earnings of the city Water Bureau."

EVERY DOLLAR SAFE

Eli F. Bush, president of the United Church Brotherhood of Los Angeles: "The $38,800,000 water bond issue has been recommended by Mayor Porter after a careful investigation of the city's water needs. Every dollar of the bond issue urgently is needed.

"Furthermore, we may be sure that every dollar of the bond issue will be invested wisely and honestly under the direction of Mayor Porter. Unless the water bonds are voted, Los Angeles will be face to face with an actual water shortage."

At the same time district improvement organizations representing the taxpayers and property owners in the numerous sections of the city have publicly expressed their wholehearted support of the water bonds and are urging all property owners as a measure of protection to vote for them.

McGUIRE URGES VOTE

The future development of Los Angeles depends in large degree upon the success of the $38,800,000 water-bond election of the 20th inst., President McGuire of the Board of Public Works declared yesterday.

"As a property owner and resident of Los Angeles for forty-six years, during which time I have seen this city grow from a pueblo to a great metropolis, I am fully aware of the value of an adequate water supply. I am vitally interested in the present and future growth of Los Angeles and will count it a privilege, as well as a duty, to cast my ballot in favor of the bonds," McGuire stated.

"The proposed bonds, if voted by the people, will be paid from water department revenues and will not cost the citizens of Los Angeles one additional cent in taxes. We must have more water and it behooves every citizen of this city to work for and support this plan of assuring an adequate supply."

The new styles are seen in the Panamas, the Milans, the leghorns and the sailors.

Detective Kirk Loses Foot as Mishap Sequel

Amputation of his left foot yesterday was the sad sequel of Detective Lieutenant L. C. Kirk's ill-fated fishing trip on the opening day of the season, the 1st inst., when a boulder crushed his ankle. Dr. Harry J. Schott performed the amputation yesterday in Methodist Hospital.

Kirk and Dewitt Loomis, both of Georgia-street detective division, went to Snape River to fish Thursday. A 200-pound boulder fell on Kirk's left ankle. Loomis, aided by Dr. J. Whitlow and two boys, carried Kirk, who weighs 225 pounds, a long distance through rough country before they could put him in an automobile.

VOYAGE TO HAWAII RESTORES HEALTH

Sheriff Traeger

Sheriff Traeger returned yesterday on the Lasco liner Calawaii with his deputy, Grove Vail, after a three weeks' trip to Hawaii for his health.

"I am ready to go back to work at once," he declared, laughing at continued reports of his death which followed him to Hawaii. He reported knocking cocoanuts from trees with bricks, being escorted from the ship at Honolulu by seven motor policemen "as if I were somebody."

He called on Capt. Sawyer to attest that he didn't miss a meal at sea.

Sheriff Traeger expressed genuine shock at the sudden death yesterday of Supervisor McClellan, who, Traeger said, had stood loyally behind him ever since he became Sheriff.

INDIAN BUREAU AGAIN TARGET

Welfare Group Asserts New Regime Has Faults

Bill Now Pending in House Subject of Attack

Charge Made That Flogging Will be Restored

Charges that the new administration of the Indian Bureau at Washington is falling into the same errors in handling affairs of the American Indian as did the old administration that was discredited and kicked out, are contained in communications sent out by the American Indian Defense Association.

Mrs. Stella M. Atwood of Riverside, who for years was chairman of the Indian welfare committee of the General Federation of Women's Clubs, stated yesterday that according to information from Washington the outlook for the Indian is little better than it was under the regime of former Commissioner Burke.

GROUP ATTACKS BILL

The specific criticism is directed at a bill drafted by the Indian Bureau and reported by the House Committee on Indian Affairs, which the friends of the Indian consider as striking at the rights of the Indian. John Collier, executive secretary of the association, stated in a bulletin sent out asking help to defeat the bill, that while the measure may have good intent it will "bring about a multitude of new evils" for the Indian. The purpose of the bill is to prevent collections from Indians to finance the prosecutions of worthless claims against the government. But the bill would prohibit the raising of money from Indians for any purpose whatsoever, including for religious, political work, mutual benefit or even for cultural purposes, the association charges. It even fails to distinguish between Indians who are wards of the government and Indians who are not wards.

"STEP BACKWARD"

"Such provision is a long step back in the direction of 'closed reservations' of years gone by," Collier stated. "And it is a step backward from the declared policy of Secretary of the Interior Wilbur. It even would have the effect, if held constitutional, of drawing back under the guardianship of the Indian Bureau large numbers of Indians not wards of the government at all. The collection of money from Indians under false pretenses should be attacked through prosecution under existing laws."

The American Indian Defense Association does not solicit money from the Indians for any purpose and is not supported by the Indians, Collier said.

FLOGGING MENACE

The association also is protesting against a general order issued by Commissioner Rhoads, which, it is charged, virtually restores to superintendents the right to flog Indian school children and to establish the old school "jails." Since these were abolished, Collier charges, incompetent teachers and superintendents in the Indian teaching service have brought pressure to have them restored "under euphemistic terms." While it is not the specific intent of the commissioner to restore floggings and jails, Collier points out that this new order is to be administered "by many of the same men whose authority to flog the children was suspended by former Commissioner Burke."

The association is making an appeal to all interested in the welfare of the Indians to use their influence to prevent the passage of the objectionable bill and to bring about a revocation of the disciplinariah order.

Radio's Comedy Held No Cruelty

It is not an act of cruelty on the part of a husband if he turns on the radio and makes his wife listen to Amos 'n' Andy.

This was the decision of Superior Judge Doran yesterday when he denied Mrs. Candace M. Clarke a divorce from Olin S. Clarke, a retired business man.

Mrs. Clarke testified that she had been deceived in every way when she married Clarke. She is 46 years of age and her husband 63, she said.

"I was deceived in every way," the wife said. "Before our marriage he was an ardent wooer and I thought he was an upright and normal man. After we were married he treated me like an ordinary housekeeper. He used foul language and he forced me to listen to Amos 'n' Andy over the radio. He was continually talking of other women."

Judge Doran ruled that the wife had failed to establish grounds for a divorce and denied the decree.

Magazine Has Article on Reds

Random thoughts on the radical situation in America, by James H. Collins, editor of Southern California Business, are expressed in entertaining fashion in the new May issue of the magazine which will make its appearance here Tuesday. The magazine is the official organ of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce. "Honest Hearts and Hollow Heads," is the title of Collins's discussion.

The new issue of the magazine also contains an interesting story of a newly established Los Angeles industry, that of reproducing Mexican music on phonograph records, by Mona London. Ludwig Schiff, executive of a wholesale drug concern, and Philip B. Kennedy, banker, are among the local business men contributing articles this month.

prosecute him for invading the personal rights of the woman in the service of a search warrant, which has been admitted a faulty document.

SEIZURE DETAILED

Issuance of a complaint, charging the misdemeanor, will not take place until tomorrow, according to Nix, and not until all the facts have been procured. Chief Trial Deputy Eberhardt has been assigned to conduct the inquiry and to take up the court order with Judge Schauer.

In the meantime the actual circumstances surrounding the seizure of documents at the home of Miss Johnson, subsequent to her arrest on the extortion charge, were revealed at the District Attorney's office and it was asserted that Christ was not connected with the removal of a single article from the woman's abode.

Christ, according to the records, served the faulty search warrant on Miss Johnson, as well as the warrant for her arrest, but left the home before the search or seizure of the manuscripts, documents, letters or two grips.

CAVETT TOOK PAPERS

The investigator requested Miss Johnson, who was living at the apartment under the name of Mary Smith, to go to the District Attorney's office, and then left. Later the woman complied and made a statement on the matter.

The actual entry and collecting of half a wagon load of miscellaneous papers was made by Investigator Cavett, who appeared at the Johnson apartment some time after her arrest, according to the District Attorney's office.

Cavett conducted his search under the warrant that had been read to Miss Johnson and left at her home, and took his findings to the District Attorney's office.

A check of the documents failed to reveal the manuscript the investigators had reason to believe was in the rooms, and Cavett returned a second time. On this visit he found the sixty-six-page typewritten story under some soiled linen in a closet. He seized the papers and carbon copies and placed them with those found in the previous search.

FOUR TO BE HEARD

The manuscript seized, according to the investigator, proved to be part of a series of five that were being prepared by Miss Johnson and Lavine for publication in the Los Angeles Examiner, and which the prosecution contends were the basis for the asserted extortion plot.

An explanation of the actions of Chriss and Cavett will be made in court tomorrow, according to Dep. Dist.-Atty. Dennison, who with Dep. Dist.-Atty. McKay is directing the prosecution of Johnson and Lavine.

Four witnesses are yet to be heard before the prosecution completes the presentation of the case, the prosecutors announce. They are Jacob Friedlander, Kent Parrot, and Abe Morris, said to be some of those threatened with exposure in the scheme, and Attorney Walter K. Tuller. Tuller will tell of a conversation with Lavine over the purchase and use of documents in the possession of Miss Johnson.

"QUEEN" OF GREETERS TO FLY TO BAY CITY

Hotel executives of Los Angeles, Fresno and San Francisco will unite in a tribute to Mrs. Perle A. Young, recently crowned Queen of the Hotel Greeters of America and have chartered a plane which tomorrow will carry the first lady of the hotels to a convention of the national organization at San Francisco. Mrs. Young is State president of the California auxiliary of the national organization and is the wife of Perle A. Young, national president, and manager of the Hotel Figueroa. A stop will be made in Fresno for a reception there.

CHILDREN IN ROLES OF FAIRYLAND

"Hansel and Gretel" Will be Presented at 2:30 p.m. Today by Youngsters

Covers of the book of fairyland will fall wide and its mystic folk will step right out into the light of day this afternoon at the Civic Repertory Theater when "Hansel and Gretel" take the center of the stage in the last program of the season of the Children's Playhouse, conducted under the direction of Madeline Brandeis and Maxwell H. Dubin.

Scheduled for 2:30 p.m., the "all-starlet" program offers a wide variety of divertissements in addition to the one-act version taken from the "Hansel and Gretel" opera of E. Humperdinck. Philippe DeLacy will act as master of ceremonies and the program will include Jay Ward, the American Legion mascot; Curtyne Englar's Rose Ballet; Junior Coghlan in an eccentric dance; Parina and his sister, Mangoe; Alvin Lustig in "Guess What?"; Betty Bolen and June Irwin of the M.-O.-M. baby follies in "A Bit of Old Mexico," and music by the Black-Foxe Military Institute Band. During the intermission Mickey Levee, Jr., will introduce a number of the motion-picture players.

The Children's Playhouse, which was started last February at Temple B'nai B'rith by Miss Brandeis and Maxwell Dubin as an experiment in giving children the right kind of entertainment, soon outgrew its neighborhood proportions and proved such a definite need for entertainment designed especially for children, that its directors hope to make it a permanent institution here. It has been indorsed by the Parent-Teachers' Association, Rabbi Edgar Magnin, Maj. Harry Black of the Black-Foxe Military Institute and other educators.

There is only one other playhouse of its kind in the country, according to Miss Brandeis. The playhouse will open its next season in September.

May Fete Held for Children

A May Day children's party was given under auspices of Acacia Chapter, Eastern Star, last night at the Masonic Temple, with a mock marriage as the feature. Beverly Lee Wedeler, 2 years of age, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Wedeler, 1508 West Forty-sixth street, was the wee bride, and Dick Fraser, 5, son of Mr. and Mrs. Al Fraser of 840 Doran street, Glendale, was the tiny bridegroom. Principals in the ceremony were all children less than 5 years of age, excepting Billie Crawford, 7, who impersonated the minister. Leroy Jenkins and Tommy Muirhead were train-bearers. Robert Randall, 3, was best man.

Other principals were Kenneth Jackson, Lois Anne Jackson, Maria Plummer, Richard Jackson, Lella Jean Howlett, Shirley Hall, Gertrude Jandt, Joan Muirhead, Jerry Robinson and Jack Jenkins. Robert Jackson, 9, sang, accompanied on a harp by Betty Jane Crawford.

FLYER TO SHOW SKILL WITH POWERED GLIDER

W. Merle Nelson, airplane pilot, today at 3 p.m. will thrill spectators at Metropolitan Airport by climbing almost two miles up, shutting off his motor and gliding back to the field at the mercy of the winds, he has announced. Nelson is attached to the aviation division of the Texas Company.

He will use a powered glider, an Aeromarine-Klemm craft of German design and equipped with a French motor of only forty horsepower. The motor is intended only to get the ship into the air and to assist in case adverse winds are encountered.

RAIN CAUSES DELAY OF SHRINE'S PICNIC

ORATOR SEARCHES FOR JOB

"Times"-Finals Winner Seeks Position on Ship While Arizona Celebrates Contest Victory

Alfred Baughn, who came up from Arizona and captured the title of champion high school orator of the Pacific Southwest over a half-dozen others, the best high-school speakers of this section, woke yesterday morning to find himself famous, but he did not seem to know it or give it a thought. His mind was on something of more material importance.

He wanted a job on a liner running out of Los Angeles; and despite the torrential rains of the morning, and indifferent to the congratulations coming from every quarter, he jumped a suburban train bound for San Pedro where he hoped to land a job.

"You see, I want to go to college when I get through high school next year, and I have to earn the wherewith," he said, "and I expect to keep on earning money while in college, for I will have o work my way. If I don't get a job on a liner out from Los Angeles, there is a job on a battleship waiting for me at Seattle."

SON OF LAWYER

Young Baughn is a junior in the high school at Phoenix where he has lived since he was born, eighteen years ago. He is the son of Otis James Baughn, an attorney, former judge of the Superior Court, and Mary Fairhurst Baughn, who, with his sister, accompanied their son, and, with throbbing hearts, heard the judges announce him victor in the spirited oratorical contest Friday night. There was a party of about a score that came up from Arizona to be at the contest, and among them, and as proud as the parents, was Miss Gladys Bookman, teacher of public speech at Phoenix High School, who had coached young Baughn in the many contests leading up to The Times' grand finals. They left for Phoenix last night and will return Tuesday, en route to Seattle, where young Baughn, as the representative of the Pacific Southwest, will enter the contest for the entire Pacific Coast.

ARIZONA CELEBRATING

All Arizona is celebrating Baughn's victory. Before leaving for the train last night he was handed a telegram from the publisher of the Arizona Republican of Phoenix, who was sponsor for the contest in that State, reading:

"Everyone on the Arizona Republican joins all Arizona in tendering you heartiest congratulations for the wonderful victory attained by you which is a credit to Arizona as well as to yourself. Here's to the national champion high school orator.

[Signed]

"CHARLES A. STAUFFER,
"Arizona Republican."

Another telegram apprised him that a joyous celebration awaits his homecoming in which the whole city will join.

Young Expected to Announce on His Visit Here

With formal announcement of his entry into the gubernatorial race expected to be made Tuesday, Gov. Young is scheduled to arrive in Los Angeles this evening after attendance during the day at the Ramona pageant at Hemet.

This evening, the Governor will speak at the Temple Baptist Church. Tomorrow he will attend a luncheon in Pasadena and, later, a dinner of the Mount Hollywood Congregational and Presbyterian Church.

Tuesday he will attend an architecture luncheon. That night he will attend the City Brotherhood convention dinner and a meeting of the East Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

On Wednesday he will join members of the Harvard, Princeton and Yale clubs at a lunch. He will be the guest of Dr. Griffith at a dinner in the Baptist Church that evening, after which he will attend an American Legion meeting and a function in honor of Katsuji Debuchi, Japanese Ambassador to the United States, in the Music Room of the Biltmore.

He will wind up his Southern California visit Thursday with attendance at the Whittier Lions' Club luncheon and a Long Beach-Harbor District Chamber of Commerce gathering.

DALLAS PUT ON AIR LINK WITH CITY

Service to Texas City Opens Today With Time of Fourteen and a Half Hours

Inaugurating Western Air Express's new air transport line from Los Angeles to Dallas, Tex., the first eastbound plane leaves here at 4 a.m. today, scheduled to fly the 1390 miles in fourteen hours and thirty minutes. The first westbound plane in regular service of the new line leaves Dallas at 5 a.m. today.

The new passenger line, connecting Los Angeles and the Pacific Coast with Central Texas is an extension of the Los Angeles-El Paso passenger line: 575 miles eastward. This extension adds 1150 daily flying miles to the Western Air Express system, increasing that air line's total daily mileage to 15,832 miles. Officials of W.A.E. declare this to be the largest number of air miles flown by any transport concern in the world, and that it amounts to one-fifth of the total daily mileage flown in the United States. The extension brings the total route miles of the W.A.E. system up to 6000 miles.

Cities served on the new line are Los Angeles, San Diego, El Centro, Yuma, Phoenix, Tucson, Douglas, El Paso, Midland, Abilene and Dallas. A stop is made at Midland, Tex., for fuel, and another stop is made at Abilene when there are passengers to board or alight.

The new service enables a passenger to fly from Dallas to San Francisco, approximately 1800 miles, in one day, or from Mexico City to Los Angeles in thirty-three hours and to San Francisco in thirty-six hours. The early departing schedule from Los Angeles will be necessary until that portion of the route between El Paso and Dallas is lighted. This work is expected to be completed in five weeks, it was announced.

SPEAKING CLASSES FORMED

Six classes in public speaking are being organized by the Extension Division, University of California, it was announced by Margaret Wooton, executive secretary of the class department in Los Angeles. Dentists have shown the greatest interest in public speaking, she adds. A questionnaire sent to sixty-five dentists drew replies that forty-five of them preferred public speaking out of all the subjects offered.

HOLDING ON TIGHT

Justice McReynolds denies he'll quit the Supreme Court bench. It's too hard to get a seat these days to think of quitting.

MISSING A BET

Light tremors are felt near Lassen Peak and no one has blamed it on the eclipse. Those correspondents are getting careless.

PHONOGRAPH

Instead of putting the phonograph out of business, the radio has increased the sales record. We hesitate to hint that even the radio reverts to the records for good music.

THE HUMAN HANDICAP

Inventor claims to have an airplane that won't go into a nose dive or tailspin without righting itself. If he will add improvements that will make it foolproof, as well, his fame will live forever.

DRY YANKS

Even after all the wet polls the Massachusetts Legislature has gone on record against the initiative petition for the repeal of the Baby Volstead Act by a margin of 123 to 110. A few more polls and that State will be as arid as Kansas.

WITH A VENGEANCE

If the Department of Justice is given the task of enforcing the prohibition law and exercises the same zeal manifested in controlling the German espionage system in this country during the World War, it should be curtains for the bootleggers.

CLOCKED

The Census Bureau has a big clock that runs all the time and automatically counts the country's population from the average births, deaths and immigration statistics. On March 31 it registered 122,186,693. We shall soon see whether it was on time!

WHAT MONEY WILL BUY

Time was when the accident of birth was the open sesame to a king's court. Nowadays it's money or ability. In the old days the aristocrats had most of the money and abhored the mention of it. These days money is king and there is no soft pedal attached.

AN EVERLASTING NOW

There seem to have been no notable repercussions from the recent statement of Dr. Gilbert N. Lewis of the University of California that he has discovered that time does not move forward or backward, but in two ways, or symmetrically. While this theory has been seriously discussed it has not drawn the fire of critical scientists, for the probable reason that time is such a nebulous entity, if entity it may be considered, that one theory concerning it would seem to be about as good as another. The chief inference drawn from Dr. Lewis's dictum is that there is no past or future, just an everlasting now.

Quite a number of scientists are in accord with the Berkeley physicist in discarding the old theory that the universe was gradually running down and destined to a lifeless and changeless end. Some of the observations of Dr. Millikan tend to show that it is always renewing itself.

Liebnitz, Berkeley, Hegel, Kant, James and Einstein all have varying views of time. Carlyle, who was no scientist, refers to it as "that great mystery . . . a miracle, a thing to strike us dumb, for we have no word to speak of it."

The layman, so accustomed to consulting his watch and his calendar and to reflect that all our measures of time depend primarily upon the movement of the earth upon its axis and around the sun, is puzzled by Dr. Lewis's statement that "a motion picture of the solar system could run backward and yet obey Newton's laws as satisfactorily as in forward motion" and that "any physicochemical system, when left to itself, must return to that state." But then the layman, who often is baffled by mere time-tables, has little need to worry about the still more baffling formulas of Lewis, with his "interchangeable time," James, with his "dimensional time," or Einstein, with his "space time."

THE TOP RUNG

Loafers have whined through the years that they get no breaks. Now, as though to support their wail, comes the successful president of the Western Union Telegraph Company, Newcomb Carlton, to say that success comes from breaks, and not from work. Naturally, it was first-page news.

There are breaks, of course. A witless commander may win a victory and a skilled general may fail. Houses do burn down an hour after the insurance policy expires. Everything a Midas touches turns to gold and the certificates of another investor turn to ashes. A hero flies from California to Hawaii and then is injured in an automobile accident in Texas. Adventitious circumstances must be taken into account.

And yet success is not the child of fortune. Nor is it necessary to go outside of the occupation of this latest debunker of the top rung to find the facts.

S. F. B. Morse was an artist, not a scientist; electricity was merely an aside. One day a wire broke and caused a spark. He conceived the idea of a breaker to utilise the flashes for communication. Twelve years of drudgery in penury finally produced an instrument. But when he appealed for aid to string the first line from Washington to Baltimore, Congress almost talked it to death for six years. It was heartbreaking.

The whole telegraph system was founded upon breaks; but not the kind President Carlton confesses.

Cyrus W. Field became obsessed with an Atlantic cable; for nothing but an obsession could ever have flung it across. The first attempt to lay it was ended by a break five miles out. It was spliced and a second attempt resulted in a break 200 miles from shore. A third effort ended in another break. It was tied together only to break a fourth time. The fifth effort ended in failure. The sixth time it was actually laid; but after a few signals were exchanged it became mute. A seventh attempt ended in another break. It took eight herculean efforts to get the first message across on July 27, 1866.

Transoceanic communication is not a huge happen-so!

Thomas A. Edison had some breaks in his boyhood; his acid jars broke in the corner of the baggage car and the irate trainmen broke the young genius's ear drums. Edison says inspiration is perspiration, and he has the incandescent lamp, the moving picture and the phonograph to show for his eighteen-hour day through a long life.

Thousands of men were churning about on bicycles; but only Henry Ford thought of hitching two of them together and swinging a gas engine between. It would be hard to convince the Detroit blacksmith it was a break.

And when Rockefeller began to refine oil to fuel Henry's contraption, his partner grew discouraged and quit. Possibly hundreds of thousands of men could have done these things; but they didn't. And the field was wide open.

There is a suspicion that the head of the Western Union Telegraph Company is just trying to wave his workers into the limelight for applause. But he is not convincing.

A plowshare turning up the soil is better than a horseshoe turning up over the door. It is a break not to move the broom and keep it moving. Not a rabbit's foot in the pocket, but a swift foot on the track wins the race.

You may be dealt a bad hand; or you may be dealt a good hand; but the honor lies in playing a bad hand well. "It is not wealth, nor fame, nor fate; but git-up-and-git that makes men great."

The team may play for the breaks; but only huge backs and brains that have been conditioned through the months and years can take advantage of them. He is a great man who can sit on his ash heap and plan another enterprise. Too many undertakings are begun by undertakers. A tallow candle in the attic is better than a headlight on a hearse. Any old tractor in a California orange orchard makes more miles in a year than the swiftest Silver Bullet on a Florida strand.

Life is not a war of popguns. No man ever challenged to a duel chose putty-blowers. We are not fighting tin soldiers. We knock down no men of straw like the Italian man mountain, Carnera. Our antagonists are not windmills. We have bad dreams, not because of something preternatural, but because of too much pie.

If it had not been for the all but insufferable drudgeries of Morse and Field, there is every reason to believe that President Carlton of the Western Union would be without a job today.

Back off from the doorway of opportunity, and it will slam in your face. That door has a time-lock on it and you have to be there on the instant to get the treasure. Friday is not an unlucky day—just folks. White-livered simpletons who never manicure their superstitions wait for the breaks. Woodpeckers eternally pound on wood; but they never soar with the eagles. We are big or little, stalwart or puny, not bebut we do not find four-leaf clovers, but because of the amount of grit we have in our gizzards. Our souls, not crab's lucky stones, shape our careers.

The top rung is not an accident, but a climb!

SUNDAY-SCHOOL ATTACKED

At a recent meeting of the Chicago Ministerial Union Rev. Phillips Osgood of Minneapolis said that the Sunday-school had outlived its usefulness and should be abolished. He gave as his reason for this strange utterance the charge that the Sunday-school undermines the church, because when people send their children to be taught scriptural lessons they think they have done their whole duty in a religious way and stay away from houses of worship themselves.

It is difficult for the laity to see the logic of such an argument, and it is not likely that many of the clergy would be willing to subscribe to it, for churchmen of all creeds have urged upon parents for many years the importance of Bible teaching for their children, with apparently little thought of it diminishing church attendance.

Dr. Osgood's indictment is a serious one. There are few church members who never went to Sunday-school. Is not the Sunday-school a sort of preparatory novitiate for the church? What thoughtful adult who attended Sunday-school regularly during his youth would exchange what he learned there for any other kind of knowledge? Has scriptural knowledge in itself kept him away from church?

The work of teaching religion to classes is of very ancient origin, and the spirit of it has come down through the centuries. Sunday-schools in this country now have about 12,000,000 members and it is not in the least likely that such arguments against them as are made by Dr. Osgood are going to reduce the number to any great extent.

CALIFORNIA CULTURE

Joseph W. Lippincott, publisher of New York, Chicago and Philadelphia, has been sunning himself in Southern California and says that our authors outnumber those of other States three to one. He further compliments us by saying that there are more good writers here than in any other State. He ought to know.

So he awards us first place not only in quality but in quantity. Poets are born here and some come in on Pullmans and brakebeams. Verse blossoms out on the police force and stories are as likely as not to be spun by street-car conductors. The rear end of a car is a great place to study human nature. Many who are professional men back East are collecting fares in California.

Mr. Lippincott locates our geniuses in cottages by the sea. However, they are found tucked away in mountain cabins and in flats in Hollywood and Pasadena. Every spot of Southern California seems to be prolific with romance. Every bit of clay feels a stir within. Half of the youngsters in school are practicing story writing. Day laborers are scratching down their thoughts and selling them for so much per.

The publisher suggests that our authors restrain their muses for a year or so and wait for the reading public to catch up. However, no Boulder Dam can be built to control the flood of ink. And the rattle of the riveter is drowned only by the click of the typewriter.

Bret Harte, Jack London and Zane Grey seem to have begun it. Western stories are always intriguing and the great Southwest is their perfect habitat. Indeed, Lew Wallace is said to have gotten his Palestinian scenes from New Mexico. Alaskan stories are written in Bear Valley and South Sea Islands are dreamed at Catalina.

The LEE SIDE O' LA
By Lee Shippey

Personal Glimpses of Famous Southlanders

BENJAMIN CHAMBERS BROWN has lived and worked in Pasadena for thirty years, but most of us do not know that he is the same Benjamin Brown whose pictures have been reproduced on Literary Digest and other magazine covers, who has been written of as one of the foremost painters of the West by International Studio and other art magazines, and six of whose pictures have been bought by the British Museum.

For Brown is a modest man living in a modest house, rejoicing in his work and in the flowers he has made grow. He is unmarried and lives with his mother and his brother, Howell. And though Benjamin Brown is 65 years old and his brother not a great deal younger, both still are mother's boys. If you ask either of them out to dinner they will hesitate and say: "Well, I'll ask mother."

Not long ago Benjamin was a guest at a diner in honor of a visiting artist, but excused himself before the dessert was served. It was time for dinner at his home, and he felt he had to be there to have dinner with his mother. Such deference and consideration are not demanded—it is the pleasure of both the "boys" to give them unasked.

Which gives one a hint of the loyalty and sweetness and devotion that are Benjamin Brown.

Paints California Landscapes

Though he has done much to make California landscapes widely known and was one of the founders and the second president of the California Art Club, Brown was born in Arkansas and studied art in St. Louis and in Paris. It is an interesting fact that when he first came here he was painting as he had been painting in Paris, pictures full of light and brightness. But then the fashion here was for quieter and more subdued effects, and he had to somewhat modify his style to make a living. Now fashion has swung around until the things he couldn't paint then are popular now.

But when Brown paints the wonderful colors of California wild flowers or deserts or mountains he does it so convincingly that even those who have never seen those marvels must believe them. And if, now and then, some doubting Thomas asserts that such color combinations never had been on land or sea Brown can bring out color photography to rout them utterly. For he is one of the most enthusiastic and successful color photographers we have.

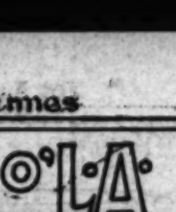
Some years ago an eastern man who had bought one of Brown's pictures wrote him that he wished to buy another for his collection, and would pay the express and insurance both ways if he would send him half a dozen from which to make a selection. That was just after Brown had won a $1000 prize and quite a string of medals, and his pictures were in such demand that he did not like to send that many away. So he began to experiment with color photography and it soon became his hobby. He has succeeded in getting effects more naturalistic and more artistic than those of any commercial color photographer's work we have seen. He produced lantern slides of his pictures which not only enabled his eastern customer to make a choice, but suggest innumerable commercial uses for color photography.

But with Brown this photography is a hobby, not a commerce. He has spent a fortune of time and money experimenting with it and has not attempted to make anything out of it. He takes delight in proving by it that the artists are right and their critics wrong. "People will believe photography when they doubt art," he says.

But he has dozens of color photographs which are exquisite works of art. Now that color photography is absorbing so many people, Brown's studio is the meeting place for many of our most gifted experimenters.

Morning Salons



Brown lives very quietly in Pasadena, but often he is up on his roof or out on the desert before dawn to capture the exact colors of sunrise with camera or with brush. And every Sunday morning all sorts and conditions of art lovers make a path to his door at just about the time the church bells ring—student artists, color photographers, tourists and sometimes millionaires. It is not a gathering of social climbers or dilettantes, but of enthusiasts, and whether they are artists, photographers printmakers or just appreciators, all learn something from Brown. He is too sincere to pose, too enthusiastic to hide his thoughts in conventional comments. He was the founder of the Printmakers' Society, which has branches in several countries and each year has an international exhibition here which is rated as the greatest of its kind in the world. The Literary Digest recently quoted "Benjamin C. Brown, the noted artist," as a foremost authority on California landscapes.

But he still is a simple, lovable gentleman who lives so quietly that many of his neighbors who live within a few blocks of him hardly know he is there. And when he is invited out to dinner he still makes his acceptance conditional on its being quite all right with mother.

ROCKING THE BOAT

BY FRED HOGUE

Protection is the fundamental principle of the American tariff laws. You have been reading for months in the daily press the travail through which the two houses of the American Congress have been passing to arrive at tariff schedules which will afford the greatest protection to American labor with the least increase in the cost of living.

Unless you have traveled as I have traveled, you still have an inadequate conception of what the American standard of living means. I have been in countries where the average monthly pay of a farm hand was less than that which an American farm hand receives for sixteen hours of labor. I have been in countries where the industrial worker received no more for ten days of labor than the American industrialist receives for one.

Protection of American agriculture and industry through adequate tariff schedules is not a party issue, but a national issue. Only demagogues, charlatans and those who know maxims but not markets try to make it a political issue.

The second enactment placed on the statute books of the United States was an act for levying duties on "foreign goods, wares and merchandise." According to the preamble, it was an act "for the support of the government and the discharge of the debts of the United States and for the encouragement and protection of manufactures." Washington gave to this act his unreserved approval. The year was 1789. The vote for the first tariff bill was unanimous in the Senate; but it had not passed the lower house without opposition and debate. The British Ambassador, the French Ambassador, the Russian Ambassador, the Austrian Ambassador and the Prussian Ambassador were opposed to it, and their opposition was voiced in covert threats. The European powers would not permit the young republic to discriminate against the products of their industries.

Courage was necessary to persist, for the population and the aggregate wealth of the thirteen American States were less than the population and the aggregate wealth of the single State of California at the present time. But courage was not lacking in the generation that had fought the Revolution to a successful conclusion. When a vote was taken, the first tariff bill passed the House of Representatives by a majority of five to one; and when it came to the Senate, the vote was unanimous.

How history repeats itself! When I opened my copy of the Los Angeles Times last Tuesday morning I read the following in an Associated Press dispatch from Louisville, Ky.:

"A virulent attack on the pending tariff bill as threatening the peace of the world . . . occupied tonight's session of the League of Women Voters' tenth anniversary convention.

"Dr. John Gray of Washington, D. C., was telling the women students of living costs, that the tariff would increase their board and clothes bill and tend toward another world war.

"'The most outrageous tariff bill ever proposed by any nation,' Dr. Gray termed it. He cited the sugar schedule as the 'most objectionable item.' But such 'domestic evils,' he added, 'sink into insignificance compared to international relations and the peace of the world.' Reporting that M. Briand (of France) is this month sending a questionnaire to twenty-eight nations asking if they are willing to join in an alliance to counteract our tariff policy, Dr. Gray declared it an 'accepted belief' among them that they cannot pay reparation if the American tariff policy is to limit their market for exports.

"A 'wholesale repudiation,' he prophesied, 'would probably result in a world war and destruction of civilization.'

"'It is time for you to set a halt to such madness,' he told the women voters."

There you have it. A coalition of European Powers is going to wipe the United States off the political map, is going to deprive us of the right and privilege of self-government, if we are so foolhardy as to enact tariff schedules of which Europe does not approve.

The first insidious attack is made on the women voters. Their fathers, husbands, sons and brothers might become involved in a world war if the present tariff bill were to become a law. It is a repetition of the threat made nearly 150 years ago.

Do Dr. Gray and his European clientele imagine that there has been a deterioration in the patriotic spirit of the American women during the last 150 years so marked that they will be deterred by a threat from supporting legislation absolutely essential to the maintenance of the American standard of living?

I have personally investigated the living conditions in industrial communities on the Thames, the Mersey, the Clyde, the Seine, the Rhone, the Rhine, the Elbe and its tributaries, the Danube, the Yalu, the Yangste and the Hoang-ho, and I consider it a privilege to pay the price of living under the American standard.

During a century and a half under a protective tariff the United States has become the wealthiest, the most prosperous among the world powers. Conditions under the worst financial depression the present generation has ever known would be considered undreamed of prosperity in almost any other country, and I cannot conceive that our women voters are in a mood to lead a revolt against our own prosperity.

It is true that, under a policy of free trade, we could buy, theoretically, much of what we now consume for less. But it would be only in theory. What would be the benefit of reduced prices to an American workman out of a job?

The wages of every workman must be paid by the thing he produces.

If the material consumed in making a pair of shoes costs $1 and that grade of shoes will sell in the wholesale market for $4 the manufacturer can pay the workman about $2 for making the shoes; for about $1 will be consumed by overhead expense, including marketing.

If he could secure the labor for $1 less, the manufacturer could sell them for $1 less. Before he can pay the workman $1 more, the market price of the shoes must advance $1.

When an English, French or German manufacturer secures his labor for $1 less per pair, he can sell the shoes for a dollar less than the American manufacturer and still make a fair profit.

In order to keep the American factory operating and to preserve the American standard of wages the government must levy a protective duty of $1 on each pair of foreign-made shoes of this grade cast upon the American market.

Advocates of free trade assert that tariffs are barriers to world commerce and industry, that we would fare better if wages were lower and the cost of living lower. But this theory is flatly contradicted by practice. During a century and a half of protection and high wages the prosperity of the United States has been proverbial. Before the World War Great Britain adhered to the free-trade policy and Great Britain is still enthusiastic for free trade—in other countries. But since the war Great Britain has found it necessary, for the protection of her own workmen, to erect tariff barriers against foreign-made goods.

One might be led to think so by following Briand and Dr. Gray. Europe cannot make its reparation payments if we persist in limiting through our protective tariff the exports of the European countries to the United States! Do they imagine our women are so stupid, so uninformed as to believe that?

The United States bought more foreign products last year than any other country in the world. We paid more in two weeks for foreign goods than we received in war loan repayments during the twelve months. We collected less than $500,000,000 in tariffs on imports totaling more than $4,000,000,000.

Does Europe imagine it can demolish the American tariff wall with a bomb and open a free passage to American markets with machine-gun fire?

Despite the braying of a few asses in Europe and in our own country, the European peoples are not so bent on self-destruction.

Due to cheap labor costs and cheap water transportation Mediterranean oranges can be delivered at the port of New York for the cost of transportation alone in refrigerator cars across the American continent. In order to preserve a market for our oranges the tariff must about equal the entire cost of production to the California orange grower. Remove that tariff and you destroy the California and Florida citrus-fruit industry.

In other States are other industries that can continue to pay the present rate of wages only on condition that they are protected by tariff schedules from the competition of cheap labor abroad. In return for the protection we receive for our citrus fruits and for the products of our rapidly growing industrial communities, we must join in providing protection for the products of the East, the South, the Middle West and the Northwest. To live, we must let live. The industrial units of the country must unite in one composite whole.

Only those who have studied industrial conditions in other countries appreciate fully the superiority of the American standard of living. It is worth the sacrifices we make for it. Rather than abandon it, it is worth fighting for. It comes high, but it is the best bargain in the world today. It is a privilege that can only be preserved by eternal vigilance and industry.

Billion on Scrap Heap

An insurance company estimates the people of the United States in the last ten years have thrown more than $12,000,000,000 worth of automobiles on the scrap heap. That means more than 15,000,000 cars which cost on the average $800 each. Inasmuch as motor manufacturers made some $26,000,000,000 worth of cars in the last ten years, one can see that there are $14,000,000,000 worth of them still going. Somebody must have money.—(Capper's Weekly.

WHAT OTHERS THINK ABOUT IT

THE CRIME COMMISSION

[New York Sun]

It was with the utmost reluctance that the Legislature in its closing hours decided to give to the State Crime Commission a lease on life for another year. This is something which ought to be remembered by business men, leaders of organizations interested in law reform and all others who are more concerned about development of a workable criminal code in this State than about perpetuating professional advantages enjoyed by attorneys practicing in the criminal courts.

Following precedent, lawyer-legislators defeated most of the important Crime Commission bills. Notable among these was the bill creating the offense of false swearing, the bill permitting a prosecutor to impeach his own witness, the bill allowing a prosecutor to comment on the refusal of a defendant to take the witness stand to testify in his own behalf. The first of these was intended to break up the practice of false swearing in legal proceedings; it would have made it comparatively easy to punish those proved guilty of this abuse; the others were intended to prevent a criminal from invoking antiquated rules of evidence to help him escape conviction. None of the three placed in jeopardy any right an innocent man might have; they were designed to keep the guilty from hiding behind a false pretense of innocence.

Nobody wishes any reasonable safeguard of the innocent to be abandoned. But under our complicated criminal system safeguards that once seemed reasonable have now become part of the machinery by which crooks able to hire skillful lawyers manage to escape deserved punishment.

There is no reason why any person who knowingly and deliberately swears falsely should not be punished for it. There is no reason why an innocent person accused of a crime should be unwilling to get up in court and tell his story or why, if he does refuse to do so, the prosecution should not draw the jury's attention to that refusal. There is no reason why a prosecuting attorney should not be allowed to cross-examine one of his own witnesses who gets on the stand and testifies to what the prosecutor knows or believes to be false.

WHAT, NO WELCOME?

[New York World]

Arriving day before yesterday on the S. S. Araguaya were Messrs. William Alexander, Lewis A. Yancey and Zeh Bouck, who flew some days ago to the Island of Bermuda. And what we should like to know is why these gentlemen were not given a welcome, a rousing municipal welcome such as we used to have in the good old days of yore.

For some time, as we have pointed out before, it has been apparent that such a celebration is what this city needs, even more than it needs a good 5-cent cigar. That being the case, it would seem that a bad oversight was made in the case of these flyers. Certainly they furnished the best excuse for a celebration that we have had in a long time, and certainly they are up to the standard we became accustomed to in the past; flying to Bermuda may not be as difficult as licking Jack Dempsey, but it is just as difficult as flying halfway to France, that being the feat of one of the recipients of our homage, and a great deal more difficult than indorsing facial preparations for the kiddies and good old Humania, that being the feat of another.

RIPPLING RHYMES by Walt Mason
BEEF STEW
The inmates of a penitentiary grew mutinous in their cells for oftentimes, and often, the beef stew was on the bill of fare. They lined up in the corridors and made the warden understand that they would not do duty's call, unless they got some dish were common. They had beef stew in winter, when they'd had it hot, and in summer, cold; it had been cooked in pies, in other fashions manifold. The warden called the merry men, this joint has got a fair rengwn; it is an elegant pen, where none's ever beaten down. Here hospitality ways is on tap, we're glad to welcome by love than hate, and we'll treat him a lucky chap who gets inside our prison gate. We are an ungrateful set, whom no kindness can beget; you stand and knock us down with beef stew, the best that's served in any jail. Our meals are prepared by gifted cooks, who learned their trade in swell hotels; it is too good for the crooks who should chew their grub in their cells. We cut out the beef-ness from this stew, and the boiled policy will not bamboozle you; we smash the crock with a sledge, and say our bill of fare gives you pain." The warden, from his point of view, was talking rot, I admit, for well he knew that the pen's beef stew was the finest yet to make a hit. Beef stew, when properly prepared, is good enough for any king, and rich enough for prince or lord; it should to all mankind bring. But even such a dish, if dished up every day, will put the kibosh on bliss and drive all pleasant thoughts away. So the savage convict host, with no signs of wrath subdued, they could have stood the beef stew toast three times a week in relief.

DOGGY FILM MAKES HOWLING HIT

Cinema Canines and News Hounds Preview "Barkie"

Anita Page Plays Hostess

The only dog preview of a motion picture ever given found Miss Page, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer player, presiding at the tea table for the guests, where hamburger was served. "The Dogville Murder Mystery," with all canine actors, was run for the first time for critics, motion-picture stars and their dogs.

FILMDOM'S doggiest preview was a howling success, according to the cinema canines and news hounds who attended the first all-animal premiere in the history of motion pictures recently.

On invitation of Jiggs, canine star, several score of pups attended the showing of the latest barkie, "The Dogville Murder Mystery," in the sound-projection room at the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio, later being entertained at a hamburger luncheon served on the lawn.

Following the preview, Directors Zion Myers and Jules White introduced Jiggs, Buster, Pepper and Oscar, members of the cast.

Included among the guests were Karl Dane's police pup, Charles Bickford's wolf hound, Anita Page's police dog, W. S. Van Dyke's South Sea Island hunting hound and a half-dozen of Jiggs's offspring who assisted in taking bows and woofs.

During the showing of the barkie, the visiting dogs were polite and well behaved until a fight developed on the screen. Fortunately, however, the screen was against a solid wall.

"The Dogville Murder Mystery" is the third barkie made by the dogs following "College Hounds" and "Hot Dogs."

AUTHORESS TO BE GIVEN NO FUNERAL

Friends of Lorna Moon Will Respect Her Wish in This Regard

Because of her great dislike for funerals, friends of Miss Lorna Moon, writer, who died in Albuquerque, N. M., on Friday, of tuberculosis, will respect her wishes and let her passing go unmarked by ceremony of any kind, it was announced yesterday.

The body of the authoress reached Los Angeles last night over the Santa Fe Railway. There will be no services, but a few of her close friends have made arrangements for cremation, following which the ashes will be sent to her mother in Aberdeen, Scotland.

Miss Moon, who was 31 years of age, was stricken with tuberculosis several years ago and only nine days ago she had gone to the desert in the hope of regaining her health. She continued her writing during the years of her struggle against the disease and it was while she was confined to her room that she wrote "Dark Star," which was probably the best known of her works. By a strange coincidence the last short story which she wrote dealt with death and particularly brought out her dislike of and disbelief in funerals.

Police Murder Clew Given by Taxicab Driver

The asserted confession of a man known only as O'Leary said to have been made to a taxicab driver, that he acted as lookout in the slaying of Officer Peter Muller, Jr., early on the morning of April 13, yesterday gave detectives their first tangible clew to the identity of the killers.

Muller was shot through the heart in front of 1116 South Flower street, supposedly by either bandits or bootleggers when he attempted to stop them for questioning. He died at Georgia-street Receiving Hospital without regaining consciousness.

The driver said he hauled the mysterious O'Leary to his own apartment on the morning of the murder where he and his fare had a few drinks. It was at this time that the purported confession was made, according to police. Later, the taxi driver said, he took the man to a South Main-street hotel.

Police have worked on the theory that the killing was done by members of a hi-jackers' ring. Several suspects have been questioned but thus far detectives have been unable to obtain any definite clews.

COST MAP PRESENTED

City Engineer Jessup yesterday submitted to the City Council the assessment district map for the improvement of streets in the Le Doux Road and Gregory Way district. It was referred to the Public Works Committee.

Lumber Official Dies on Voyage

News of the death on board the ship on April 27, while off the Central American Coast, of Peter C. McNevin, general salesmanager of the Pacific Lumber Company, was brought yesterday morning by the Panama-Pacific liner California, upon her arrival from New York.

Mr. McNevin, who died suddenly from heart disease, had his home in San Francisco and was one of the leading figures in the Pacific Coast lumber industry. He leaves his widow, a passenger aboard the California at the time of his death; a daughter, Lillian, living in Beverly Hills; and two sisters, Mrs. R. H. Elliott, of Beverly Hills, and Mrs. F. T. Duncan of San Francisco. The body is being sent to San Francisco for burial.

ORDINANCES FOR STREETS SUBMITTED

During the past week City Engineer Jessup submitted to the City Council the ordinances of intention for the improvement of streets in the Sixty-eighth-street and Denker-avenue district and for the improvement with permanent pavement, curbs, sidewalks, gutters, sewers, water system, storm drain and ornamental lighting system of the streets in the Olive-street and Twenty-second-street district.

PLUNDER IN ROBBERIES RECOVERED

Articles Valued at $5000 Seized by Police After Arrest of Negro

Plunder ranging from a pair of binoculars to suit cases and trunkfuls of wearing apparel was recovered by Detective Lieutenants Beeson, Wilde and Burris yesterday following the arrest of William N. Brown, 40 years of age, Negro, who conducts an auto-painting establishment at 1257 Arapahoe street.

The plunder, estimated at more than $5000 in value, was found concealed in the rear and in a loft at Brown's place, the detectives said. Most of it is believed to have been stolen by thieves who specialize on jimmying parked automobiles.

Included in the recovered property are more than a dozen suit cases, hat boxes, a vacuum cleaner, a baseball uniform, several expensive kodaks, a woman's evening gown and a motley collection of other articles.

Motorists whose cars have been robbed are asked by Capt. Lynn of the burglary detail to call at the property clerk's office at Central Station to identify their property.

Meanwhile, Brown is booked on a charge of suspicion of burglary.

Members of the Chamber of Commerce excursion to Alaska, scheduled to leave here on June 5, next, will be given a glimpse of the north country's various industries as a result of preparations now being made by the United States Department of the Interior to welcome the visitors, according to word received here yesterday.

In a letter to Charles P. Bayer, field secretary of the chamber, who will conduct the tour, E. W. Sawyer, representing the department in Alaska, said that arrangements are being made to give members of the tour party an opportunity to visit fur farms, view the reindeer industry and inspect newly developed coal districts.

Dedication Ceremonies for New Institution on Fountain Avenue Revealed

Plans have just been announced for the dedication ceremonies of the newly completed home of the Cedars of Lebanon Hospital at 4833 Fountain avenue. On Sunday, the 11th inst., at 2 p.m. at the hospital the public is invited to services, after which the building will be open for inspection.

Ben R. Meyer, treasurer of the organization, will preside and there will be brief remarks by Dr. D. W. Edelman, chairman of the medical staff; William Lacy, president of the Community Chest; Dr. George Parrish, city health commissioner; J. Y. Baruh, chairman of the finance committee; Oscar Lawler, Louis B. Mayer and Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin.

Formal presentation of the building will be made by J. Eisner, chairman of the building committee, and it will be accepted by Lemuel Goldwater, president of the hospital. The ceremonies will conclude with a short address by George Mosbacher, president of the Federation of Jewish Welfare Organizations.

It represents a total investment of approximately $1,600,000. It is nonsectarian and in addition to its regular hospital service will conduct a free clinic. There are accommodations for about 275 patients.

On Saturday, the 10th inst., and on Monday, the 12th inst., which is National Hospital Day, the new building will be given over to a private inspection by members of the medical, nurses and hospital professions and it will be ready to receive patients on the 14th inst.

Tickets for the concert are available at Fitzgerald Music Company, May Company, Platt Music Company and Gittelson Brothers.

The Southern California Association for the Blind, Inc., is a nonprofit, nonsectarian organization established several years ago through a special fund for the needy blind of Southern California. Its aims are to provide them with opportunities for self-support and recreation. Another object of the association is to establish and maintain a home for the blind in Southern California.

Car Plates Back Bad Check Flood

A good citizen does not write bad checks, which explains why W. D. Potter, of 935 Venizia avenue, complained to Venice police yesterday.

On April 19, Potter said, the license plates were stolen from his car and three days later he received a note from the thieves stating that the plates were to be used for purposes of "identification" in cashing worthless checks. A day or so later a veritable parade of policemen to the Potter home was begun. The checks were the reason.

The situation was further complicated when Potter replaced the stolen plates with others bearing identical numerals. Now police are trying to locate the machine bearing the stolen numbers.

Meanwhile the check-writers are doing a brisk business, police assert.

Barbecue King Has Celebration

Jose Romero, known as the barbecue king of Southern California, yesterday celebrated his seventy-ninth birthday with a dinner of his own making at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jose Gonzales in Indio. Romero was born at San Diego, but came to Los Angeles with his parents when 1 years of age and has since made his home here.

He is the father of fourteen children, four of whom are living. Among them is Detective Edward Romero.

Tablet to Tell History of Tree

A bronze tablet commemorating the historic importance of an old sycamore tree near the entrance to Forest Lawn Memorial Park will be placed with ceremonies the 11th inst. by Daughters of the American Revolution.

The tree, situated within a few feet of the boundary line between Los Angeles and Glendale, is believed to be more than 300 years old. When the historic old Rancho San Rafael was broken up into parcels, virtually all of the surveyors' lines started from the old sycamore tree, which still bears the marks and spikes placed by the engineers.

Mrs. W. L. Jencks is chairman of the committee in charge of plans for the tablet unveiling.

Continuous City Court Opposed

City Attorney Werner yesterday filed with the City Council his opinion that the proposed scheme for the establishment of a twenty-four-hour Municipal Court is impractical and excessive in expense. He estimates that the extra cost will amount to $72,000 a year.

The Council referred his opinion to the Police and Fire Committee for consideration.

A Beauty Shampoo in 10 Minutes

Only thorough shampooing will ... remove this film ... and let the sparkle, and rich, natural ... color tones ... of the hair show.

Ordinary washing fails to satisfactorily remove this film, because—it does not clean the hair properly.

Besides—the hair cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali, in ordinary soaps, soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why women, by the thousands, who value beautiful hair, are using Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo. It cleanses so thoroughly; is so mild and so pure, that it cannot possibly injure, no matter how often you use it.

You will notice the difference in the appearance of your hair the very first time you use Mulsified, for it will feel so delightfully clean, and be so soft, silky, and fresh-looking.

Try a Mulsified "Beauty Shampoo" and just see how quickly it is done. See how easy your hair is to manage, and how lovely and alluring it will look. See it sparkle—with new life, gloss and lustre.

You can get Mulsified Cocoanut Oil Shampoo at any drug store, or toilet goods counter, ... anywhere in the world.

WONG'S MURDER CASE END NEAR

State Completes Testimony on Slaying of Chinese

Japanese Being Tried for Pasadena Shooting

Negro Codefendants Plead Guilty to Felony

Completing the introduction of evidence, Wayne E. Jordan, deputy District Attorney prosecuting Frank Shiraishi, Japanese, charged with the murder of Bing Wong, Pasadena Chinese, yesterday rested his case in Superior Judge Hardy's court and announced that the State will proceed with its arguments tomorrow.

Shiraishi has been on trial for ten days. When he went to trial Theodore Albritton and Benjamin Smith, colored, were co-defendants, but they pleaded guilty to a charge of first-degree murder and were sentenced to life imprisonment. They then testified for the State.

NO INTERRUPTIONS

Before court adjourned the prosecution entered into a stipulation with Newton Kendall and John S. Cooper, defense attorneys, in which it was agreed that neither side would interrupt the other during arguments to the jury. Objections will not be made until the argument is finished.

The complaint against Shiraishi charges that he, Albritton and Smith entered Wong's asserted gambling establishment in Pasadena and that one of them shot him down when they attempted to rob him and he fled toward a rear door. According to Albritton and Smith's own admissions they do not know who fired the fatal shot.

BULLET HOLE SHOWN

Albritton testified that he fired one shot, but aimed it toward the alley so that it would not injure Wong.

A street sign found in the alley outside Wong's establishment was introduced in evidence because of a bullet hole found in it. Expert testimony was then given that the bullet hole was made by the same caliber bullet as fired from Albritton's gun.

ALBANIAN PROGRESS RELATED

American Aide to Balkan Monarch Thinks Nation Holds Key to Peace

A romantic tale of the Balkans was unfolded yesterday by Dr. C. Telford Erickson, national director of agriculture for Albania, as he recounted his twenty-two years' experience in the tiny war-torn country.

DR. C. TELFORD ERICKSON

Dr. Erickson sailed for Honolulu at noon aboard the Lasco liner City of Los Angeles for a month's vacation before returning to the little kingdom in the mountains above the Adriatic.

Albania, under Turkish thralldom from 1467 until the post-war upheaval gave it identity in 1919, has a history that is Europe's greatest romance, according to Dr. Erickson. In the nine years of the new kingdom's existence, according to Dr. Erickson, it has been changed by dogged work of the people from a country wrecked by war to a nation blossoming under modern agriculture and industry.

"When I first went out there in 1908 I was put in prison repeatedly and finally exiled to Monastir because the Turks forbid education of their Albanian subjects," he said.

Under youthful King Zogu I, Dr. Erickson has established a scientific agricultural system.

He believes that Albania is the key to the peace of Europe.

"It is very vital to Europe's safety that the kingdom be kept intact under its own rule," he said, "because its location at the head of the Adriatic is of great strategical value. Italy, of course, has envious eyes on Albania and so has Jugo-Slavia. If either of these nations secure control of the little kingdom there must be war.

Dr. Erickson is a graduate of De Pauw University, Boston College and Yale.

London Actor Here for Films

The diminutive London actor, Frederick Bentley, arrived at Los Angeles on the Lasco liner Calawaii yesterday to write and act his own "Bentley Talky Shorts" at Hollywood.

Bentley has been playing in "Show Boat" and "New Moon" in Australia, after a long run in "Better Days" in the London Hippodrome.

He said he will write his own skits for his short talkies, as he did in silent films in England. Mrs. Bentley and her sister, Florence Lambeth, accompany him.

CATHEDRAL ALUMNI OFFICERS ELECTED

New officers of the Cathedral Alumni Association of Immaculate Heart College were announced yesterday. They are Mrs. Mary Rafferty Dashler, president; Miss Gertrude McCarthy, first vice-president; Mrs. Marie Schellenbach Hill, second vice-president; Mrs. Julia Cronin St. Pierre, secretary, and Sister Mary Reginald, treasurer. All were named at the annual banquet held April 27 in Federated Alumni Hall at which Rev. John Moclair, resident chaplain at the college, Very Rev. Mgr. Conaty, Rev. Edward Kirk and Rev. Daniel Keenan were guests of honor.

Mixed Marathon Contestants at Hawthorne Stagger On

Dazed, Dizzy But Determined

THEY call it the super-marathon, that endurance contest of dancing, walking and skating, which has been going out at Hawthorne since March 4, last. For more than 1300 hours ten half-dazed young men and women have been struggling to win a grand prize of $1000.

The rules and regulations of the contest say the competitors must remain in motion forty-five minutes out of every hour. Eleven minutes they are allowed in each hour to sleep on an army cot. Then comes the wild shriek of a siren calling them back to the dance floor. It takes every minute of the remaining four and often a cake of ice to awaken them for the resumption of their grind.

BROKERAGE ENTERPRIZE SCRUTINIZED

Neve & Co. Investigated by District Attorney as Result of Complaints

Operations of the Neve & Co. brokerage house at 704 South Spring street yesterday were being conducted by a trustee, A. K. Gallaudet, according to the District Attorney's office, which is conducting an investigation of the concern. Dave Clark, chief of Dist.-Atty. Fitts's complaint department, reports the affairs of the company have been under investigation since Monday.

After receiving complaints from five investors, Clark questioned F. H. Neve, president of the company, who is said to have asked for time to adjust his affairs. The District Attorney's office yesterday reported Neve as absent from the city, as was H. A. Davis, his partner. Gallaudet was in charge as a trustee.

A total loss of $10,000 was asserted by the five investors. Neve told Clark he has sufficient assets to cover any loss that might be sustained. It is reported by the officials that Neve was selling bonds on a twenty-payment plan. No complaint has been issued against any member of the concern.

NEW PHONE BOARD NOW IN SERVICE

Long-Distance Calls Put Through While Caller Holds Receiver

A new $2,000,000 telephone switchboard for handling long-distance calls went into service here last night. According to M. L. Stannard, division manager of the Southern California Telephone Company, the new long-distance office, located at 433 South Olive street, and the recently completed outside construction work on the Pacific Coast and transcontinental circuits represent an expenditure in the neighborhood of $6,000,000. One result of the new system will be the completion of telephone calls to distances as far as New York while the calling party holds the receiver.

It is estimated that more than 30,000 incoming and outgoing intercity calls will be handled daily at the outset. The facilities occupy three floors of the largest telephone equipment building in the city. There are positions for 214 operators at the switchboards who will handle approximately 4300 calls an hour during the rush hours of the day, Stannard said. A force of 700 operators is required at the switchboards each twenty-four hours. The girls complete about 85 per cent of all long-distance calls, regardless of their destination, in a few seconds while the calling party waits on the line.

SOUTHLAND LURES COMPOSER

Permanent Home Will be Made Here

Musical Colony Augmented
Mr. and Mrs. Jerome Kern and daughter Elizabeth, who arrived from New York yesterday.

TALKING pictures yesterday brought another noted New York composer to Los Angeles as a permanent resident. He is Jerome Kern, whose latest fame has come from the score he wrote for "Show Boat."

He arrived from New York aboard the Panama-Pacific liner California with the news that he has just sold his famous collection of 1500 rare books at public auction for $1,750,000.

Mr. Kern, accompanied by Mrs. Kern and their daughter, Elizabeth, is here to begin work at the First National studios on two new operettas.

THIRD MAN ACCUSED OF SMUGGLING

Prisoner Already Under Indictment in Another Alien Running Case

As the result of the capture Friday by Federal immigration authorities on a road near Chino of two sedans containing six Chinamen and two white men who are accused of smuggling the Chinese into the United States, Immigration Inspector Devine yesterday arrested John Frank Smith, Jr. He was placed in the County Jail as a Federal prisoner on a charge of smuggling.

The other two men were taken to the County Jail Friday along with the six Chinese and are being held on charges of smuggling aliens. They gave their names as Arnold Fitzgerald of 636 North Plymouth Boulevard and James Holland of 651 North Bronson avenue.

Smith had been at liberty on bail given after he was indicted March 28, last, by the local Federal grand jury for conspiracy to violate the Immigration Act by attempting to smuggle nine Chinese into the United States March 12, last. With him were indicted George E. Flaherty and Eddie Collins, who were said, to be the owner and pilot of an airplane in which the Chinese were to be brought over the border. This trio were to come to trial on this indictment last Friday, but a continuance was gained until tomorrow.

When taken to the County Jail yesterday, Smith gave his name as Jack Harris, Jr., of 829 South Bonnie Brae street, but the arresting officers said identification records showed Smith and Harris to be the same.

Lecturer Cites Keen Interest in Southland

Dr. Fort A. Carpenter, manager of the meteorological and aeronautical department of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, back from a month of lecturing in the East and Middle West, finds the public interest in Southern California as keen as ever.

"The interest in this section of America is tremendous. Everyone wanted to know about conditions and any information given was eagerly received," he said yesterday. "I spoke at Northwestern University and at the Roger Babson Institute in Boston.

"I was at Washington for a week and it is my personal opinion that President Hoover has the American public solidly behind him.

"Unemployment is more noticeable in New England. In New York conditions were excellent."

Street Name Plea Referred

The City Council yesterday referred to the City Planning Committee the recommendation of the Realty Board that street names and numbers be painted upon the curbs. The board suggests that the street names be followed by the block number, as "Vermont avenue—500 block," and that house numbers also be painted on the curbs.

The board recommends that the cost be defrayed from general tax funds.

POISON VICTIM RECOVERING

Mrs. Louise Mozini, 26 years of age, 1253 South Brannick street, Belvedere, yesterday was recovering from an attempt to take her own life by drinking poison late Friday night, according to a Sheriff's report. The woman, according to deputy sheriffs, drank the poison in front of her house following an argument with her estranged husband. She was given emergency treatment at the Belvedere Health Center.

Busy Bees Forget to Advertise

State Inspector Claims Product Not Pushed as It Should Be

SACRAMENTO, May 3. (AP)—The honey bees of California are so busy minding their own business that they neglect to advertise, declared F. E. Todd, State bee inspector.

California produces 16,000,000 pounds of honey annually, Todd said, or about one-tenth of the American crop, but the ratio of honey to other sweets consumed by the American people is amazingly low.

"For every pound of honey consumed in America more than three pounds of jams or jellies and more than fifteen pounds of syrups are consumed," Tood declared, "and for each spoonful of honey about 185 spoonfuls of sugar are used in various ways."

While 97 per cent of persons questioned say they prefer honey to other sweets, Todd said, only 22 per cent buy honey as regularly as competing products; 44 per cent buy it occasionally and 7 per cent never buy it.

Improved Law School Planned at Santa Clara

SANTA CLARA, May 3. (Exclusive)—The University of Santa Clara will reorganize its college of law to conduct all classes as day classes under a corps of full-time professors, according to Father William Gianera, dean of the university.

The new program which is expected to advance the college of law to a position among the major law colleges of the West will become effective, it was stated, at the opening of the fall semester, August 15.

Under the new system students, as heretofore, will complete their law course in six years, three years being devoted to prelegal and three years to legal study.

Adoption by Santa Clara of a system of day classes follows the plan formulated by the American Bar Association for development of major law schools.

DIRIGIBLES PLANNED

MOSCOW, May 3. (AP)—The State Planning Commission has decided to build two small training semirigid dirigibles this year as part of the aviation program. The ships will be of soviet design and materials.

Forgery Arrest Accredited to Bad Conscience

A troubled conscience ascribed to an asserted 3-year-old $3000 forgery committed in San Francisco, caused the arrest last night of John P. Gilder, 32 years of age, when Officers Hoffman and Malburn of the Georgia-street Police Station accosted him as he alighted from a San Francisco stage.

According to the police report of the arrest, the officers had received an anonymous tip that Gilder would arrive on the stage with a quantity of narcotics, but when he was questioned by the two detectives he told them of the forgery of $3000 in San Francisco city pay warrants three years ago, and although the police had no record that the man was wanted by San Francisco, he was booked at the Georgia-street station on a suspicion of forgery.

Mrs. Ince Weds Holmes Herbert

Mrs. Elinor Kershaw Ince, widow of Thomas Ince, motion-picture director, was married to Holmes Herbert, actor, yesterday afternoon at the Ince home, 1003 Summit Drive, Beverly Hills, with only members of the family present. Mr. and Mrs. William Goodahall were the attendants and the ceremony was performed by Dr. O'Dell of the Beverly Hills Community Church.

The couple left last night for a ten-day honeymoon trip to Del Monte.

By her marriage to the motion-picture actor Mrs. Ince loses her interest in the principal of her husband's estate, said to be valued at close to $2,000,000. Ince's will contained a stipulation that his widow should lose the principal and receive only the income if she married within a seven-year period. The seven years are not up until 1931.

POTATO KING CROWNED

First In the Morning

First in Morning Circulation!
First in News and Advertising!
First in Rate of Growth!

THE LOS ANGELES TIMES has a larger morning circulation, both in the city of Los Angeles and in the whole 2000 square miles from San Bernardino to Chatsworth Park, than any other Los Angeles newspaper.

Times morning circulation not only stands first in the sheer quantity of copies printed and sold, but when these copies are translated into readers—buyers—purchasing power—its morning supremacy is overwhelming.

92% of The Times 40-mile circulation is delivered by its own carriers, and an additional 5% is distributed by independent carriers and dealers. So far as known this is the highest home-delivered ratio of any metropolitan newspaper in the United States. It means that copies of the Los Angeles Times represent families rather than individuals, and in most cases the paper is read by all adults in the household.

This substantial coverage manifestly cannot be compared to street sales, the value of which depends on time, place and circumstance. Of street-sold morning papers, the majority are bought by people who are on their way to work, hence such copies never are seen by the wives and daughters at home. Equally small in advertising value are the more than 200,000 copies of Los Angeles afternoon papers having an official press-time from 8:59 a.m. to 12:52 p.m.—for common observation shows that these early editions are chiefly bought for the front page headlines.

In the number of homes to which delivered—and consequently in the number of adult consumers reached—Times circulation vastly exceeds every other local newspaper circulation, morning or evening.

But the Los Angeles Times furnishes something more than home coverage and morning supremacy. As shown below, it furnishes the dynamic leadership of GROWTH.

CIRCULATION HIGH-LIGHTS

—Los Angeles newspaper circulations compared with a year ago, taken from sworn statements to the United States Post Office. As the Post Office requires that daily and Sunday circulations be averaged together, The Times also shows its gain separated into daily gain and Sunday gain. This makes it possible to compare the week-day Times on an absolutely equal basis with other week-day newspapers.

Los Angeles Times, Sunday only	GAIN 16,451
Los Angeles Times, daily only	GAIN 8,107
Los Angeles Times, daily-Sunday combined	GAIN 9,300
2nd Paper, afternoon	GAIN 4,319
3rd Paper, afternoon	GAIN 2,893
4th Paper, morning and Sunday	GAIN 2,887
5th Paper, morning	LOSS 558
6th Paper, afternoon	LOSS 5,640

The Times, WITHOUT ITS SUNDAY EDITION, gained over twice as much as the second morning paper WITH ITS SUNDAY AND DAILY GAINS COMBINED.

SOCIAL TRENDS OF CITY TRACED

S. C. Statistics Show Growth of Education Here

Library Activity Also Gains, Survey Reveals

Marriage Licenses Not in Step With Population

Data relating to health, domestic relations, population, education, social habits, social welfare, crime, marriages, foreign-born, territorial growth, comparative ages of residents, occupations and dependency are included in the third annual survey of a social statistical summary of Los Angeles which has just been completed by the sociological research laboratory of the school of social welfare of the University of Southern California.

Compiled from official sources by Dr. Pauline V. Young of the S. C. department of sociology, the summary shows social conditions by means of statistics throughout Los Angeles county during the last ten years.

EDUCATION GAINS

Average daily school attendance in Los Angeles schools shows an increase of 3.55 per cent for 1929-1930 over the preceding year. Of the total of 215,211 children in attendance, 139,659 are in elementary schools, 15,909 in kindergarten and 59,643 are going to the junior and senior high schools in the city. Operating costs per capita are placed at $58.83, while capital outlay per capita is $35.07.

Students registered in colleges in the Southland increased from 7847 in 1920 to 26,201 in 1929, a steady increase being noted throughout each of the ten years, the summary reveals.

Along with this increased interest in education, it is noted that the Los Angeles Public Library has grown from an institution supporting thirty-five branches, 194 employees and serving 130,641 borrowers in 1919-1920, to one with forty-seven branches and a staff of 371 trained to meet the demands of 363,- book borrowers in 1928-1929.

FIGURES ON CRIME

Outdoor relief during 1928-1929 entailed an expenditure of $1,956,-, care of juvenile wards, $445,-, and reform schools, $113,212. During this same period prisoners earned $19,854 as a result of constructive work, the compilation discloses.

Other figures show that of 305,- total arrests, 208,942 persons were given traffic citations in 1929; cases of intoxication numbered 15,- as against 12,083 recorded in 1919, and that 1553 robberies, 1576 burglaries and 9872 automobile thefts were apprehended during the same twelve-month period.

In Los Angeles county there has been a steady increase in marriage licenses issued for the last twenty years, 5662 licenses were recorded in 1910, 11,514 in 1920 and 19,650 in 1929. They show a decrease, however, when compared with the increase in population, which reveals that the rate of marriages has been on the decline since 1923, even though the three-day State marriage law did not go into effect until 1927.

JACOBSON HITS AT 'GAS' ISSUE PLAN

Steckel Lauded for His Stand on Supplying Fuel for Councilmanic Cars

Councilman Jacobson yesterday vigorously denied that he ever obtained any gasoline from police stations pumps, adding that he believes Chief of Police Steckel to be taking the proper attitude in refusing to Mayor Porter for a change in the practice.

More than a year ago the Police Commission empowered the chief to issue gasoline to members of the Council for their private cars, when used in public business driving about their districts. Several have taken advantage of this permission. Recently, City Controller Ivy wrote to Chief Steckel concerning the practice of issuing city gasoline to policemen for their private cars, to be used in patrolling their beats when there was a lack of Department transportation. Ivy looked up the records, discovered considerable gasoline issued from pumps and wrote a letter to Porter.

Councilman Jacobson said yesterday that when he received the letter about the gasoline he tore it up. He is flatly opposed to the practice, he says, and believes that all such expense should not be charged to the police department.

Chief Steckel yesterday issued a statement that he instigated the investigation to the use of police department gasoline by members of the City Council. The inquiry was started at the City Hall, he declared.

HOUSE OF GLASS FOR FOOD SHOW

Expert Will Demonstrate Care of Home at Annual Household Exhibit

More than two-score household operations, from cooking to sewing and sweeping, will be demonstrated by Miss Edna Kirby in a house of glass at the sixth annual food and household show, the 12th to 17th inst., in Ambassador auditorium, according to plans formed yesterday.

Miss Kirby, who is reputed a household expert, will inhabit the extremely public structure for six days, taking her place behind the transparent walls next Sunday, when the show's preview for the grocery profession will be held.

The glass house, according to officials of the Southern California Retail Grocers' Association, who are conducting the show, will not constitute one of the novelties of the exposition, but will be the means of leading housewives to a better knowledge of easier housework.

Expectations of the association heads are that the show will surpass all other western events of the kind in magnitude and in attendance. A theater, seating 2000, will operate without additional charge, it is said, in the auditoriums annex. There also will be many demonstrations in booths and the usual presentation of free food samples.

Arguments Given for Liberating Helen Andrade

Arguments on a motion for judgment of acquittal yesterday were heard by Superior Judge Wilson in behalf of Helen Lois Andrade, convicted of assault with a deadly weapon upon Albert Francis Andrade.

The shooting occurred in front of Andrade's Beverly Hills home on the night of December 12, 1929. Andrade asserts that five shots were fired at him.

In the argument William Beirne, defense attorney, asked that judgment of acquittal be given the defendant on grounds that the complaint against her charged two counts—assault to commit murder and assault with a deadly weapon. Contending that both charges arose out of the same assault and that since the defendant was acquitted by a jury of the charge of assault to commit murder, Attorney Beirne asks that the court set aside the jury's verdict of guilty of assault with a deadly weapon.

At the close of the arguments Judge Wilson continued the matter until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, when he will rule on the motion.

Driver Accused in Hit-Run Case Explains Plight

It was an awkward moment for Neville R. Stephens, 39 years of age, 8701½ Sunset Boulevard, he told Officers Wearne and Carter of Hollywood division, yesterday, following his arrest on a hit-and-run charge as the result of an automobile crash Friday afternoon. Stephens's car is said to have struck another occupied by Jack R. White, 1185 Los Palmas street, and Gordon F. Eisenberg, 1206½ North McCadden Place. The crash occurred at Santa Monica Boulevard and Heliotrope Drive.

Stephens is asserted to have confessed that he had liquor in his car. Since no evidence was found, however, he was not booked on a liquor charge.

White and Eisenberg were treated at Dickey & Cass Hospital for minor injuries.

STUDENTS PLAN FUND FOR ANIDO MEMORIAL

A group of Hollywood music students yesterday began preparations to raise a memorial to a beloved teacher, Francis Eugene Anido, who died on April 29, last, and was buried in Hollywood Cemetery on the 1st inst. He was 57 years of age, and lived at 209 South Bunker Hill avenue. He was born in Cuba, was a student of Rensselaer University, and came to Los Angeles from New York ten years ago. He had many voice pupils in Hollywood. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Ella Lee Anido.

"AFTER THE CRASH" frolic of the SPINSTERS

Misses Honor Higgins and Katherine Thomas

Mrs. Myron Etienne. Daniel Sheehan Studios

Miss Ruth Mann and Mrs. Henry Bateman

Affairs of the Week
by Juana Neal Levy

"After the Crash" perhaps had a more literal meaning than was at first intended by The Spinsters for the Frolic, Saturday night, April 26, for its guests literally "crashed" the gates by way of the toboggan slide which ushered them into the ballroom from the the Wall-street whirlwind and thoroughly enjoying it.

Some of them came in gracefully and stood upon their feet, as it were, to glance again around and "crash" into the dancers on the ballroom floor, and quite a common occurrence it was, for the frolic was an immediate success, and I doubt if ever a ball room, there was a more enthusiastic audience, creating a big-time atmosphere of good humor—reaping

We acknowledge that there is no new thing under the sun, yet we are constantly trying to find something, which has not been done before and in a measure succeeding, and the frolic of the Spinsters, called "After the Crash," was in reality what in times agone has been called a "hard-times party."

Everyone was at liberty to follow his or her own idea as to costume, and yet there were many "duplicates." Some of them were charmingly novel, while, as is always the case, most of them were mediocre, following the lines of least exertion.

Chefs, farm hands, gypsies, maids of all work, ragamuffins, aviators, spot maid and Miss Katherine Thomas and Miss Honor Higgins were ladies' maids.

Mrs. Virginia Bishop McGarry carried the down-and-out motif with blue shirt and ragged blue overalls and Miss Huston Bosbyshell was also "down and out," in cream satin frayed blouse, brown satin frayed trunks and orange sash.

Mrs. Ernest Adams was a farmerette in blue overalls and white satin shirt, while Mr. Adams was a plasterer; Mr. and Mrs. Nash Cartan were in red velvet with appliqued dollar marks.

Miss Florence Hamburger wore a blue and white gingham frock with blue gingham apron, cake of soap and brush dangling from her belt. The committee in charge consists of Miss Dorothy Keefe, chairman, and the Misses Ruby Nanney, Lucile Dudare, Ethel Munroe, Margaret Ernst and Agatha Fay. Musicale-Supper

One of the interesting events of recent date was the unusual musical program and supper with which Mrs. Ida Selby Donnell and her father, Lemuel Julian Selby, entertained at their home, 343 Occidental Boulevard, a coterie of artists being assembled, many of them having come here to appear in concert and other work. The program was informal, but showed versatility and ability in both instrumental and vocal numbers given. Among the personnel were Mrs. Donnell, pianist; Edward Lankow, Russian basso; Wilbur Evans, basso; Duet De Kerekjarto, violin; Merika Kerekjarto, pianist; Mildred Bruns, soprano; Grace Adele Freeby, composer-pianiste; Ruth Nilsson and George W. Nilsson, Swedish folk songs in the vernacular, Negro secular and spirituals by Mr. Selby added to the success of the program.

After supper, particularly planned in Easter motif, came the program and later dancing. Those included were Mme. Frances Gray, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Bruns, Mr. and Mrs. Fritz Mathay, Miss Mathay of Montrose, Harry Davis, San Diego; Miss Grace Adele Freeby, Mr. and Mrs. Philip Zobelein, Miss Catherine Lewis, Harry Nesarund, Mr. and Mrs. George W. Nilsson, Duet De Kerekjarto, Miss Merika Kerekjarto, Wilbur Evans, Dr. and Mrs. Carroll Jones, Mrs. Hallie F. Nichols of Houghton, Mich., and Edward Lankow.

Easter Bride

A lovely Easter bride was Miss Olive Doyle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Martin Doyle of Riverside who became the bride of Henry Francis Kell, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. H. F. Kell of Scarsdale, N. Y., Tuesday evening, April 22, the ceremony taking place in the Cloister Room of Mission Inn with Father Patrick McGuinness of St. Francis De Sales Church, officiating before an altar banked with baskets of Easter lilies, white larkspur and gypsophilia, lighted by many tall tapers.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a frock of white lace en traine, with long veil of tulle caught simply by a band of tiny gardenias across the nape of the neck and she carried gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Miss Ona Stadler, maid of honor, wore camelia pink satin and carried an arm bouquet of pink camelias and ferns, while the other attendants, Mrs. Melvin Edward Doyle of Riverside, Miss Clara Lou Nisbit of Upland and Miss Helen McGarry, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. Mercolised Wax Brings Out Skin Beauty

If your face looks old or discolored, you can restore its youthful loveliness and beauty by peeling off the aged, surface skin with pure Mercolised Wax. Just put it on your face at night, as you would an ordinary cold cream. The Wax absorbs the surface skin and removes completely all such blemishes as freckles, tan, liver spots and blackheads. The under skin is then revealed, gloriously young, velvety-smooth, soft and flawless. Mercolised Wax brings out the hidden beauty. To smooth wrinkles and other age signs from your face use daily this astringent lotion: 1 ounce Powdered Saxolite and 1 half pint witch hazel. At all drug and department stores.—(Advertisement.

HOW MANY ENGLISH WORDS CAN YOU SPELL WITH THE LETTERS IN THE STAR?

The Answers to These Questions May Help You Win One of the Many Handsome Cash Awards

The Times Star Puzzle Contest is evidently just what the young and old folk of Southern California want as a simple, educational pastime. Every mail brings scores of inquiries and qualifying subscription blanks from every corner of the Southland. It's a great contest because it has been conceived for the greatest possible benefit to the reader—no tricks—no conglomorated masses—just simply building English words from the letters given in the star.

A number of contestants are desirous of knowing if every letter in a word must be adjacent or next to the first letter of the word. A careful reading of the instructions, and of the words formed as examples, would answer this question. Start with any letter and move, one space at a time, and in any direction, to a touching, adjacent, or contiguous letter; and use as many letters as there may be in the word being formed, so long as such letter (except the first one) follows or is adjacent to the preceding one. Be sure not to jump or skip any letter or space. Here's another example: P(19), A(28), I(36), N(37) spells PAIN.

Q. I am a regular subscriber by the month. Do I have to pay 6 months in advance to take part in the Star Contest?

A. Yes, if you wish to compete for the large Class A prizes. No, if you wish to compete only for the Class B prizes.

Q. What is the longest word allowable?

A. The longest word you can properly form from the letters in the star. We do not know how long a word you may be able to form. As the rules permit you to go in any direction, even doubling back on your track, so long as you move one space at a time, it may be possible to find a word that contains 8, or 10, or even more letters. But it must conform to the rules to be allowed.

Q. E'ER and AIN'T are in the dictionary. May I use them?

A. The dictionary calls these words contractions. Therefore, they are not allowable, according to the rules.

Q. What is meant by "each word should be numbered consecutively, starting with 1?"

A. After you list in alphabetical order all the words you find in the Star, write the consecutive number in front of each word—1, 2, 3, 4, etc. This alphabetical listing and consecutive numbering are absolutely necessary in order to facilitate the proper checking of the lists in this office.

Q. Where shall I write the index numbers of the squares in which the letters I use are found?

A. It is not necessary to give the index numbers. Just write the words legibly, in alphabetical order.

Q. May I use both the singular and plural forms if the plural is irregular in spelling, and not formed by the addition of S or ES? MAN and MEN, for example.

A. No. Use either singular or plural, but NOT both.

Q. Note that COSTS and PUBLISHES appear in the Star. Is the ruling as to the plural and singular form of verbs the same as that for nouns?

A. Yes. If the two words mentioned are used, do not also use COST and PUBLISH.

Q. Suppose the same word is both a noun and a verb, or has several different meanings, can it not be used more than once?

A. No. The same combination of letters forming a word may be used only once.

Q. If a word is spelled in more than one way, may I list each spelling?

A. Yes. Each combination of letters forming a word may be used only once, but if there is more than one way of spelling that word, each combination may be listed, if found in proper order in the Star.

INSTRUCTIONS

Form as many words as possible from the letters in the star. Start with any letter and take any number of adjacent or contiguous letters IN ANY DIRECTION: forward, backward, upward, downward, diagonally. (A letter is adjacent or contiguous to another when the spaces occupied touch each other at the sides or at the corners. M-16 is next to or adjacent to M-17, S-24, I-23, L-22, I-15 and A-7. S-6 is adjacent or contiguous to I-15 and T-14 but is not adjacent or contiguous to A-7 and U-20 because separated from these letters by blank spaces.) Do not jump or skip any letters or spaces.

Example: T-1, H-2, A-7, N-8 spells THAN;
S-6, T-14, U-20, B-21 spells STUB;
L-22, I-15, M-16, I-23, T-31 spells LIMIT.

The same space may be used more than once in a word (as in BALL—M-16, I-15, L-22, I-15, T-14, I-15, A-7.) but do not double any letter. Example: L-43 cannot be doubled to form the word ROLL with B-6 but L-29 and L-30, two adjacent and contiguous letters, can be used with A-28 to form BALL.

RULES

No word may be used more than once. Do not use obsolete, archaic, dialect, Scottish or un-Anglicised foreign words, proper names of persons, peoples or places, or parts of words, such as prefixes, suffixes, contractions or abbreviations. Either the singular or plural form may be used, but do not use both forms of the same word. In any question, Webster's International Dictionary will be authority.

For convenience in checking, lists of words must be submitted in alphabetical order. Each word should be numbered consecutively, starting with 1. It will not be necessary to give the index numbers of the spaces in which the letters are found.

Contestant's name, address and telephone number should be written at the beginning of the list, together with the total number of words submitted. Use only one side of the paper.

This Contest is open to every person in California and Arizona except members of the families of employees of THE TIMES. Only one prize will be awarded to a household.

As explained in the LIST of PRIZES, there are two classes of prizes. It is not necessary to subscribe or send in a subscription to THE TIMES to compete for one of the Class B prizes. The Class B prizes are open to those who send in a 6-months paid-in-advance subscription to the DAILY and SUNDAY TIMES. This may be either a renewal or a new subscription. There are 56 prizes in each class. Presenting Mme. Bertie's famous skin cleansing and nourishing product

LAIT D'OESYPE
(Lay-duh-seep)

IT may seem unusual to suggest a semi-liquid for cleansing and nourishing. But as the famous Parisian dermatologist, Mme. Bertie says, "Only liquids can penetrate far enough below the surface of the skin to cleanse the dust-stifled pores and to nourish the skin itself."

LAIT D'OESYPE, a delicate cream-liquid, penetrates every pore to stir the particles of dirt and bring them to the surface, where they can be wiped away . . . and a thin coating of this remarkable blend seeps into the skin, to feed it, to provide nourishment for the tissue.

Simple Application That Dissolves Blackheads

No more squeezing and pinching to get rid of these unsightly blemishes, blackheads. There is one simple, safe and sure way to get them out and that is to dissolve them. Get about two ounces of calonite powder from your druggist—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet cloth—rub briskly over the blackheads for a few seconds—wash the parts and every blackhead will be gone.

Pinching and squeezing out blackheads make large pores and you cannot get all of the blackheads out this way—while this simple application of calonite powder and water dissolves every particle of them and leaves the skin and pores in their natural condition.—[Advertisement.

TALKING FILMS BRING MUSIC TO MASSES

More Than 90 Per Cent of American Compositions Now Being Written Here; Studios List All Big Names of Tin Pan Alley

Good music has become a molding factor in the lives of the masses throughout the world, due to talking pictures. They have enabled composers to reach out and bring music to hundreds of millions of people who only a few short years ago had no possible means of receiving education and entertainment of this sort.

This is the conclusion drawn by Robert Crawford, executive in charge of all musical activities for First National Pictures and Warner Brothers, in summing up the musical revolution that has taken place throughout the world since the talkies eliminated the silent screen.

Crawford maintains his headquarters at the new Music Arts Hall at First National Studios in Hollywood. With Erno Rapee as musical director-in-chief he directs the destinies of some thirty composers said to be responsible for some 85 per cent of America's operettas, musical comedies, and popular songs during recent years. Crawford is president of DeSylva, Brown and Henderson and identified with Harms & Co., M. Witmark, and a number of other affiliated musical houses which were acquired as part of the First National Pictures and Warner Brothers organization. In addition forty arrangers are at work in the department, and, led by such conductors as Leo Forbstein and Louis Silvers, there are orchestras comprising almost 150 musicians.

"More than 90 per cent of the creative music of America is now being written in Hollywood," states Crawford. "The home offices of the companies are still in New York for business purposes, but all of the finest American music now is being written in connection with the screen.

"We have gathered here at our Music Arts Hall the men who have been responsible for many of the operetta and musical-comedy hits of the past ten years—Sigmund Romberg, Oscar Hammerstein II, Jerome Kern and Otto Harbach, Oscar Strauss, Herbert Fields, Richard Rogers and Lorenz Hart, and a dozen song-writing teams.

"Hollywood's studios today encompass all the big names of contemporary music—Irving Berlin, George Gershwin, DeSylva Brown and Henderson, Herb Nacio Brown and many others.

"We are moving forward with tremendous strides, daily, weekly, monthly. There is no telling how far we will go, or how much music, as spread by talking pictures, will influence the lives of people throughout the world.

COMPLETE SCORES MADE

"There is no such thing as a theme song any more. Music is an integral part of a story. Pictures are now written with complete scores, and the music is of the highest operetta type. It is my own belief that it will not be long before we are producing something far greater in its sweep of music than grand opera, which has always been limited by the traditions of the stage.

"It is at least 1000 per cent easier to popularise music now than it was before talking pictures came in. Radio has helped greatly, but even then, especially in the rural districts, such music was impersonal.

"Today we are having a musical Renaissance. Before, with the finest of our operetta music, we could only reach the classes, because, even in cities where these operettas were shown, the masess did not, and could not go. They couldn't afford $3.75 to $5 a seat. Now it only costs from 35 cents to 65 cents and this operetta music is going into the smallest of towns via the talkies.

"The identification of a song with a definite emotional scene increases its popularity enormously.

"For instance, such a sentimental piece as 'Sonny Boy' could never have been popular had it not been identified with the scene between Al Jolson and Davy Lee. As it was, it sold some 1,600,000 copies. It would not have sold 100,000 copies otherwise.

"From a financial point of view there is no question that the talkies saved the music-publishing business."

Hollywood studios today encompass all the big names of contemporary music.

The identification of song, with a definite emotional scene, increased its popularity enormously.

The song hit, "Sonny Boy," sold 1,600,000 copies because of the identification with the picture, otherwise it would have sold less than 100,000 copies.

SOUND SEPARATE

When at all possible, the sound effects were made separately, Hunter explained, and synchronized to the film. The background rumble of long-range guns consisted of real claps of thunder, previously recorded on a sound-track during a storm. For some of the more violent explosions, the sound department journeyed to the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, where echoes from dynamite detonations were secured as added background.

The whine of approaching shells, which is declared to be most realistic in the film, was accomplished by shooting at large rocks placed near the microphone and catching the resulting sound of the ricochetting bullets.

The entire picture, with the exception of a few scenes taken in the studio, was recorded on outside locations by portable trucks. Each vehicle, Hunter explained, carried complete apparatus and weighed fourteen tons.

STORY IN ITSELF

Photographic work on "All Quiet" is a story in itself. Many of the long-distance "shots" of the battle ground were secured from Universal's traveling crane. This reaches a height of fifty feet and revolves and twists in every direction.

There is nothing radical to report about the method of recording "All Quiet," although many who have seen it at the Carthay Circle insist that there is. Hunter admits to a few improvements used, several of which he invented himself. The expert points out the example of the parachute jumper who would rather rely on a chute he had used previously than trust a new and different one. One new developing process is the result of Hunter's creative work in his field. It is said it will eventually bring him a fortune.

PLAYHOUSES TO GIVE RICH FARE

Many Splendid Offerings to Be Presented Here

Bills for Local Theaters to Feature Stars

Drama and Music Will Be Well Represented

BY MURIEL BABCOCK

A brisk and lively summer in the theater is destined for Los Angeles.

As the New York stage prepares for its annual hot weather doldrums, the local rialto is donning its best bib and tucker in anticipation of a lot of pleasant offerings, both in drama and music.

The various managers, although a little reluctant to disclose in advance what plums they may be ripening for June to September coast consumption, admit that the best things of the year will shortly be on view.

Messrs. Edward Belasco and Homer Curran for the Belasco Theater announce following, "The Criminal Code" arriving the 12th inst., "Caprice" with Fay Bainter and Reginald Owen" and "It's a Wise Child," the David Belasco comedy.

STAR OF MAGNITUDE

"The Criminal Code" by Martin Flavin was the outstanding drama of the fall in New York. Arthur Byron will play his original role here. "Caprice" was one of the more delicately flavored offerings of the Theater Guild. Fay Bainter, who will carry the original Lynn Fontanne role, is a star of magnitude and from her is expected a really fine performance. "It's A Wise Child" is still going full force in New York whence, it started last August.

Henry Duffy for his three theaters, El Capitan, Hollywood Playhouse and President, announces: "Nancy's Private Affair," by Myron C. Fagan, current at the Longacre, New York; "Elizabeth Sleeps Out," a racy comedy by Leslie Howard; Bert Lytell in "Brothers," a melodrama; "Her Friend, the King;" Leo Carrillo in "Mister Antonio" and Taylor Holmes in a couple of comedies.

Charlotte Greenwood, now in Chicago with "Mebbe," produced here as "She Couldn't Say No," should be back in town ere the summer is over that Duffy may present her in a new comedy, or an old comedy with modern adaptations. Duffy also says that George Jessel in "The Jazz Singer" will be seen some time before September arrives.

MAY RELINQUISH PRESIDENT

It has been rumored for several months that Duffy would relinquish the President for a proposed news reel theater, and concentrate his energies on El Capitan and the Hollywood Playhouse. Duffy admits this a possibility, but says that no deal has been closed.

Louis Macloon has a brand new operetta, "Cubanita," book by Mr. Macloon in person and music by Charles Wakefield Cadman, which he is threatening to produce with Allan Prior and Josephine Houston, following "The Student Prince." That should occupy the Majestic Theater most of the summer.

"Strictly Dishonorable," the Preston Sturges comedy, arriving today, will stay at the Biltmore Theater until the latter part of June, according to present plans. What will be next seems undecided, although it may be that "The Little Show" will go in. Rehearsals for a Pacific Coast production of this Broadway revue, started a month ago and then abandoned, will be renewed shortly and Fred Allen will come from Chicago to star, according to report. John Hill is the local impresario.

After the departure from the Mason of the Fred Waring show, "Rah Rah Daze," which has built up gradually from a weak opening to substantial proportions and will have a good eight-week run, instead of the skeptics' two, will come "Subway Express." This is a melodrama which Edward A. Blatt produced in New York and for which he is now organizing a coast company.

Then there's "Hi There," Paul Elsinger's intimate revue, which starts out at Erlanger's Columbia in San Francisco Monday, the 12th inst., and which come here about June 15 to probably the Biltmore or the Mason. This is the show that Alexander Leftwich is directing, with skits by Clark and McCullough and others.

GEORGE FAWCETT FOLLOWS

The Civic Repertory Group has three more productions, "Goin' Home," Ransome Rideout's drama of an American negro in France; "Justice" by Galsworth and "Wound Stripe," a brand new play by Nell Blackwell and Roland Edwards.

George Fawcett follows "The Questionable Elaine" into the Vine Street Theater with a revival of an old favorite, "The Great John Ganton." This is set for an indefinite run, and although it is understood the Vine street is booked pretty solid, no other plays have

MASQUERS TO STAGE REVEL

Annual Performance Said to be Notable for Number of Stage and Screen Celebrities to Appear

BY PAUL THOMPSON

Next Saturday night, the Masquers' Club, of Hollywood, will stage its annual public revel at El Capitan Theater. The performance will be notable for the number of stage and screen celebrities who will appear in it and also for the fact that it will be a show without women. The feminine roles will be played by the younger men of the club. The latter will also pose as mannequins in a fashion parade in the final number on the program.

Sam Hardy, chief jester of the revel, will have as his assistant masters of ceremonies, Ben Bard, Little Billy, Lew Cody, Joe E. Brown, Lawrence Grant and Bert Wheeler, who will introduce the various numbers.

"Farewell to Dickens," by Joseph Santley, will be the only serious number on the program. Charles Dickens will be played by Robert Edeson, while the personages of his fiction will be acted by Ivan Simpson, John Sheehan, Conway Tearle, Frank McHugh, Robert T. Haines, Richard Carle, Montagu Love, Frederick Howard, James Eagle, William Farnum, Charles McNaughton, Brandon Hurst, Edward Earle, and Harry Stubbs.

FOUNDED FIVE YEARS AGO

Other acts will be given by Julian Eltinge, Frank Fay, Bert Wheeler, Vernon and Tryon.

The club was founded five years ago, June 2, 1925. The original founders were: Robert Edeson, Harlequin, president; John M. Sainpolis, Pierrot, (vice-president;) Robert Schable, Punchinello, (recording secretary;) George Reed, Croesus (treasurer;) Frederick Esmelton, Pantaloon (corresponding secretary;) Louis Payne, reader, (librarian,) and Warner Baxter, Alphons Ethier and Ned Sparks. Until April 20 of 1928 the club occupied a house on Yucca street, now the home of the 233 (Shriners) Club, at the head of McCadden Place. Since that date the Masquers have occupied one of the most charming, old-fashioned, two-story houses on Sycamore street. It is surrounded by spacious grounds filled with trees and shrubs and a large parking space for cars as naturally everybody owns a car. On the first floor is a large dining-room with a small stage at one end on which the club revels are presented every six weeks.

These are written and acted by members of the club. These correspond to the intimate Lambs' Gambols staged in the clubhouse of the latter organization in New York. Like the foster if not actual parent club the Masquers also stage a public revel which is akin to the New Yorkers' Public Gambol staged at the Metropolitan Opera House or one of the larger legitimate theaters.

As is true of those in the New York midwinter theatrical season, so too here in Los Angeles, the revel is an outstanding social and amusement event. The first was staged October 22, 1925, in the Philharmonic Auditorium, Los Angeles, with Victor Schertzinger conducting the overture. Robert Edeson as Harlequin, the Masquer, acted as master of ceremonies. Others whose names stand out in that program are the later writer, Charles Lancaster, Fred Niblo, Ned Sparks, Roscoe Arbuckle and Chester Conklin.

The membership is limited to about less than 700 men divided into 500 professionals; 100 lay, twenty-five associate, the same number of army and navy men, and twenty-five nonresident. Of course, everybody "who is who" in the motion-picture acting colony belongs. There is an understanding that actors are never to importune director-members for jobs. But it is mighty good business, ignoring the social phase to belong. The Masquers may have for their motto: "We laugh to win," but they are an excellent clearinghouse for players. The telephone requests for men to play certain roles in pictures is almost certain to be directed to the clubhouse if the man wanted is not at home or some other player of equal ability or standing is sought.

Of the membership probably 200 are members of the kindred club in New York, the Lambs.

OFFICERS NAMED

There have been four jesters or presidents of the Masquers since the foundation. Robert Edeson, Douglas MacLean, Milton Sills and Sam Hardy, the incumbent.

The officers associated with Hardy in running the club now include, Pierrot, Antonio Moreno; Punchinello, Robert N. Lee; Croesus, Mitchell Lewis; Pantaloon, Earle Foxe, and Reader, George Cowl. A Jesterate or board of governors of fifteen men co-operate with the above officers. On this list are such well-known names as Larry Ceballos, director; Robert Edeson, Alan Hale, Charley Chase, William R. Fraser, Douglas MacLean, Conrad Nagel, actors; Addison Burkhardt, writer; J. E. Kennefick, and Eugene Pallette, bankers.

There are four life members of the club; Messrs. Moreno and Esmelton—both referred to before—Charles Stevenson and Ingle Carpenter.

Crime Never Shown in News Reel Features

(This is the third of a series of articles by Carl E. Milliken, secretary of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., recounting developments in the history of the major industry of the films and the activities of the Hays organization, and telling of the motion picture's sphere of influence.—Ed. note.)

BY CARL E. MILLIKEN

Before a world audience estimated at 250,000,000 people weekly, the motion picture—based as it is on universal characteristics of human nature and speaking a language that all can understand—is teaching tolerance and brotherhood and revealing the unity of interests by which all races are linked together.

Scientific investigation, carried on by some of the leading psychologists, psychiatrists and penologists of the world, has produced overwhelming evidence that the motion picture, under its present carefully considered program of self-government, is a positive deterrent of crime and a safety-valve of tremendous value to the present machine civilization.

CLEAR CUT MESSAGE

It is the inevitability of punishment of crime in motion pictures which produces a wholesome effect in regard to law observance and which leaves one clear-cut message in every film dealing with crime in any aspect, namely, that the criminal "can't get away with it." At the same time, the motion picture, in creating vicarious thrills for its patrons, is providing a wholly necessary outlet for pent-up emotions which, if not allowed some expression, would inevitably lead to social disaffection and perhaps to anti-social outbreaks.

At the International Congress of Psychology at Yale University, Dr. Phyllis Blanchard, psychologist of the Philadelphia Child Guidance Clinic, and a recognized expert on child development, declared that she found the motion picture helpful in many ways.

"I have sat in motion-picture theaters and marveled at the unanimity with which children reacted on the side of law and order," Dr. Blanchard told her fellow-psychologists. "When the villain is caught and punished, as is always the case under the policy of those who make American motion pictures, the applause of the children is swiftest and most enthusiastic."

VILLAINS ABSENT

Added light is thrown on Dr. Blanchard's report by a survey of motion pictures which showed that of 820 feature pictures made a year ago, 33.7 per cent contained no vil-

WESTERNS STAGE COMEBACK

Hollywood Stars Exchanging Spurs for Spats and Riding Hard in Outdoor Pictures

BY ELENA BOLAND

The call of the West again summons studios to the saddle. Once more the great open spaces are dotted with "location" sites and the playboys of Hollywood have turned overnight into cowboys, rough ridin' and tricky at the trigger.

All this is because the western movie has staged a comeback. This type of screen entertainment has been described as most truly expressing the spirit of America. Its popularity in the old silent days was tremendous and man, woman and child were avid and constant patrons.

COMPLICATIONS MENACED

Then came sound with menacing complications. Picture making was limited to the narrow confines of sound stages. The outdoors, because of space and extraneous noises, became impossible. "In Old Arizona" proved this edict need not be final. It was the first sound film to be made out in the open and involved an excessive amount of caution and labor.

Only now have technical difficulties been sufficiently outdistanced that the outdoor picture can again form a common medium of entertainment. And the out-of-door picture in this part of the country runs as a rule straight to the western species.

From the eager reception of those westerns which have been released it appears that all has been quiet on the western front for so long that the public's interest is revived and again clamors for action, plenty of action, out in he-man's land.

WESTERNS TO PREDOMINATE

And the studios are more than willing to comply with this popular request. Westerns are scheduled in such quantities as to form a predominate part in the coming year's production. It is hoped, and also possible, that they might outrate the gangster, the backstage and the revue angles.

Special departments have been organized to supply the demand for outdoor, principally western pictures. Fox has recently launched one under the title of the "Great Outdoor Romances" department, which will pour on to the market films photographed in their natural locations. Fox plans to go further afield than the West for some of its settings. Eleven productions are planned and $3,000,000 set aside as a budget. Beside those to be made in the West, there are those which will picture the pampas region of the Argentine, the African veldt and islands in the tropics. The entire corps of Fox Movietone News cameramen has been placed at the disposal of this purpose.

Other studios are more or less concentrating on homespun "horse operas." The success Paramount

FIVE WESTERNS MAKING

First National announced that at present it has five westerns in production. "Under A Texas Moon," which presented Frank Fay as a cowboy troubador, demonstrated that the new western can do big business.

Vitaphone Varieties are making short subjects, some with musical accompaniment.

The field of comedy has likewise enlarged itself into the plain country. Educational comedies have developed a theory that the bigger the lover of the great outdoors, the bigger is his delight in a burlesque on the same subject. Lloyd Hamilton, Eddie Lambert and Harry Gribbon have appeared in such and with results. Since action is positively essential to comedy as well as to the Western, the two form an ideal combination.

It is declared that Joan Crawford in "Montana Moon" started Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer hitting the trail. This particular picture is an excellent example of the modern western. Compared to the old saw-mill, bandit numbers, the present edition is glorified; remodeled with all the trimmings of music, cowboy choruses and other traces of civilization. It presents several problems.

SPURS FOR SPATS

Should the western pull itself across as the box-office implies it will, it will mean that the leading man of tomorrow cannot be the same as that of today. He will have to change his spats to spurs and be as much at home on the prairie as he is in the parlor. He will have to be athletic, husky and rugged. New faces are prophesied for the screen; men who can ride as well as talk.

With virility at such a premium, comebacks by the older rough-riders are no surprise. Hoot Gibson, Harry Carey, Buck Jones, Tom Tyler, Richard Talmadge and Ken Maynard now find they have as much work as they can manage.

That the old-timers will completely eclipse the fashion plates of filmdom is scarcely plausible. For while the one may be taking voice lessons, the other can always start riding lessons. And there will be need for all hands round when the contagion of this newest "hoof and mouth" disease turns the screen into one of Nature's playgrounds.

ASPECTS OF AVIATION PRESENTED IN NEW BOOKS

Aviation is an inspiring subject and a popular one. And, as is usually the case, there are a lot of people talking and writing about aviation whose basic knowledge of the subject hardly measures up to their enthusiasm. But they "get by" largely because of the general lack of authoritative information—there is no one to contradict them.

It is a welcome relief, then, to find someone who knows what he is talking about and who can make clear and interesting a subject that has for a long time been discussed largely in a wild and inaccurate manner. Such an individual is Col. W. Jefferson Davis, of this city, who has in the past few weeks seen two aeronautical books from his pen emerge from the printing press of Parker, Stone and Baird Company.

Speaking from the pages of "Aeronautical Law" Col. Davis is the man of law assembling in orderly, legal fashion the statutes that have to do with the use and operation of aircraft. In his later book, "Air Conquest" Col. Davis is the aeronautical enthusiast, tracing for those who really want to know what aviation is all about, the salient facts in the history and development of this fascinating mode of transportation.

Not only does Col. Davis have the fundamental knowledge neccessary to discuss such an involved subject as aeronautics and the facile pen with which to tell what he knows, but he seems in addition to have the happy faculty of sensing the popular demand. Not only has "Aeronautical Law" been hailed as a boon to the harrassed legal profession because of its complete and yet concise summary of aeronautical law, but "Air Conquest" his lighter and more popular work, has been awarded the $1000 prize presented by the Aero Educational Research Association "for the most timely contribution to aeronautical literature."

The aeronautical and legal background of the author furnishes an illuminating index of the reasons for the popularity of his books. He served during part of the war on the special committee for war service of the American Bar Association, was active in the air service until 1921, acting as commanding officer of the Three Hundred and Twenty-second Pursuit Group Reserve; he was legal adviser and special assistant to the Military Attache, American Embassy, Berlin, and counsel for the War Department at the congress on international aviation legislation at Prague as well as holding many other distinguished positions.

Cadman Song Cycle to Have Public Premiere

Charles Wakefield Cadman's song cycle for four voices, "White Enchantment," is to be given its public premiere tomorrow evening by the Glendale Symphony. The composer will accompany the singers. The novelty will be found in Rachmaninoff's beautiful song, "Vocalise," arranged by Altschuler for orchestra and chorus. Two compositions by Altschuler will also be sung by the Glendale Women's Chorus to orchestra accompaniment. With this performance at the Hoover Auditorium, West Glenwood Road, Glendale, the Glendale Symphony closes its most successful season.

Diskay Will Open Studios

Joseph Diskay, well-known Hungarian tenor, has opened classes at No. 4, 7 Granados Studios, where he will specialize in voice culture for talkies, radios and programs for concerts.

Mr. Diskay sings in twelve languages and has been successful as a radio and phonograph recording artist both in New York and California. He has been an Orpheum headliner.

MUSIC OF CHINA TO BE HEARD

Number of Foremost of Oriental Musicians Will Accompany Troupe Here

Mei Lan-Fang, the oriental actor who comes to the Philharmonic Auditorium for one week beginning the 13th inst., will not only bring to local audiences the authentic dramas of China, but Chinese music plays an important part in the works of Mr. Mei.

This favorite of the Chinese stage owes a part of his eminence in music to the early training of his uncle, Yu-ti'en, who was one of the famous musicians in China and considered the master of the huch'in, the stringed instrument commonly used for the accompaniment of Chinese vocal artists.

Under his tutorship, Mei Lan-Fang had achieved an uncanny mastery of Chinese music and song at the age of 7, and made his first court appearance as an infant prodigy at that age. Later after his reputation was established he started studying the ancient musical forms and through this knowledge and his knowledge of the more modern music he has been the foremost musician in China in introducing innovations into Chinese music and dance. Mei Lan-Fang has the most extensive collection of ancient manuscripts and old treatises on music and dance in the world today and this collection includes not only a priceless number of oriental manuscripts but manuscripts and treatises on occidental music as well.

Music forms the framework of Chinese drama to the extent that their dramas are nearer our operatic forms than our drama. In the Chinese drama, the movements of the actors are set to musical accompaniment so everything is done to a well-defined rhythm and tempo, the whole producing a graceful and charming effect.

It is also a common practice on the Chinese stage when the emotions become raised to a high pitch for the character to give vent to his feeling in song. Again there are occasions in long dramatic passages when repetition might become tedious to the audience, the actor carries the passage in song giving an opportunity to embellish his tale with such musical beauty as to save the audience from monotony.

Mei Lan-Fang plays exclusively feminine roles and these roles call for long arias as well as everything else from dancing to acrobatic and juggling stunts. He brings with him not only a group of fine oriental actors but some of the foremost musicians in China today.

"DAVIDE RIZZIO" POSTPONED

Mary Carr Moore's "DiRavide Rizzio," which won an opera prize in Italy, will have its first presentation in 1931, rather than during the summer season as originally scheduled. This is due to the fact that a leading singer, Mme. Boninsegna, is not able to be in Italy this summer because of a contract to sing in Brazil. The presentation is to be made in the Malibran Theater in Venice.

"WOZZECK" STIRS INTEREST

Production of Berg's Opera in Vienna Greeted With Unexpected Enthusiasm

BY WEBSTER AITKEN

March 29 there took place the Vienna premiere of Alban Berg's opera, "Wozneck," a work that has aroused widespread interest in Central European musical circles ever since its first performance in Berlin in 1928.

It is indeed a monster of atonality and although the claque was more than usually in evidence, there was a general warmth of enthusiasm and approval that must have come as a surprise to those who are in the habit of deploring Vienna's lack of sympathy with modern music in general. As a matter of fact the composer stems from Vienna, being born there forty-five years ago and it was as a youth of about 20 that he first came in touch with Schonberg, the arch modernist, in one of the latter's courses and later as a private pupil.

Several years ago when Schonberg celebrated his fiftieth birthday, his pupils presented him with a remembrance book in which each had signed with his own hand. Berg's signature in the book accompanies the resolve "to remain his master's pupil to the end" and he has apparently kept his word for not so much as a hair's breadth does he vary from the methods of his master. Schonberg has so completely influenced the thought and expression of his scholars that, to paraphrase a well-known saying, no dog that has done service at Schonberg's would accept a bone at the hands of Schrecker or any of the others.

HARDY EAR ESSENTIAL

A hardy, hardened ear is certainly the chief essential of a patient understanding of "Wozzack." The singers declaim up and down, right and left and nobody listens to them. Penetrating shrieks from high C to the lowest tones of the singers' registers bring one to wonder. On the other hand, the music creates atmosphere, uncanny and nerve rousing moods, and if the last act, in which occur the most approved elements of operatic melodrama, such as murder, suicide and the unforgettable nostalgic irony of the last scene, fails to exert any decided influence on its hearers, to what can it be attributed other than the hearers' tired, blunted receptive faculties?

Buchner's original drama "Wozneck" (or Woyzeck as the name in its earliest form was written) is a fragmentary work in twenty-five scenes. Of these twenty-five scenes Berg has omitted nine, condensed others and reduced the dramatis personae in order to attain to greatest precision of expression; but it would appear that the opera as a whole would have gained enormously if the remaining scenes had likewise been subjected to radical pruning, and the whole thing shortened to about half its present length. Even Schonberg in his one-act dramatic ventures has limited himself to twenty minutes, and in this respect Berg would do well to absorb his master's wisdom. He is at present at work upon a new opera the text of which is taken from Wedekind's "Lulu."

DRAMATIC OUTLINE

The dramatic matter of "Wozneck" is quickly disposed of; nothing else happens than that Wozzeck, a poor devil of a common soldier, tries for the sake of his mistress and child, to earn a few groschen over and above his daily wage, by shaving his captain and allowing a fanatic half-crazy doctor to carry out experiments in nourishment on his body. Marie falls under the spell of the gallant handsome bandmaster and Wozneck, of course, discovers their attachment. A train of unearthly logic brings him to murder Marie and pursued by the furies of remorse ("The moon betrays me . . . the moon is bloody,") he walks into the pond to wash the stains from his hands ("O! O! I am washing myself with blood . . . the water is blood . . . blood . . .") and drowns.

As for the music: an amorphous stew of noise, as some one remarked at the end of the second act! And perhaps he was right. Scarcely during the whole affair does a recognizable succession of tones dare raise an ashamed head above the dominating principle of cacophony. Even where simple uncomplicated dance music was in the nature of things to be expected the music rumbles, thunders and shrieks and one gathers the impression that it is all a gigantic misunderstanding. In places, however, the composer brushes in moods with a master hand: for example, in one of the interludes of the last act: he proclaims the whole intensity of the tragedy in a single note which first comes into being very pianissimo in the strings then in solemn succession taken up by all the choirs of horns, through all the instruments, growing always in insistence and volume till the house rocks and the throbbing in one's ears becomes nerve torture of the nth degree . . . ending after anxious minutes of duration in a precipitate crash of the whole orchestra. Technical tricks of this caliber work all the stronger for being surrounded by such a mush of dissonance and clearly point the way back through Elektra and Salome to Tristan, which has created far more trouble in the destiny of music than Wagner ever dreamed of.

SERIES OF FORMS

Theoretically "Wozneck" is a series of classic forms strung together: the first scene, a Suite with Prelude, Sarabande, Gigue, Gavotte; the second act a kind of a symphony and the third a set of inventions, but who on earth would ever recognize the twenty-one Passacaglia variations of the second scene? Berg himself states: "When once the curtain has gone up, the hearer notices nothing of form analysis; and what is more, he shouldn't notice anything."

Throughout there is a current of warmth present that one seldom finds in the cold-blooded intellectuality of Schonberg, but it still remains a mystery for future performance to clear up: whether "Wozneck" is only an artificial deus ex machina incapable of putting order into the chaotic affairs of modern music, or (to change the metaphor) whether it is really indicative of the path by which the beloved Muse will walk into a golden future. . . . May it be remarked, however, that on some sides it is whispered: if this is to be the music of the future, then there has never been one.

HARPISTS TO HOLD MEETING FRIDAY

The next program of the Southern California chapter, National Association of Harpists, will take place on Friday evening at the residence of Mrs. Grace Goodhue Huntington, 419 South Lorraine Boulevard, when Miss Marietta Bitter, an officer of the New York chapter, will be guest of honor she will also play.

PROGRAM OF MUSIC WEEK ANNOUNCED

Year's Festival Will be Opened Tomorrow With Sacred Concert

For four years Santa Ana has celebrated National Music Week with elaborate programs, featuring special concerts each day and night throughout the week, presented through the co-operation of both local and outside musical organizations.

This year's festival will open tomorrow with an out-of-door sacred concert program, in which approximately 750 musicians will participat, in effective choral and instrumental numbers. Another feature program to be offered during the course of the week will be presentation of the colorful Charles Wakefield Cadman light opera, "The Belle of Havana," with Cadman conducting personally, as a special attraction.

Schools, churches, numerous musical and civic organizations, as well as local theaters will all have an important part in the event, and it is estimated that about 1600 musicians will participate in making this year's celebration here the biggest and most effective yet offered in this locality.

Three Singers Successful in Sound Films

Three singers, all products of the studio of Otio Morando, are successful on the singing stage. Fred Scott, tenor, who made his debut in singing pictures as the lead in "The Grand Parade," is again to be seen and heard in a new production, "Swing High." He has also been chosen by Maestro Merola of the San Francisco and Los Angeles Grand Opera Association to sing opposite Maria Jeritza, in "Salome."

Another promising student is Marion Nixon.

Bebe Daniels, who sings opposite Everett Marshall in her new picture, "Dixiana," is making rapid progress.

Tina Paggi, remembered for her remarkable coloratura singing with the Columbia Grand Opera here, has for weeks been studying with Mme. Morando on her new repertoire and operatic roles, which she has been preparing for her appearances in opera in Zurich, Switzerland, in May. She sailed for Europe two weeks ago.

Fifth Coleman Concert to Be Given Today

The fifth Coleman chamber concert for the current season is scheduled for today at 3:30 p.m., when the Bartlett-Frankel String Quartet, with Giles Gilbert, pianist, as assisting artist, will appear at the Pasadena Community Playhouse. The concert will be followed by a green room tea in honor of Messrs. Borissoff, Briglio, Perir and Ochi-Albi, members of the quartet, and Gilbert, the pianist.

The program will include Dvorak's String Quartet, opus 90, a group of short numbers for the quartet, including "Serenade," by Rachmaninoff, "Notturno," by Borodin and "Serenade," by Lalo, and Cesar Franck's Piano Quintet.

Publisher of Music Marries

Richard Drake Saunders, music publisher of New York and Hollywood, was married to Miss Laurel Nemeth in Santa Barbara last Monday.

Laurel Nemeth has appeared in prima donna roles both here and abroad, including a local appearance as Nedda in "Pagliacci," with Lawrence Tibbett and Edward Johnson.

RUBY RAY O'HARA BECOMES INSTRUCTOR

Ruby Ray O'Hara has been appointed associate instructor in the Agnes Woodward School of Whistling. Miss O'Hara has been on the stage and screen for six years, in singing and acting parts. She doubles for stars in whistling parts, having appeared in the "Orange Blossom Time" number in the Hollywood Review, as the nightingale in many pictures and numerous bird calls.

Miss O'Hara is soloist with the whistling chorus of the Woodward school. She will specialize in preparing pupils for movietone and radio work.

MUMA PROGRAMS SUCCEED

Reports from Honolulu indicate pronounced success of the costume song programs of Alicia Muma and Olga Orth, her accompanist. Mrs. Muma has gone on to Australia to fill other engagements.

Unit Formed by Teachers

At a meeting held in John Smallman's studio Saturday evening, April 19, the Southern California Academy of Teachers of Singing was organized and the following officers were elected: Clifford Lott, chairman; Mme. Bertha Vaughn, vice-chairman; Roland Paul, treasurer and Monnie Hayes Hastings, secretary.

OPERA WILL BE STAGED BY SCHOOL

Performance Scheduled by Hollywood High for Three Nights This Week

The second presentation in Los Angeles of Gilbert and Sullivan's "The Sorcerer" will be given by Hollywood High School Thursday, at 2:15 p.m., and Friday and Saturday, at 8:15 p.m. in the high-school memorial auditorium at Highland and Hawthorne avenues.

"The Sorcerer" was first produced under the subtitle of "An Entirely Original Modern Comic Opera" on November 17, 1877, by the Famous D'Oyly-Carte Comedy Opera Company in London in the Opera Comique Theater, where it had a continuous run of 175 performances.

The Sorcerer is a cockney wizard, John Wellington Wells, who sells magic powders and "spells." He mixes a potent love philter in the teapot at a picnic and serves it around indiscriminately to the inhabitants of an entire village with, of course, disastrous results.

A London critic speaking of the sorcerer says, "He is a matchless, prodigious figure of fun, the most broadly comic character, perhaps, in the whole of the Gilbert and Sullivan gallery of eccentrics."

Two of the high lights of the opera are the Incantation and the famous "patter song" with its seemingly endless number of rhymes uttered with tongue-twisting rapidity.

As a result of research through magazines and fashion books printed in 1870, costumes, designed by Mrs. Ava Wells Lee of the art department and made by the high-schools girls in the sewing and millinery classes, are authentically mid-Victorian.

The cast follows:

John Wellington Wells of J. Wells & Co., family sorcerers, David Nater.

Lady Sangazure, a lady of ancient lineage, Eve Dalgleish.

Aline, her daughter, betrothed to Alexis, Carol Weiskopf.

Mrs. Partlett, a pew opener, Patricia Marsh.

Constance, her daughter, Isla Detter.

STAGE and SCREEN

EMMA DUNN IS SCREEN MOTHER

Stage Player Now Maternal in Films

BY ALMA WHITAKER

Emma Dunn, with her very own dark-brown sleek hair, her youthful matronly figure, her merry eyes, is proving an exceptionally good screen mother. In "The Texan" at the Paramount, as Gary Cooper's mother, she is winning fond eulogy as something "different."

For in this Emma Dunn is a cultured Spanish woman, old, dignified, so that in the first part of the story it was necessary to achieve clever make-up both for face and figure. And, when happier times come, we see her grow perceptibly younger with particularly clever effect.

For this role, too, Miss Dunn practically learned Spanish overnight . . . and wins praise for her excellent accent.

SINCE "PEER GYNT"

When I first interviewed Emma Dunn she was the heroine of "Courage," a youthful mother, at El Capitan for Henry Duffy. For years she had specialized in mother roles on the stage, although she is only about 40 now. Her very first mother role was as Richard Mansfield's parent in "Peer Gynt," a long time ago, and since then she has

Alan Moody Writes a First-Play, "The Questionable Elaine," About People Who Seek

Happiness—excitement—or perhaps just peace? In the cast appear Kay Hammond and Grayce Hampton, adorning the respective sides of Staff Artist Bruce Russell's drawing which shows Dennis D'Auburn and Symona Boniface. The comedy opens this evening at the Vine-street Theater.

SIMPLICITY WINS IN NEW DRAMA, SAYS D'AUBURN

A theory that the general trend of the world and its affairs runs toward simplicity is held by Dennis D'Auburn, who will tonight once again appear on a local stage.

In clarifying his idea, Mr. D'Auburn relates how the theater, as one phase of world-wide activity, has gradually cast off the excessive in both the constructive and the expressive sides of its technique. The play of today, he points out, is simply written and simply acted.

That in which he will act tonight at the Vine-street Theater has as its theme a conviction of Mr. D'Auburn's correctness; the triumph of simplicity. "The Questionable Elaine" is a first work of a new playwright, Alan Moody. It is a comedy of manners and sophistication, amusing rather than hilarious.

"Elaine is a girl brought up in the healthy quiet of an English estate," explains D'Auburn. "She rebels against the monotony and sets out to seek excitement. She finds it, but in the end reverts back to the tastes that are hers innately—simple, quiet tastes.

PEACE IN CALIFORNIA

"And I believe all people are the same. They rove through endless complications trying to amass fortunes, acquire culture or experience pleasure; but what everyone is after is peace. I have found peace, the first in my energetic life, here in California. The beauty all around one establishes that. It extends a soothing and a refining influence."

That new playwrights, who are unbound by theater routine and adventurous besides, could eventually change the extant form of the play Dennis D'Auburn considers unlikely.

"They can inject fresh spontaneity, new ideas and novel treatments; but a play can be built in only one manner. It takes the form of a triangle; starting with a fixed premise, mounts to an apex, then descends to a denouement. Success has sanctioned these limitations. Some writers have endeavored to overcome such custom as did Eugene O'Neill with 'Strange Interlude' and 'Dynamo.' But then drama becomes involved and too great a weight for the average mentality."

FROM ISLE OF JERSEY

The career of Dennis D'Auburn has been varied enough to give him an interesting background. He is an Englishman from the island of Jersey. The inhabitants are a multilingual people, speaking Latin and the purest Norman French.

D'Auburn's training at the Old Vic Theater in London began with carrying a spear and ended with his playing "Hamlet." He studied for the ministry, gave it up and went through the war. He appeared with Sothern and Marlowe in Shakespeare repertory, with Eva Le Gallienne. For four seasons he was with Max Reinhardt's "The Miracle." He was the only Englishman to star in the Comedie Francaise in Paris. His previous trips to this coast were for the purposes of taking part in "Oh, Kay," with Elsie Janis, and last year he was seen in the Edward Everett Horton production of "The Queen's Husband," which ran at the Vine-street.

STUPIDITY HER NEW AMBITION

Emily Fitzroy Would Change Mean Film Character

Ever since "Way Down East," Emily Fitzroy has been known as a cruel, venomous screen character woman.

She's rather tired of it all. She does not quite understand why she should always be called upon to purse her lips tightly, screw her hair into a knob on the top of her head and swish haughtily about in rusty black silk.

"It's so monotonous being cruel and vicious," she explains. "It's far worse than being stupid, far less interesting."

Emily Fitzroy, it may be remembered, was the rockbound Puritan, mother of Magnolia in "Showboat." She is the vindictive, horrible aunt in "Song o' My Heart," the John McCormack picture now at the Chinese. These roles have brought her high critical comment, but none as high as that lavished upon her by the New Yorker reviewers for her work in "The Man From Blankley's," John Barrymore's comedy now at Warners' Hollywood Theater.

In this, Miss Fitzroy had a chance not to be cruel and mean, but stupid. She's a socially ambitious hostess, an impossible crea-

"ALL QUIET" IN FRESH TRIUMPH

New York Accords Highest Critical Praise

Billie Dove Wins Another Standard Plot

"Cuckoos" Keeps Audiences in Uproar

BY NORBERT LUSK

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive) After the high critical praise accorded "All Quiet on the Western Front" in Los Angeles it occasions no surprise to record a like reception at the opening Monday evening at the Central Theater. From every standpoint the picture is thought to have captured the individuality of the original, and scores on at least four important points, namely, entertainment value, direction, acting and as a technical feat in sound films.

While every contributor is commended for his part in Universal's most noteworthy picture to date, it is Lewis Milestone, the director, to whom the more thoughtful reviewers give their superlatives. Not the least of their praise goes to him for maintaining a tempo more rapid than is usually found in audible films, not to mention the sensitiveness and delicacy expressed throughout the picture. Yet the battle scenes are terrific in their power and sweep, the addition of sound effects making them the greatest the screen has ever known, according to general opinion. While virtually every player has been singled out for honorable mention and critics are inclined to judge the picture as a whole and give it a place at the very top rather than rate by individual performance.

"A Notorious Affair" at the Strand is considered to be just another of the standardized plots which serve Billie Dove with regularity, if not with satisfaction, to the reviewers. Handsomely produced and on the whole very well acted, indeed, the story is considered unworthy of the time, effort and money required to give it the superficial touch of its present form.

"The Cuckoos" at the Globe brings Bert Wheeler and Robert Woolsey back to Broadway for the first time since "Rio Rita" and is found to be perfectly in keeping with the expectations of their admirers. The picture serves its purpose in keeping audiences in an uproar though it is singularly lacking in everything but laughter.

"The Ship From Shanghai" at the Capitol has not been well received either by reviewers or audiences. It is criticised on the score of a preposterous story, greatly overacted by players who have shown restraint on occasion and it is said to abound in inaccuracies discernible to those who know certain nautical terms. Yet the storm scenes are compelling in their realism and there is considerable suspense as to the fate of the passengers on board the yacht, even though the scene between Louis Wolheim and Kay Johnson which ends this suspense does not ring true to local audiences.

Nancy Carroll Pronounced Ideal for Color Films

Cameramen pronounce Nancy Carroll, with her sparkling blue eyes and her natural red hair, the "ideal Technicolor girl of the screen."

Red and green are the primary colors of Technicolor photography, as red, blue and yellow are the primary colors of the artist. In each camera is a prism which splits each scene into two images, one image reaching the negative through a red filter and the other through a green filter.

Red reproduces on the screen most faithfully by reason of the fact that it reaches the negative pure and clear through the red filter, whereas other colors of hair, like gold and yellow-blond and brown, are not direct primary colors and have not such a "clear track" to the film.

Pomeroy Talks About Films

If Hollywood can make a successful boxoffice picture from an English story, a cast composed almost entirely of English players—why can't London do the same? This question was put to Roy J. Pomeroy, who is director of the RKO picture, "Inside the Lines," which is an English story, written, directed, supervised and acted almost entirely by Britishers.

"England could gain a foothold in the industry if she would transplant Hollywood methods into the London studios. No one as yet, it seems, has been able to convince her of this fact," declared Pomeroy, who achieved prominence in directing one of the first all-talking pictures, "Interference." Pomeroy spent several months in Europe studying fortures, "Interference." After making sign production methods.

ISABEL WITHERS SEES OPPORTUNITY IN WEST

Once it was—"Oh, she is a Broadway favorite—a very good actress."

Now, it's becoming—"Oh, she is a Los Angeles favorite—a very good actress."

With the expansion of the local theatrical rialto to include a dozen theaters (a few years ago there was less than half that number) there has come a steady and sure growth in the local actors' colony—a community not, necessarily, to be confused with Hollywood.

Certain players are definitely Pacific Coast favorites. Pauline Frederick and Edward Everett Horton are two outstanding examples. They may be accepted and liked elsewhere, but their tried and true following is to be found in Los Angeles. There are others. The list has been expanding these last few years along with the increased activity on the stage.

Isabel Withers is one of the younger members of the colony. Three and one-half years ago she came West to play her original New York role in "Kempy" for Henry Duffy in San Francisco. She stayed to star in "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em."

She remained still longer to act in "The Barker," "Saturday's Children," "Interference" and "The Night Hostess" as well as some half-dozen more Duffy plays.

"At first, I planned to return to New York," said Isabel. "Then I became definitely interested in Coast theatricals and decided that here was as great an opportunity as to be had in the East, and so—here I am now."

And here is Miss Withers this week and the one to follow playing again in "Love 'Em and Leave 'Em," the merry farce which was one of her first efforts on the Coast and which turned the tide from the East to the West.

HE NEVER THREW A PIE!

So Insists Billy Bevan, Ten Years a Keystone Comic; Now Seen in "Journey's End"

BY ELENA BOLAND

Ten years in Keystone Comedies without once throwing a pie is the unique record held by Billy Bevan, he of the flowing walrus mustache.

But this was the one and only escape which came Bevan's way. Some day he may fill a book with the hardships that make up the life of a comic. Falling in mud, in cement, being covered with hot paraffin, being played with by lions, walking the edge of a thirteen-story building with eyes closed were some of the ordinary events of Bevan's day. And then there are some, he says, who still think the actor's life is the easiest way.

There are two invaluable trainings for the versatile actor, declares Mr. Bevan. One of them is comedy experience and the other is the dramatic stock company. He has fortunately had both, though he has found that the distinction of comedian has its liabilities as well as assets.

MASTER OF TEMPO

"I discovered that after having been with Sennett for so long no one thought I could do anything but tumble and sling custard. The comedian in this country is not as important as he is in Europe. Over there, if he is good, he is classed as an artist; here he is a clown. People don't realize what he must know in order to do comedy. In 100 feet of film he must get over what the dramatic actor can take 400 or 500 feet to accomplish. He has to be a master of tempo."

The first chance Billy Bevan had to convince producers that he was acquainted with other things besides pies was in "High Voltage," a film released last year. Since then he has been free-lancing and busy.

His biggest opportunity, and one which he enjoyed more than any other in his long career, was the part of Trotter in "Journey's End," now playing at the Mayan Theater. The picture was to have an all-English cast, and had it been known Bevan had never set foot in that country he would never have had the role. He is an Australian and able, due to early training, to speak fluently in the Cockney accent. Because of his proficiency he had executives standing about picturing him all over Bloomsbury and other London landmarks.

INTERNATIONAL TYPE

He believes he must be an international type, for he has just finished a picture, "Temptation," in which he played his first "straight" role, a man from Flatbush. Upon hearing his dialect a German approached him telling him he was just the type for some German part. He played a Swede not long ago and is wondering if Sweden will be considered his fatherland too.

That slapstick has been absorbed by sophistication Bevan heartily denies. But at the same time he admits it has a new place now that it is done to sound.

"Slapstick has not gone out, but it is incorporated now in the dramatic film and is all the more outstanding because of the contrast. Take 'Journey's End,' for instance; in one place I actually fall in the mud just as I used to in the old days. The gags that comedies considered too old and worn for further usage are now thought to be great as relief in the heavier sort of picture."

Billy Bevan is not an advocate of slapstick. He does, however, enjoy comedy: amiable, gentle comedy. Being funny for business reasons has not destroyed his sense of humor and he can sense and instantly appreciate the ridiculous in every situation.

STAGE RENEWS STELLAR CAREERS

Triumph of Lillian Gish in "Uncle Vanya" Striking Example of How Footlights can Benefit; Other Hits Made by Hollywood Stars; "June Moon's" Gay Entertainment

BY EDWIN SCHALLERT

LILLIAN GISH, it would seem, has exerted a spellbinding influence on the critics upon her eastern stage debut. She is cast prominently in Tchekhov's "Uncle Vanya"—the Jed Harris production of the celebrated Russian's play—and practically unanimous is the verdict of her success. Indeed one New York paper devotes nearly two full columns to the splendor of her talents.

Miss Gish left here after making one picture with talk, "The Swan," possessing scant prospects for a future in this medium. I imagine that now her career can begin all over again in the film medium any time she wants to forsake the stage. But there is small likelihood of that just at present. It is understood that she will be starred in a play, probably specially written for her, when "Uncle Vanya" has run its course.

THE chief comparisons of Miss Gish's talents seem to have been to those of Eleanora Duse and Maude Adams. One critic goes so far as to describe her as more near Duse. Miss Adams, he declared, was a good actress; Miss Gish, like Duse, is a great actress.

This is not the first time Miss Gish's gifts have been mentioned in the same breath with the late Italian stage queen's. She was hailed as a Duse when "Way Down East" was shown.

A VENTURE on the New York stage is apparently not so disadvantageous. Several players have lately gone there and created a brilliant impression. Among the most prominent is Tullio Carminati, whose fortunes in the films were not so highly favored here during the earlier days of talking pictures. He has played the whole season in New York in "Strictly Dishonorable."

Then there is Lily Damita, who has been a big hit in "Sons O' Guns," which has been running since last November. Not so brightly did she glitter in pictures, despite her association with that very popular film, "The Cock-Eyed World."

Bert Lytell fared well, too,

COVANS STEP LIVELY

Troupe Goes In For Triple Time in Figueroa Playhouse Revue

Is dancin' natural fo' cullud boys? No, suh—no suh! "I wonder where all those funny ideas come from," drawled one of the Four Covans as he swung his feet nonchalantly and hummed a bit of the music from "Up and at 'Em," the all-colored revue playing at the Figueroa Playhouse.

"Work? I bet I worked harder than anybody before I could dance, you see I started when I was utility man 'round a theater in Pennsylvania, one night I'd work the electric switches an' the next night I'd work the curtain, the rest of the nights I'd do the same thing—except maybe they'd give me a line to say or a noise to make.

"Well, I watched those dark boys step on and off the stage—an' I gradually got the idea that I'd like to dance too. I started to practice. Who-all said that dancin' came natural to colored folks, huh?"

DANCE FOR YEARS

It was Jack Covan speaking. Willy looked on with a large ivory grin. The two have been dancing together for a good many years. Willy, who is a second Bill Robinson, saw Jack's work and was so impressed that he hired him as one of the Covans. The troupe has traveled all over the world and has appeared in such prominent productions as the "Blackbirds," and in the Alabamy Club, New York.

In the last few months, however, the quartet has been connected with the various motion-picture studios—Willy having to his credit the staging of dance numbers for "Fox Movietone Follies."

"Willy has more brains for that sort of thing than I have," Jack drawled in a sleepy baritone. "I staged some numbers for 'Putting on the Ritz,' but I get scared. I'd rather do the dancin' an' let someone else do the bossin'."

SEEM SAFE IN ART

The Covans, however, seem safe in their art. It would take many years of practice for anyone to equal the speed with which they execute the many difficult breaks of their various tap numbers.

"It's not so hard in Europe," they said. "People over there never see tap dancing to any great extent, so they jus' love it. Over here youngsters learn to tap dance before they learn to walk. It keeps one busy thinking up new tricks."

"Up and at 'Em" is a revue written by the company at large. Everyone sat around thinking up new gags and putting monkey glands in old ones. The music, which promises to be popular, is the work of Sonny Clay. A chorus of eighteen steppers and a cast of Harlem celebrities make up the personnel list of the production.

CRITICS TAKE IT ON CHIN

BY PERCY HAMMOND

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive)—All the New York drama critics felt complimented last week when they heard that Miss Barrymore had labeled them "rock men." The name suggesting strength, stability, grandeur and prominence, indicated that Miss Barrymore had reversed her former opinion of the local actuaries and was recognizing them as what they are.

"Rock man." How solid it sounded—an object to cling to in time of peril, or a steadfast foundation in a neighborhood of shifting sands. At last, we thought, Miss Barrymore has discovered that we are impregnable, immutable, unscalable and prudential, topped by warning lighthouses and fortified with heavy guns. Dangerous only when dashed against, sat upon, or fallen off of, and as protective to the drama as Gibraltar to the motherland, we were pleased that Miss Barrymore had given us her accolade as such.

But Miss Barrymore did not mean the term "rock men" in the way we had hoped. In recent interview she said that New York is "infested with a lot of terrible men who write."

"No one used to pay any attention to them," she continued, "but now you pick them up in dentists' offices. I call them 'rock men'—you know what I mean—the things that creep out from under the rocks after dark. But managers listen to them and their impertinent wise cracks. One or two of them ought to be shot at dawn!"

NOISOME NONDESCRIPTS

Why, as Miss Nora Bayes used to say, why wait till dawn! We had an opportunity to excuse our existence last year by appreciating Miss Barrymore's plays, "The Love Duel" and "The Kingdom of God," but so lost were we in admiration of her acting that her drama seemed false by contrast. So they did not get along. In Detroit, Newark, Chicago, Washington and other capitals unifected by New York "rock men" the entertainment prospered. Performed eighty-hour weeks from coast to coast, the receipts ranged upward from tidy sums to large amounts. What are known at the box office as "takings" made new heavyweight records in show business. It is not surprising, therefore, that Miss Barrymore refers to New York drama critics as noisome nondescripts that lurk in dark places until someone uncovers them and they scamper or waddle out into the night. They bit and nibbled at "Abie's Irish Rose" and Mr. Skinner's "A Hundred Years Old" as well as "The Kingdom of God" and "The Love Duel," all of which made both money and pleasure.

But sometimes Miss Barrymore hears the other kind of "rock men." The theater's magic makes it possible for us to lead what has been referred to as the dual existence, to be known as the colossi, the lizards. We are "rock men" of the bigger type when we like "Journey's End," "The Green Pastures" or the performances of Miss Barrymore, but our objections to "The Love Duel" and "The Kingdom of God" are verminous. In my capacity as an insect I still claim that both of Miss Barrymore's last year's plays were shoddy. "They liked them in Washington," she says. One can to school. I took two and a half years of law at Santa Clara University, but wasn't so good at that either. So then they let me play an Hungarian hussar (with an Irish map) in 'The Stolen Bride;' and presently the old F.B.O. gave me a part to show off my fancy diving in 'Her Summer Hero.' Bits as flight commander in 'Lilac Time' and as a press agent in 'Footlights and Fools' were my last pictures. After that I decided maybe I should be a stage actor, and I joined a funny little stock company that played the small towns around here. Then I did two shows in Glendale stock . . . and they went broke. . . .

"So just about the time I was feeling a flop, George Holland said this 'June Moon' part was made for me. So I rehearsed with the company in Chicago and opened in St. Louis . . . and gee, I've got some grand notices."

MODERNISTIC SPIRIT SEEN IN 'INVALID'

Moliere's Classic Play Presented at Repertory Theater

Whatever the criticism of the Civic Repertory Theater of Los Angeles may be it cannot be said that it is reactionary. It presents the classics, that is true; but it has proved by the current production, "The Imaginary Invalid," that it possesses a modernistic spirit. The innovation of casting a musical-comedy actor for the central figure of a classic comedy drama was an innovation on the part of Paul Irving, director of the group. That it has been a success is due, perhaps, to the individual, John Sheehan.

In Moliere's "The Imaginary Invalid" Sheehan has proved the old idea that a classic presentation need not necessarily be dull. The method of presenting each character with a motif and the introduction of a string orchestra to the Music Box pit has awakened response in theatergoers. The blase younger generation, accustomed to treating Moliere, Shakespeare and others of their classic ilk as classroom bores, appears to find new delights in the brilliancy of "The Imaginary Invalid" lines.

are Senators Dill, Brookhart, Heflin, Johnson, Caraway and other giant intellectuals reveling in "The Love Doctor" and "The Kingdom of God!" Miss Cornell, I think, and Miss Lynn Fontanne would prefer not to have their approval.

NO RESTRICTIONS ON TASTE

Years ago when Mr. George White was beginning his career as rival to Mr. Ziegfeld, he worried the latter by his affrontery. When Mr. Ziegfeld whispered it, Mr. White said it out loud and a Ziegfeld suggestion became a fact in a White revue. If the ladies were nude in the Follies, they were naked in the Scandals, and it seemed that this would go on and on, until the City Hall or the Federal government would be forced to interfere. The theater is now triumphant over law and order. No restrictions are put upon the taste and conduct on the stage, and a clown can tell your girl a soiled joke in public and make you like it. Mr. White's new show is called "Flying High." The girls who dance in it are the prettiest of the coryphees, young, agile and more than usually melodious. They are dressed, of course in Mr. White's most expensive method which, they tell me, disregards cost and is amenable to taste.

Though I have seen a thousand "Flying Highs" in my time I liked this one of Mr. White's as well as any. Its story is just another scissored-and-glue thing, pasted up and put together in a way that must make Harry B. Smith and better collaborers writhe. But it has Oscar Shaw as its grinning hero, Bert Lahr as its clown and a chorus which is the best that Broadway can produce. The heroine, Miss Nora Blinkley, and the villainess, Miss Dorothy Hall, are all that, as Frank Sullivan might say, could be desired. The show is a bang, a right, a swift dauntless performance planned cunningly for Mr. White's Broadway.

Many Fashions Start in Films

Most fads in woman's fashions originate on the screen, according to Lilyan Tashman, who has the reputation of being one of the best-gowned women in Hollywood.

"Short skirts really originated in pictures," declares Miss Tashman, "and until actresses begin to wear longer ones for their characterizations there will be no decided change."

JOE COOK MAKES REMARKS

Funny Man of Stage Comments on Hollywood; Suggests Startling Innovations

"Having just arrived in Hollywood," remarks Joe Cook, comedian, by way of explanation, "it is easy for me to state exactly the merits and demerits of the place. It being my first trip to Hollywood, I might—in fact I will—speak with considerable authority on the proper procedure for making motion pictures. According to my contract with Columbia Pictures, I must start kodaking 'Rain or Shine.'

"The first proper thing to do immediately upon arrival in Hollywood is to become engaged to some beautiful motion-picture lady. I had narrowed my choice down to Norma Shearer and Joan Crawford, but my daughter, who is in the sixth grade and studies movie magazines, proved to me that they were already married. Then when I hurriedly comprised a second list of acceptable beauties, my wife destroyed it without the least ado. However, I have started a new list headed by Polly Moran."

Mr. Cook believes the work in Hollywood is much easier than in the theater.

"Of course," he concedes, "the hours are a bit different. On a matinee day one has to be in the theater about 2 o'clock, whereas I understand in pictures, they expect you to be in the studios no later than noon. However, this early starting hours is somewhat balanced by the fact that at 3 p.m. sharp, everybody is through for the day. No work is done in the studios on Saturday or Sunday and at the Columbia lot Friday is also a holiday.

INVENTION DESCRIBED

"So, while the actor's time is somewhat broken into during the week, he is a bit compensated for this annoyance by having the entire week-end to himself. In making 'Rain or Shine,' we are going to try something new, novel and different. With the aid of my recent invention, we hope to make this a talking picture, by a simple though elaborate device.

"This picture you will not only see but hear!" Mr. Cook promises astonishingly. "I predict that within a couple of years' time there will be hundreds of theaters advertising and actually showing talking pictures. This should be the greatest advance the screen has made since I originally conceived the idea of making pictures move. Also, great interest should follow the announcement that the inventor of the motion picture, Joe Cook, is at last going to appear, in the pictures himself, in person. Another new idea I have just perfected will enable me to make at least a part of 'Rain or Shine' in color. I am seriously thinking of calling my process Technicolor.

DEVISES NEW PLOT

"After finishing 'Rain or Shine,' I am anxious to attempt a picture with a really novel plot. This will revolve around a man and wife who are held together by a small but darling child, who handily takes sick, which gives the father the idea of taking the boy on his knee and singing a song which I will probably name 'Sonny, My Boy.' The cue for the song will be, when in response to the father's query, 'Do you love your daddy?' the boy, who like most children of his age, has a slight lisp, answers, 'It theems I do, daddy.' This will most likely cause the song to be referred to as the Theme Song. After a few years I guarantee no picture will be complete without one. The ideal selection for the part of the father would be a fellow named Al Jolson, on account of his small salary. Incidentally, I predict a bright future for this young man and prophesy and believe that in a year or so he will be receiving at least $1000 a week.

JUST LIKE THE STAGE

"The first day I am called for work will find me on the lot sharp at noon, to meet Frank Capra, who will direct 'Rain or Shine.' It won't take him long to find out that there is nothing he can tell me about motion pictures. I've been on the stage for years, and I figure out that pictures are just the same, except that on the stage you have to pay to get your picture taken, while in the 'movies,' if I may be permitted the vernacular, they pay you to get your picture taken. Hooping out of my Rolls-Royce, which I will have borrowed for the occasion, or maybe I will use my own Ford, I will walk up and say, 'Is this Mr. Capra?' Upon receiving an affirmative answer, he will be delighted and awed when I tell him who I am. In fact, I anticipate all Hollywood will be agog when they learn that at last a stage actor has arrived to enter the movies."

College Glee Clubs Develop Musical Talent

Glee clubs develop more real talent than any other musical group in college, according to Fred Waring, director of the Pennsylvanians' orchestra and producer of "Rah Rah Daze," new musical comedy now in its seventh and final week at the Mason.

"If a boy makes the glee club nowadays," says Waring, "that is just as important an honor as playing on the football or baseball team. Many colleges even award varsity letters to the glee club members.

"Glee clubs go on tour, and their concerts are exploited many weeks in advance. They are entertained socially. Many soloists receive offers for vaudeville and musical comedy. They are also in demand for phonograph recording and for radio broadcasting."

"Nearly all glee club boys are also capable musicians. In fact, a modern glee club concert is much more than a vocal program. It runs the whole gamut of music.

"Most of my Pennsylvanians were glee club members in college. That is why they are so versatile. In addition to their orchestral ability, their drinking song, campus medley and megaphone drill are outstanding highlights."

Dancers Seen at Supper Club

"Hollywood has attracted the most alluring girls in America," declares George Olson, who selected sixteen of them for his new supper club in Culver City.

"More than 1500 girls applied to Edward Beck, our producer, during rehearsals, about half of them natives of California and the other half from every State in the Union. Blonds were in the majority, with the number of brunettes and titians equally divided. Those selected were chosen for their youth, beauty and personality.

"Night clubs have proved a stepping stone to the screen in the past. Dorothy Mackaill, Billie Dove and Katheryn Perry once glorified the 'Ziegfeld Midnight Frolic.' Not so long ago Helen Morgan and Helen Kane crooned their songs in my club in New York. Booking agents came, made offers, and the rest is well known."

Follies Bill Offers Laughs

Under the slogan of "Burlesque as you like it," the Follies will offer for the week beginning today "World of Pleasure."

Bumps Mack and Lefty Le Vine, comedians, will offer bits of comedy to chase the blues away. Miss Wanda Devon and Evelyn Myers, featured soubrettes, will present dancing specialties. Jane Hazleton, Ray Parsons, Ruth Clemons, Audry Lee, Sam Farnum and George Crump are also prominently cast in the bill.

The show was designed primarily to create laughter, although the bright and rapid-moving comedy is interrupted at frequent intervals by the introduction of musical numbers and specialties.

HAINES SHOOTS FROM HIP

William Haines, who played hard at football, baseball, golf and other sports for his pictures, had to practice revolver shooting and quick drawing until he mastered the art of shooting from the hip. This was for his new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer western, "Easy Going," which Fred Niblo is directing.

ORIENTAL STAR TO BE HERE SOON

Mei Lan-Fang Will Be at Philharmonic For One Week

Anticipated by Los Angeles theatergoers and patrons of the art is the debut here of Mei Lan-Fang, foremost of the Pear Garden, Grand Abbot of the Ching Chung monastery, China's greatest actor and portrayer of feminine roles. This will take place Tuesday, the 13th inst., at Philharmonic Auditorium. The announcement comes from L. E. Behymer, who states that Mei, with his company of actors and musicians, will play a limited engagement of a week's duration.

A thorough artist, Mei Lan-Fang for the first time brings to Los Angeles his distinctive type of drama. In China, where women did not appear on the stage until quite recently, and where men have taken their roles, the art of enacting feminine parts is a most difficult one, in no wise comparable to acting on the European stage.

The tan, as the feminine impersonator is known, must be master of many branches of his art. He must be an unusually graceful and accomplished dancer, the possessor of knowledge of the many traditions of the Chinese theater, where even the slightest gesture, such as the lifting of a single finger or a barely perceptible turn of the body, denotes a particular and distinctive action or emotion.

In the vehicles in which Mei Lan-Fang will appear in his Los Angeles engagement at the Philharmonic, he will be afforded opportunity to display his dancing ability, which has been compared to the work of Mordkin and even to that of Pavlowa. Dances dating back to the fourth century, B. C., wand juggling, ceremonial javelin duels, tumbling and other physical feats, all within the limits of oriental drama, will be among those he will introduce to local audiences.

MOTHER IN FILMS NOW

mothered half the actors and actresses in America.

Which was why R.-K.-O. sought her as the mother of Tom, Owen and Matt Moore in "Side Street," her very first picture.

"So much to learn," she laughs, "I felt like a young actress beginning all over again. You know, pride and vanity always hold us back, so I have been conquering those traits in myself all my life. I managed to leave them behind when I came to the screen, and so feel that I have been born again. I have just finished 'Manslaughter' with that lovely, clever little Claudette Colbert . . . a marvelous young star who will go far . . . culture, breeding, talent. So seldom we find talent coupled with culture . . . which is why so many of our geniuses have come from humble walks of life. Culture seems to stifle talent . . ."

TEACHES VOICE AS WELL

In "Manslaughter" Emma is Claudette's aunt . . . "Not quite such a good role as Gary's mother in 'The Texan,' but well worth it to be played with such a pleasant youngster . . ."

Between her stage and screen work, Miss Dunn teaches voice and diction, and discourses upon the Bible . . . "The Bible is the most amazing book in the world . . . all the fairy tales, all the drama, all the poetry there is . . ."

"I think," she says, "that the talking screen offers the biggest opportunity there is in the world today. I am just as thrilled as someone who had never seen the theater . . . But we stage actors have so much to learn—if only we can get rid of the old ego and be child-like. No use feeling uppish and saying, 'Well, I did beautiful parts once . . . Who cares? It is only what we can do now that matters."

GOULDING PREPARING

Edmund Goulding, who recently directed Nancy Carroll in his own story, "The Devil's Holiday," is now writing another original story which he will direct at the Paramount studios in Hollywood.

"CRIMINAL CODE" DUE AT BELASCO

Show Arrives in Week; Arthur Byron to Play Warden Role

To all intents, Arthur Byron, who takes the lead in "The Criminal Code," coming to Belasco Theater beginning Monday, the 12th inst., was born in the theater. The son of Oliver Doud Byron, and Kate Byron, stage stars, he was carried on the stage in his mother's arms at the Boston Theater in the first act of his father's successful melodrama, "Across the Continent." At that time he was only a few weeks old, and he has been on the sage ever since.

Byron received his early stage training in his father's company and then he spent two seasons with Sol Smith Russell. Following a year in stock at San Francisco he came to New York to join one of Charles Frohman's companies where he remained several years in association with John Drew. He scored in such plays as "The Liars," "The Tyranny of Tears," "Rosemary" and other popular successes of that day.

During his years with Mr. Frohman and subsequent engagements, he was leading man for Ethel Barrymore, Mrs. Fiske, Maude Adams, Margaret Anglin, Mary Mannering, Amelia Bingham, Frances Starr and others.

Byron's starring vehicles included "Petticoats and Bayonets," "Major Andre," "Jack's Little Surprise," "Bluebeard's Eighth Wife," "Transplanting Jean," "Thy Neighbor's Wife" and "The Ghost Between."

He co-starred with Ina Claire, Margaret Lawrence and Martha Hedman, and made his last New York appearance in "The Marquise" with Billie Burke. Of recent years he will be best remembered for his work in "The Boomerang," "Tea for Three," "Spring Cleaning" and "A Kiss in a Taxi." Last season he appeared with Ina Claire in the Jed Harris production of "The Lady of Newgate."

Byron has wide range as an actor, and finds himself quite at home in any type of play. His role in "The Criminal Code" is that of the prison warden. By special permission from Gov. Tudor Gariner of Maine, Byron spent a week last summer at the Maine Prison, Thomaston, to get authentic information to help him in playing the role.

Play of War President Said to Be Perfect

Rev. Sylvester Woodbridge Beach, who had the distinction of being a classmate and also of performing the two marriage ceremonies of the late President Woodrow Wilson and of his two daughters, Mrs. William MacAdoo and Mrs. Sayre, and who also delivered a funeral oration at the obsequies of the late President, has passed upon the manuscript of "Woodrow Wilson," a four-act drama by Maurice Salzman, and has written as follows:

"Having known Woodrow Wilson during almost half a century, and having been in association with him somewhat intimately during and after the war, I regard Mr. Salzman's play true to the spirit and the policy of our war President."

"Woodrow Wilson," will open tomorrow at the Theater Mart for a run of seven days.

Film Public Being Educated in Music Value

The education of the fan public to new standards of appreciation of the beauty in music, is the task to be achieved by the original screen operetta, according to Alan Crosland, director of "Song of the Flame" for Warner Brothers.

Crosland, who is a pioneer in this field, since he directed the first original screen operetta, "Viennese Nights," affirms the fact that musical romances are opening up the hearts of the picture-going public to the loveliness inherent in music.

All the great climacteric periods in our history such as the Revolutionary War, the civil strife between the North and the South and other similar stirring times will be brought to the public with force and dramatic color when the music of those conflicts is woven into the fabric of the story, Crosland asserts.

ture, who is foolishly snobbish and catapults herself into absurd situations from which it is impossible to extricate herself.

Miss Fitzroy is authority for the statement that in the original London play production her role did not amount to a great deal. It has been built up to strong proportions in the picture and she had an opportunity to develop a characterization which, for once, Miss Fitzroy admits, was not hacked up sadly in the cutting room.

"And," she said, "I have never worked with a more generous player than John Barrymore. He would give away scenes right and left if he liked the work a particular actor was doing. There was never any question of taking a scene away from anyone.

"I'm particularly happy about 'The Man From Blankley's,' partly because it has been given praise as a film, and partly because I have had a definite opportunity to show what I can do besides mean old women. Maybe I can go in for stupidity for a change."

REDHEAD MADE MORE SO

Zelma O'Neal, a natural Titian, has had her hair brightened to meet the requirements of Technicolor in "Follow Through," her first Paramount picture. Final passport details are being arranged so that the actress can leave immediately following the completion of the picture to join her husband, Anthony Bushell, in England.

'Vagabond King' on Screen at Million Dollar

O. P. Heggie has won a throne.

He wears the royal purple as the king of France in Paramount's talking, singing romance, "The Vagabond King," starring Dennis King and featuring Lillian Roth and Jeanette MacDonald, now at the Million Dollar Theater.

Heggie is seen in "The Vagabond King" as a petulant, weak-willed monarch who is confronted with the ills of government which were so rife in the dark ages in which the action of the picture takes place. He allows Dennis King, as Francois Villon, rowdy poet, to become king of France for a week. The manner in which the king leads the vagabond rabble against the enemy of France is dramatically and colorfully depicted.

On the stage the theater offers vaudeville headed by Andy Burns ("The Street Faker,") Fumi Kawahatta and Horu Tsunejiro, "Japan's Premiere Dancers;" The Vitaphone Four and Cordova Cantu's Mexican entertainers with Lucinda, Ricardo and Nelita, the latter act an entire presentation in itself.

Evelyn Brent Cannot Escape Crook Roles

Unless the tastes of motion-picture fans change, or casting directors lose all sense of characterization, Evelyn Brent seems destined to play feminine "crook" roles for the remainder of her screen career.

Although Miss Brent seems satisfied with her lot in the talkie world, her friends point out that she is anything but the iron-nerved, hard-souled character she is required to play on the screen.

In Radio's melodrama of the underworld, "Framed," now being shown at the R.-K.-O. Theater, she plays the part of the daughter of a racketeer who has been killed by the police. And she swears "revenge" against the "coppers" for the deed.

"All this business of casting me as a woman outside the law started with the silent picture, 'Underworld,'" says Miss Brent. "I'm afraid I'll be playing the same type of role for the rest of my career. But I'm satisfied. I believe I do my best type of work in that kind of role."

Aiding and abetting Miss Brent are Regis Toomey, Ralf Harolde, Robert Emmett O'Connor, Maurice Black, William Holden and Eddie Kane.

Frank Fay Seen in Tower Film

Frank Fay, playing the leading role of Don Carlos in "Under a Texas Moon," an all-Technicolor picture, comes to the Tower Theater tomorrow. He has some of the most famous villains of the screen to aid him.

Noah Beery is a somewhat noisy but altogether agreeable rapscallion; Fred Kohler does another type of heavy; Tully Marshall adds a distasteful if amusing characterization to speed the story. Charles Sellon, who is sly and devilish, gets what is due him early in the story. Georgie Stone, George Cooper, Jack Curtis, and Sam Appel are also in the list of villainous characters with which Don Carlos has to deal.

But it is the senoritas to whom Don Carlos makes violent love that make the story colorful. Among them are Raquel Torres, Myrna Loy, Armida, Mona Maris and Betty Boyd.

WIFE ROLE PLAYED BY FILM STAR

Norma Shearer Handles Delicate Situations in "The Divorcee"

In a few more days Norma Shearer in "The Divorcee" will arrive at the Criterion, succeeding "The King of Jazz." Those who have seen "The Divorcee" describe it as "quite the last word in sophistication." Some call it racy and daring. Others, frank and honest.

Information on hand indicates that Norma Shearer has the role of a wife who matches her husband's infidelities by a course of procedure all her own.

Action takes place in the millionaire colonies of California, New York and Paris. Ex-wives and ex-husbands, with millions to spend and nothing to do except hunt for mischief are presented in backgrounds and costumes that are reported chic, smart and altogether ultra-ultra.

Women who have read Ursula Parrott's novel, from which the picture was adapted, are said to be curious to see what Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer has done in their version of the book.

Norma Shearer's supporting cast includes Chester Morris, Conrad Nagel, Robert Montgomery, Florence Eldridge, Helen Millard, Robert Elliott, Mary Doran, Tyler Brooke, Zelda Sears, George Irving and Helen Johnson.

"The Divorcee" will follow "The King of Jazz" into the Criterion about the middle of May.

Minstrel Days Recalled by Jolson's Films

The premiere of Al Jolson at Warner Brothers' Downtown Theater in "Mammy," a singing romance of minstrel days, brings to mind the part played in a former generation by these genial gentlemen of the crimson coat, the tall hat, the white gloves, the trombone and the burnt-cork map.

Among names celebrated in the minstrel world were John Halverley of "Haverley's Mastodon Minstrels," Al G. Fields, Lew Dockstader, Primrose and West, Considine and Dixie and many others. Charles Frohman, the producer, was agent for Haverley and marched in more than one parade, so did his brother Daniel.

Numberless comedians and balladiats are said to owe their success to this same source. Chauncey Olcott, who won fame and fortune by his Irish hits, began by singing in the "first part" of a minstrel show. Jolson served such an apprenticeship, as did Eddie Leonard, Eddie Foy, Frank Tinney, Bert Swor of Moran and Mack, Leon Errol, Tom Howard and scores besides.

Palace Showing Devil's Island

To assure authenticity in her description of Devil's Island, penal colony island, Mrs. Blair Niles gained permission from the French government to make a personal visit there in preparation of her writing, "Condemned to Devil's Island." The motion-picture version of this, starring Ronald Colman, is now showing at the Palace Theater. The next attraction for the Palace will be Warner Baxter in "Such Men Are Dangerous," to open Thursday.

FILM TO BE IN COLOR

Paramount's filmization of the Schwab and Mandel golf musical comedy, "Follow Thru," will be entirely in Technicolor.

"BIG THREE"

A "Big Three" of outdoor action pictures are bringing "The Border Legion" to the audible screen. They are Zane Grey, Jack Holt and Paramount. Holt is featured in this Grey film with Richard Arlen and Fay Wray.

Lure of East Pervades Play of China Piety

"Daughter of Heaven," a Chinese film, emphasizing the ethics of Confucious in regard to "filial piety," is the current attraction of the Filmarte Theater.

The picture offers a view of the Orient and the emotional reactions of the oriental mind.

"Daughter of Heaven" was written and produced by James B. Leong, who was born in Shanghai but educated in America. Following his graduation from an eastern university, Leong entered the Hollywood studios as technical expert and actor and has appeared in a number of prominent features. He is an authority on Chinese traditions and every detail of the picture has been developed in order to create a definite glimpse of the real China.

The story relates the importance of the secret formula for the sacred temple bells. The lovely daughter of the Prime Minister loves a lad but both make the supreme sacrifice to the unwritten law of "filial piety"—the boy by slaying the leader of the Tartars who are about to invade the city, the girl by giving her life to perpetuate the temple bells.

The lure and haunting beauty of the Orient are said to pervade the film, with elaborate sets and picturesque costumes. The Chinese cast is headed by Lady Tsen Mei.

"KICK" IN EMPTY ZEP

What constitutes a thrilling scene? Cecil B. De Mille says that the biggest "kick" to him, in his new M.-G.-M. picture, "Mme. Satan," is a sequence in which there isn't a single actor. It consists of shots of an empty Zeppelin rocking in a storm after all its passengers and crew have jumped to safety.

MINSTRELSY WAS START FOR POWELL

Comedian Began Stage Career in Old School of Black Face

Richard Powell, the elongated comedian, who adds much to the gayety of Lillian Albertson's stage production of "The Student Prince," at the Majestic Theater, is a graduate of the old school of minstrelsy, though in later years he has appeared mostly in musical comedy and light opera. He is the possessor of a melodious baritone voice.

"There was a time when many minstrel companies roamed the land," said Powell. "Their coming to town was the big event of the season. Now the number has dwindled to a few minor ones, it being found impossible to compete with pretty girl revues and the movies."

Powell, acting the part of Lutz in "The Student Prince," in support of Allan Prior, has seen many changes in stage life.

"In the old days after the show was over, all the actors in town would gather at some rendezvous and exchange stories.

"'Bill,' I'd say to a fellow-actor, 'we need a good gag for such and such a place.' Bill would think for a minute and come out with what was usually a creditable joke. We, in turn, would tell him a good one for his next stop. Nothing like that now. After the night's performance everybody's gone until the next performance.

"Neither are players as versatile as they were when a man had to play several parts a night. But salaries are better now—much better."

ROMANCE MARKS CAREERS

Dancing Team Routs Wolf from Doorstep With Few Well-Placed Kicks

BY MARY MAYER

Tea for two is always romantic. Breakfast for two is seldom as rosy—especially when one of the parties concerned is out of work and the hunger wolf slinks around the apartment corner.

This, however, was the state of affairs some four years ago. Juliette Johnson and her husband, George Murphy, stared at the four walls of a New York apartment and mulled over in their minds all of the hockable objects in their possession.

True, Murphy had a perfectly good sheepskin from Yale, stating in hand lettered scrolls that he was now a full-fledged mining engineer. True, too, was the fact that he had hied himself to the mountains where his brother headed a large concern devoted to the type of work that Murphy had fitted himself to do. But somehow it hadn't worked out.

JULIE SAID YES

What to do? That was the question. Julie wanted to go on the stage. George objected. Julie insisted. George still objected. But Julie finally won—with a provision. That was that if she went on the stage, George would go along as well.

Why they picked dancing, neither of them can tell—save the fact that it had always come easy and they thoroughly enjoyed it. After scraping all of their worldly wealth together, and obtaining the sum total of $18, they bought a dance routine. Then came the process of annoying various New York theatrical agents until they finally succeeded in getting a try-out.

But fate still turned a cold shoulder on their efforts. At the appointed time Julie appeared with her practice clothes short and her hopes high. Minutes passed—and no Murphy. More minutes passed, and still no Murphy. Finally in desperation Julie dug into her purse, found a lone nickel and called the apartment. A sleepy voice answered the phone—framing another cause for the great institution, divorce.

PHENOMENAL RISE

Necessity as well as anything else, however, kept the two youngsters plugging until they won another try-out. This one, which came off as per schedule, resulted in the long - sought - after engagement. When weekly pay checks began to make life more worth while, they were invested in dancing lessons. The couple's rise to the peak of New York dance teams was little short of phenomenal.

It was during their engagement in the Club Richman that Murphy and Johnson first met George Olsen whose band, along with their dancing, proved stellar features. One of Olsen's first moves when he planned for the opening of his new club in Culver City, was to wire the team and arrange for its appearance with the orchestra for the first few months, at least.

The dancers are now in Los Angeles, and, incidentally, are enjoying it thoroughly.

"The idea here seems to be for a taxi driver to see how many pedestrians he can keep from hitting," Murphy said. "In New York the game is to find out which operator can knock down the greatest number."

Western hospitality is another surprise to the Murphys. They discovered a house to their liking one Monday morning. The owners moved by noon so that the couple might lose no time establishing themselves. In addition to this they offered the use of their car and sent over a completely cooked meal.

At present the two manage to keep their spare time well occupied visiting the various studios and obtaining first-hand glimpses of the stars. Julie admitted that during lunch hour at the motion-picture concerns, she was much too busy to even think of eating.

Although the dance team plans to stay in California for a period of two months—indications point toward a much longer visit, providing eastern contracts allow.

PLANS FOR NEW STUDIO GIVEN OUT

Beatrice Prentice to Open Interesting Organization in Near Future

Dancing and dramatic circles have shown interest in the plans announced by Beatrice Prentice, actress and dancer, for the opening of her school of the theater in the Hollywood Conservatory of Music. Miss Prentice has appeared in New York under the management of such well-known producers as George Tyler, Winthrop Ames, Sam Harris, Charles Hopkins, the Shuberts, William Brady, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs Coburn.

During a successful theatrical tour of the Orient Miss Prentice gained a first-hand knowledge of oriental peoples and their drama, dance and costume; she therefore makes particular use of these studies in her work. Those interested in productions at the Pasadena Community Playhouse have had several opportunities to see her in a variety of roles; Goldina, the heroine in "The Devil in the Cheese;" the Nautch dancer in "Amber," the cold and haughty Chinese Princess Turandot, and Violet in "Man and Superman," with Harrison Ford.

Programs to Feature Many Young Dancers

Elisa Ryan, head of the Elisa Ryan School of Dancing and Drama, on Wilshire Boulevard, is presenting a varied program of dancing at St. Mary's Academy on the 10th inst. Over fifty children will take part in this program and all have been trained and directed personally by Miss Ryan.

On Friday, the 23rd inst. Miss Ryan will present the pupils of St. Gregory School in an elaborate musical comedy production at the Catholic Women's Club. This will be the end of the year program and over 135 children will take part. Miss Ryan teaches dancing to the entire student body at the St. Gregory School.

SHAWN TO VISIT LONDON

Word comes from London that the visit of Ted Shawn, scheduled for this summer, is being looked forward to with great pleasure and anticipation. Dance enthusiasts are hoping that his trip is a forerunner to a visit from the entire Denishawn company next year.

DANCE UNIT READY FOR APPEARANCE

Belcher Groups to Be Seen Soon in Fanchon and Marco "Ideas"

The second group of dancers that Ernest Belcher is preparing for Fanchon and Marco will be ready for presentation within two weeks, Mr. Belcher announced yesterday. The dancers have been in training for the past ten weeks, taking a course that embraces ballet, tap and acrobatic work. Following a two weeks' rehearsal period under the direct supervision of Fanchon and Marco, these dancers, sixteen in number, will play at Loew's State Theater and then go on a tour of the country that may last from one to two years.

The first group of dancers that Mr. Belcher trained for these producers is now appearing in the Middle West. Press notices received here indicate that the act is proving one of the biggest successes the Fox theaters have had in recent months.

The third Fanchon and Marco group will probably not get under way for some time, as Belcher now intends to prepare for his tenth annual summer teachers' normal course, which is to begin early in July. This class will be attended by representative teachers from all parts of the Western Hemisphere, and possibly one or two from abroad. Last year two teachers came from Scotland for the course.

Musical Films Create Demand

With screen musical comedies continuing in popularity, Los Angeles dancing schools are finding many of their pupils in demand. Among the dance studios supplying film and cafe revues with trained dancers is the Wills-Cunningham studio of Stage Dancing, located in Hollywood. Wills-Cunningham dancers are now appearing in Warner Brothers, First National, M.-G.-M., R.-K.-O. and Tec-Art productions, as well as being represented in the revue at the new George Olsen cafe.

In addition to training individuals for screen work, Mrs. Wills has recently completed several units which will be seen soon in a number of motion-picture productions.

CHORUS IMPORTANT IN MUSICAL SHOW

The chorus of a musical comedy on the screen is comparable to the trimming of a garment or the sauce of a meal.

This is the opinion of Laurence Schwab, of the Schwab and Mandel producing firm, who is now in Hollywood for Paramount's all-Technicolor film production of the golf musical comedy, "Follow Thru."

"I'm always very careful in selecting my chorus in stage productions and believe it is just as important on the screen," says Mr. Schwab.

Schwab and Mandel are considered authorities on musical comedy shows with such successes as "Captain Jinx," "Queen High," "Good News," "The Desert Song," "New Moon" and "Follow Thru" behind them.

FINALS CREATE INTEREST

London ballroom dance fans are looking with interest toward the finals of the Star dance contest. This is the most important dance competition of the year and is organized by the Star, a London afternoon newspaper. If the winners do any new step or movement which receives the approval of the judges, that step, according to report, will come into general use almost immediately.

TAP AND TOE GET TOGETHER

One Type of Dancing Needs the Other According to Hollywood Dance Authority

Tap vs. ballet dancing.

One needs the other, according to Edith Jane, who has been doing some of Hollywood's most interesting work along terpsichorean lines.

"Ballet, of course, is the foundation of all dancing," Miss Jane declared one day last week. "But, in spite of this fact, ballet teaches a certain tenseness which is not exactly admirable in other forms of the art."

"To offset this evil is tap work," she continued. "Quite in contrast to ballet, the tap dancer must be relaxed from head to foot. This entirely counteracts any leaning toward the rigidity encountered by bar and toe technique."

Another benefit in the study of tap dancing, according to the diminutive instructor, whose studio has been the mecca of many dance artists visiting Los Angeles, is the time value which it teaches.

"Many famous ballet artists are lacking in ryhthmical sense," she said. "Tap dancing is based upon rhythm—it is practically the soul of the art."

Edith Jane has had many amusing experiences teaching such notables as Michio Ito and Vitale Fokine the various intricacies of breaks and shuffles. Both artists admit that the study of tap dancing is much more difficult than it appears to be at first sight, however.

But "tap" is only one branch of dancing in which Miss Jane has taken an active interest. In addition to this, she devotes much of her time instructing youngsters, their mothers, and even their grandmothers in the various phases of the dance, including, in addition to ballet, pantomime, character and improvising.

"Youngsters are taking a more active interest in dancing today than ever before, according to Miss Jean. Even the tiny tots, ranging in age from 1 1-2 years to 3 1-2, are quick to grasp the principles of interpretation and technique.

Miss Jean attributes much of the present-day enthusiasm displayed in dancing to the wide use made of the art in talking pictures.

Ballet to Be Featured By Film Studios

Soon the American ballet will be featured in the productions of all major motion-picture studios of Hollywood.

A new provision in the contract of Albertina Rasch, creator of the exotic dance presenting the classic ballet to modern jazz rhythms, with executives of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, permits the maestra of the dance to stage productions for other studios. It does not reduce the scope of her activities for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, however.

"The courtesy of Louis B. Mayer, Irving Thalberg and other executives will mean a greatly enlarged opportunity for ambitious Hollywood girls," stated Miss Rasch today. "With other studio gates open to the ballet, it will be possible to utilize a great many more of the talented young women in the film capital who seek dancing careers."

Boxers Turn to Step Dancing

Lon Murray, former dance director New York Winter Garden and RKO Theater in Los Angeles, who heads his own school for stage dancing, has started a class in tap and off-rhythm dancing for prize fighters and all-around athletes who want to take the sting out of training. The idea, according to Murray, has clicked and two very well-known "maulers" have "gone for it."

Tumblers and Acrobats Gain in Popularity

The advent of talking pictures is opening up new possibilities in acrobatic dancing for men. This line of dancing was formerly considered attractive to those who wished to go into vaudeville as an acrobat, but today with the growth of the popularity of tap dancing and the demands of motion picture studios for more and more sensational dancing, acrobatic dancing has taken on a new importance, according to Earle Wallace, the American ballet master.

Wallace states that at the present time he has several groups of young men studying acrobatic dancing. Included in these are six men all under contract with Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

Sam Mintz, instructor of acrobatics and tumbling at the Earle Wallace school, has had over thirty years' experience on the vaudeville stage both in this country and in Europe and has toured the world with the best-known acrobatic families in the profession.

Club Gaining in Popularity

Elsie Noel Forte, who has been teaching diction and general voice training in this city for the past six years, and who has been engaged in this work for thirty years, has organized a club which promises to create interest far outside of its immediate circle. Composed of business and professional people, the club meets every Monday night to discuss various topics of business and social interest. The subject to be treated tomorrow night is "Which is the most important in business life—learning or personality." Other topics discussed include such problems as "Do defects promote genius?" and "Does working in unpleasant surroundings depress or broaden one?" The discussion is opened by one member of the organization, followed by the individual views of the others. At the close of the discussion, Mrs. Forte gives personal criticisms to the individuals as to stage presence, voice, diction and other elements of good speech performance.

Once a month an open meeting of the club is held, each member presenting an entire program at some time during the year.

Enrollment of School Varied

Thirty-eight States and eight foreign countries are represented in the enrollment of the Major School of Acting, according to recent reports from that organization. The greatest percentage of this number are interested in the various courses offered in the study of play production.

According to Mrs. Tullia Mistrot, supervisor of the school, it is difficult to exaggerate the educational value of this study. It is said to bring poetry, imagination and beauty into life and stimulate the desire for self-expression. It broadens the vocabulary and is instrumental in the development of personality, according to the many who have made an intensive research in the subject.

ATTENTION CREATED BY NEW DANCE

Accordion Number Wins Praise for Dancer in Biltmore Recital

Creating much favorable comment and attention with the versatility of his Russian folk dances, Wania, who heads the Wania School of Dancing, appeared Wednesday evening at the Hotel Biltmore in the Alexander Light recital. One of the most popular numbers on the dancer's program was his "Accordion Dance," in which he executed difficult Russian steps, playing his own accompaniment upon a diminutive accordion.

Word comes from Wania's Hollywood studio that Natt E. Wallman has arrived from London to take over all tap, waltz clog and soft shoe dancing and is revising the off-rhythm sand dance which was originated by the old minstrels about 1840. The unique tap shuffle is said to be quite a novelty and especially adaptable to the new sound screen. Mr. Wallman has had twenty-five years' experience as a tap dancer at many of the leading vaudeville houses in London and Paris, including the Opera Comique and the Follies Bergere. He has also taught for many years in both cities.

PATIENCE VITAL FACT

Perseverence and Practice Join in P Professional Careers

Patience and practice. It is vital that those qualities be by anyone seeking to be a professional dancer for the stage according to Davic Bennett, for nineteen years a dancer Broadway productions, now working in the same capacity at mount studios in Hollywood. Of the two Bennett believes be the more important.

Those who believe that dancing is one of the lighter forms of amusement, and that a knowledge of it and an aptitude for it can be gained within a few weeks, would be surprised to talk to Bennett and to watch him work.

His realm at the Paramount studios consists of a large bare-floored hall in the music building, furnished with a lot of space, a few plain chairs and a piano.

There work starts promptly at 9 o'clock each morning, when his chorus of girls, all of them in their 'teens, report for work in their oddly assorted rehearsal garments. Some of the girls wear bathing suits, others have rompers such as are worn by small children, others have brief skirts and light jumpers.

When rehearsing his girls for some number in a forthcoming picture, Bennett works them almost steadily from 9 in the morning till noon, permits them minutes or an hour for then drills them during the afternoon until 4:30.

BOOKPLATES BLOOM AGAIN

Sixth Annual International Showing Attracts Bibliophiles to Public Library

BY ARTHUR MILLIER

"With spring the gentle bookplate blooms," as the ancient poet has it, or to quote another, "Spring, and the bookplate bends the bough." Anyway, rain or no rain, 740 examples of tiny "Ex Libris" designs from fifteen countries are ranged on the walls of the exhibit room at the Los Angeles Public Library, mute tributes to the energy of Helen Wheeler Bassett, corresponding secretary and founder of the Bookplate Association International.

She would need more time than is at present possesses to minutely inspect 740 bookplates—tiny ones that measure only a few inches each. In fact, the Orra E. Monnette prize for the best etched plate went to a Lilliputian print less than an inch square, a clever work by W. Baiser of Austria, and quite the smallest print in the show.

MILLER WINS PRIZE

The Max Wiesenreck prize for the best copper-plate engraving went to Victor Rivers of the United States, while for the best wood-block print was awarded Adriant Feint of Australia, and the prize given by Edward A. Waring for the best print in any other medium than those mentioned above fell to Max Pollmer of Austria.

Honorable mention was accorded prints from various countries. The excellent catalogue contains all this information and a list of officers. Ernest Dawson is president and a string of honorary vice-presidents circles the globe.

Following a rather hurried tour of the exhibit, starting with little Belgium—where most troubles start—Victor Stuyvaert stands out, deserving of honorable mention. Persia, with rather tight designs, but with gold things by Ruth Saunders, full of ideas; Norman Lindsay with rich wood blocks; Victor Hammer, brilliantly decorative pen work; Bernard Herbrun and Peter Pollard.

CANADA REPRESENTED

Canada has three excellent plates by Thomas MacDonald; Russia displays the usually past exhibits—lead by Dubrovsky, J. Barberg gaining honorable mention for two delightful little blocks. Han Krug of The Netherlands took a mention for two unusual little blocks.

Among the Latvians we find a strong flavor of peasant art—twining twigs, birds, animals and rugged lettering. Where is Latvia? Anyway, that country has quite a showing and we note that ladies there wear the same undergarments they do in our fashion magazines. Nikolais Gerasimov pushed the national impulse a step further, did a "semi-abstract," so to speak, and won an honorable mention.

Rather detached, by contrast, preserves the Lithuanian properties, running to quaint, lovable designs in fine colors. The work of Claude Jeanneret (favorable mention), and the delightful peasant prints of G. Scherzer, Germany, also rated a mention.

FURTHEST PLACE

Jack C. Forbes of Australia has the furthest plate, a comic kangaroo courtesy of Herriman. Harry Justeson and Adriant Feint also star.

Czecho-Slovakia has a very large, and to us distinguished group, including many plump nudes with Antonin Just, Dolezal, Karel Klinger and Antonin Burka save the day with good work. Italy has another large group, varied and interesting, with P. Casotti, Bruno da Osimo and Leonello Nasi well to the fore.

In the French showing Genevieve Granger-Chanlaine is notable for originality of her ideas and methods. Her plate for an actress, seen through a curtain, parting the curtains of the stage, is especially charming. Manuel das Robert works for clear processes in color printing, in a manner that will interest many artists.

Work shows chiefly for the Belgian figures of Victor Stuyvaert, whose cases are shown in separate cases are shown with plates by Ralph Pearson, an American vice-president, George Wissmann's prize design for the Bookplate Club" which won honorable mention here, and a lithe series illustrated books by the bookplate.

The jury of awards consisted of Arthur Millier, Paul Landacre and Merle Armitage. The exhibit is open the month of May.

MANY EXHIBITS SLATED FOR MAY

Group and One-Man Shows Open This Week

The California Water Color Society opens tomorrow its first exhibition under the aegis of an art dealer. At the Dalzell Hatfield Galleries fifty-four examples of the aqueous art will be shown by the society's members. The works were passed upon by the organization's jury and very few have previously been shown to the public. The exhibition is timely because it stresses the fact that water color is a medium of tangible value. The handsome catalogue should help put the society on the map.

Peter Krasnow opens an exhibition of his wood carvings, sculpture, paintings, pastels, drawings and lithographs tomorrow at the Stendahl Galleries. Following their usual policy the Stendahl Galleries are showing the entire available production of this gifted and sincere artist. As wood carver, painter and draughtsman, Krasnow is well known here. His pastels are said to reveal a new facet of his art.

The New Art Gallery has just opened in room 208, 6560 Hollywood Boulevard, fostered by a group of artists who feel the necessity of emphasizing in their exhibitions the aesthetic Father than the commercial worth of their works. The present showing includes works by S. Macdonald-Wright, Lorser Feitelson, Nathalie Newking, J. Belmar Hall, Ward Montague, James Redmond, Ruth Peters, Morgan Russel and Phyllis Shields. This is an impressive array and promises some interesting exhibitions.

At the Los Angeles Museum a showing of Scandinavian prints and an exhibition of art and craft work by the Arthur Wesley Dow Association have just been placed on view. The undersea paintings by Olive Earle of New York, revealing the beauty and variety of deep-sea fish and seascape, are attracting much attention in the museum's rotunda.

Ebell Club is now presenting in its art salon its first annual exhibition of oil paintings by Southern California artists, who have been invited to compete for the Elizabeth Holmes Fisher Prize, to be awarded by the following jury: Charles O. Middleton, Charles Sindelaer, Francis William Vreeland, Mrs. Idalea Andrews Hunt, art critic of the Dallas (Tex.) News, Dr. A. Bennett Cooke, Mrs. Henry Lyman, Sr., and Arthur Millier.

A group of Southern California artists, including Millard Sheets, Paul Starrett Sample, Paul Lauritz, George Brandriff, Evylena Nunn Miller and Mrs. R. C. Farrell will be guests of honor at dinner at the Woman's University Club, May 8. Mrs. Louise Pinkney Sooy of the art department, U.C.L.A., will speak on art appreciation. The exhibit for the month will be paintings by Paul Lauritz.

New exhibitions at the Pasadena Art Institute will be by the Pasadena Society of Artists, William Ritschel, Gordon Coutts, Leo J. Meissner, Howard E. Smith and J. D. Knapp.

The Braxton Galleries open tomorrow the final exhibition of the Blue Four of Munich, this being the paintings and prints by Paul Klee, one-time "dadaist," whose works were shown last month in New York at the Museum of Modern Art with those of Maillol, Lehmbruck and Max Weber.

During May miniatures by Lillian Reubena Deane of Hollywood will be shown at the Friday Morning Club, and at Ebell Club, miniatures by Minerva Chapman of Palo Alto.

$90,000 FOR A ROMNEY

Knoedler's, New York, has purchased "Mrs. Morris and Child," one of Romney's most distinguished portraits, for a price said to be $90,000. The picture, which was painted in 1777-1778, came from the collection of Capt. Sir Tankerville Robert Armine Morris, fifth Baronet of Clasemont, great-grandson of the child in the portrait.

ART and Artists

News of the Art World

Club to View Collection

The MacDowell Club of Allied Arts will be guests of Mr. and Mrs. Willits J. Hole in their private art gallery, 114 Fremont Square, Tuesday evening, May 6. The club will have an opportunity to view works by Tintoretto, Ribera, Goya, Hals, Terborch, Van Dyck, Reynolds, Romney, Gainsborough, Turner, Inness, Stuart, Sargent, Chase and other masters in this important collection.

Art Club Changes Presidents

Julian Ellsworth Garnsey, mural painter and president of the California Water Color Society, succeeded E. Roscoe Shrader as president of the California Art Club. William Wendt has been honored with the title of president emeritus in recognition of his long and unremitting efforts in the club's behalf. Mr. Shrader leaves the office with a record of years of fruitful work. It was he who negotiated with Miss Aline Barnsdall for the present clubhouse.

New Exhibitions Offered

The California Art Club will hold during May an exhibition of large paintings by members. At the Friday Morning Club a joint exhibition of paintings by Lurvena Buchanan Vysekal and Edouard Vysekal will be held throughout this month.

Art At San Pedro

The Charles Joseph Rider collection of contemporary American paintings are on view during May at the San Pedro Branch Library, San Pedro.

Mary Coulter's Work Praised

A large exhibition of paintings, drawings, and prints by Mary J. Coulter of Santa Barbara, shown at the Art League of Santa Barbara from April 22 to May 3, received warm praise from the local press. Dr. Ernest L. Tross, art historian of Los Angeles, felt in Mrs. Coulter's work "that broad and universal mind which is the best signature of an artist."

Artist's Council to Dine

A dinner conference of the Artists Council of Los Angeles will be held tomorrow at the California Art Club at 6:30. Ideas for art in the coming Olympiade will be discussed.

CASA ADOBE GETS LOAN

BY ARTHUR MILLIER

The portrait of Rudecinda Florencia Sepulveda de Dodson, reproduced here, has just been placed on two-year loan to the Casa de Adobe, 4605 Pasadena avenue. The portrait has a triple historical interest because the beautiful sitter is herself a member of one of the oldest Spanish-California families, she is depicted in wedding clothes that have been in her family more than 200 years, and the artist, Hernando G. Villa, is also a member of an old Spanish-California family.

Rudecinda Florencia Sepulveda de Dodson

The lace mantilla worn by Senora De Dodson was the property of Maria Ygnacia Avila, wife of Dolores Sepulveda, the first owner of Rancho de Los Palos Verdes, who lost his life in a California battle near Ventura. The wedding gown of cream silk brocade belonged to Maria Elesalde de Sepulveda (wife of Diego and son of Dolores,) who was the mother of the present wearer. She was the daughter of the first civil overseer of the missions, sent to California by the King of Spain, with headquarters at Old Town, San Diego. Maria Elesalde was born at Old Town.

Hernando G. Villa was born in Los Angeles in 1881 and has paint-

BOOK ON MAX WEBER TELLS ART HISTORY

BY ARTHUR MILLIER

"Max Weber has lived the history of modern art in America. Its search and tribulation, its rebellion against decadence, the hatreds which it aroused, and its ultimate triumph are chapters in his life story."

With those intriguing words Holger Cahill opens his comprehensive monograph on the painter who was the close friend of the Douanier Rousseau, the pupil of Arthur Wesley Dow and Matisse, and one of the first Americans to earn the scornful title "modernist."

Published by the Downtown Gallery, New York, this volume containing thirty-two reproductions of the artist's work in aquatone is an important contribution to American art history. Without losing the image of an artist seeking the roots of art within and without himself, his biographer has succeeded in picturing vividly the growth of American realization that—to quote Ernest Fenellosa: "We find all art is harmonious spacing."

Of course, Fenellosa was not a modernist artist, but a professor who awakened the Japanese and Chinese to the greatness of their art traditions. And Kenyon Cox—hater of "modernism"—said: "All art is an arrangement of something," adding that it might be planes, colors or, as in the case of Franz Hals, brush strokes.

But in practice it has taken the "moderns," experimenting with abstract forms, the bare bones of art, to drive home this truth in the minds of the many conventional artists who were contentedly copying the surfaces of nature or the technical methods of older painters. And Weber has long been a quiet but potent influence on modern American art because he so painstakingly and lovingly absorbed the principles underlying the great works of past periods.

There is a delicious anecdote from his Paris days, the days that followed his study under Arthur Wesley Dow and his early years as school-teacher.

"I never knew of him (Rousseau) going to the Louvre," says Weber, "nor did I ever hear of him speak of it. One day I saw him working on a big jungle picture and I exclaimed: 'Why, you work like Giotto!' 'Qui est Giotto?' he asked in perfect innocence."

In the famous Matisse class, that so soon broke up because Matisse found his students copying his style, we read of the class buying a fifth century Apollo and using it as a model. We also learn Weber was one of the first subjects of the now popular publicity stunt of hanging a painting upside down. This occurred in the Salon d'Automne of 1908 and, of course, his name reached this country in consequence.

Weber's work was included in that famous Stieglitz showing of a group which included John Marin, Alfred H. Maurer, Arthur Dove, Maraden Hartley and, I believe among them, S. Macdonald-Wright. James Gibbons Huneker found that Weber made plenty of research, but "in the meantime the picture has vanished, like the old saying at the hospital, the operation was successful but the patient died." This was in 1910 and in the same year Weber introduced Rousseau's work to America via Stieglitz's gallery. This decided the critics that Weber was a misguided artist. Anyone who could see anything in Rousseau's jungles must indeed be off. (Wouldn't you like to buy just a tiny little Rousseau today!)

Weber had a hand in the famous Armory show of 1913, also. The newspaper sensation of that show, Marcel Duchamp's "Nude Descending the Staircase," is, by the way, nicely reposing on a collector's wall in Los Angeles; or was until it was borrowed for a retrospective exhibition of cubism recently held in New York. And close by it on the same wall hang three fine Rousseaus. Looking at their masterly drawing and painting, their unequaled variations on the color green, one wonders why Rousseau was so hard to take. Some of his works resemble Claude Lorraine!

And perhaps time will accord the same easy acceptance to Max Weber's weighty, architectural figure designs and trees. At first they seem so bare, so harsh and ugly that they repel. But visit many times that slight water color in the Preston Harrison Gallery of American Water Colors at the Los Angeles Museum and you, too, may find it growing on you.

In the meantime, whether you like Weber's work or not, his monograph by Holger Cahill recounts the genesis of "modernism" in America more graphically than any history we have seen.

CANNELL-CHAFFIN TO AUCTION ART WARES

The auction sale of the entire Cannell and Chaffin stock of antiques, objects of art, paintings and sculpture, to commence tomorrow afternoon at 2 p.m., should prove interesting to art lovers who know the part this firm has played in bringing fine works of art to Los Angeles. For many years their art gallery was a center where works of high quality were shown and during the course of their fifteen years of business the firm never held an auction. The present sale is a step toward the impending move to new and larger quarters at 3000 and 3002 Wilshire Boulevard. At the new location there will be, in addition to the galleries for furniture and decorative objects, a specially designed printroom, where a wide selection of etchings and engravings will always be available. The auction includes the entire stock with the exception of books.

SAMUEL HALPERT DEAD

Samuel Halpert, vice-president and a director of the Society of Independent Artists and for some years a member of the faculty of the Master Institute of United Arts in New York, died in Detroit at the age of 45. A native of Russia, Mr. Halpert came to America as a boy. He studied at the National Academy of Design and later at the Ecole des Beaux Arts in Paris.

Examples of Mr. Halpert's work are in the permanent collections of the Pennsylvania Museum, the San Francisco Museum and various private collections. Besides the Independents, he was a member of the New Society of Artists and the Societaire Salon d'Automne of Paris.

ARCHITECTS FOSTER ART

Stickney School of Art in Pasadena Revitalized as Architectural Club Takes Hold

PASADENA, May 3.—Something new is happening in Pasadena. Something new to Pasadena, perhaps, but a thing that was old centuries ago. A group of architects have revitalized the old concept that architecture embraces all the arts. They have become so obsessed with this idea that they are mothering an art school. The Stickney Memorial School of Art is being conducted by the Pasadena Architectural Club.

In a recent lecture Ralph Adams Cram, Fellow of the American Institute of Architects, said, in part: "The artist of every category must or should look for his support now to the architects; and if the architect cannot play that part; if he cannot recognise the weakness of his own art without the aid of those other arts with absolute equality, then he will have failed of his principal function in society today. It all comes down to the reunion of the arts—that is the one thing I would give as the rallying cry of the future—let the artists cease to consider themselves as absolute individuals; let them realize that art is a thing infinitely greater than any one art. Art is so large that each may come in and take part in its creation, in the creation of one of the greatest forces, next to religion, in the world."

The architects in Pasadena are taking part in this creation—in fostering classes in painting, sculpture, the crafts, and all other arts allied to architecture. Here is a school operated by those who seek to learn; a school for the experienced artist who is not too proud to go on learning as well as the veriest novice.

Although conducted by architects it is not limited to the architectural-minded. Nor are the subjects studied strictly allied to architecture. The curriculum embraces nearly all the arts, the fundamentals of which are the same regardless of medium or technique.

The faculty is headed by Alson S. Clark, who has long been associated with architects and their ideals. His murals add to the beauty of many Southern California buildings. Mr. Clark criticises the evening life classes. Other instructors are: Laurence Murphy, composition, figure and landscape painting; Arthur Millier, etching; Pasquale C. Marinelli, modeling; Harry A. Schoeppe, craftwork; Millard Sheets, pencil and water color; Jean Abel, applied design, and L. Grace McLean, children's classes.

JUDSON MEMORIAL WINDOW

The State Exposition Building at Exposition Park, Los Angeles, has acquired a new attraction in a handsome decorative feature: The large window placed as a memorial to the late William Lees Judson by his family.

This effort of the Judson Studios is in harmony with the activities of the State Building, and is a fitting tribute to the professional achievements of one who has for so many years won distinction as an artist-painter of Los Angeles. This window is a novel and original expression of glass possibilities—pure decoration. In treatment it shows sincere regard for the methods of the masters of the thirteenth century, but is entirely original, from a design by Frederick Wilson. The result shows a departure from the commonplace window decoration too generally prevailing. It is an artistic and enduring memoir of one who won his spurs here — of one whose life was a picture—composed of inspirational devotion to idealism.

William Lees Judson, master painter and Dean Emeritus of the college of fine arts of the University of Southern California, was born in Manchester, Eng., and settled in Canada when a boy.

"Most of the early work, that gave him the first flush of prosperity, was done in London; his pictures were principally animal studies, and England was his market. From that time he spent several years in the schools, principally under Le Febre of Paris, and in the galleries of Europe, selling his pictures to the Old World dealers.

He was a winner of over 200 prizes in exhibitions over the entire world; one of the leading spirits and workers of the Columbian Exposition at Chicago, where, it is well to note, in the selfish scramble that marked the close of the exhibition "Mr. Judson adhered to his instincts of unselfish gentility, and, as a result, was a heavy loser financially."

Arriving in Los Angeles in December, 1893, the spirit of this State gave him fresh inspiration and very few artists have so well succeeded in giving us the spirit of California on canvas. In 1901, he founded the college of fine arts, University of Southern California. From the time of the founding of the college until his retirement in 1922, he retained his position as dean of the school.

From then on he gave himself to painting and lecturing until his death in 1928, at the age of 86.

A few of his canvases may be seen in the Memorial Gallery at the Judson Studios, 200 South Avenue 66, Los Angeles.

Club Woman Defines Stand on Club Candidacies

Former Bowl Leader Expects Defeat in Election

Officers Elected by P.-T.A. in Lively Contest

BY MYRA NYE

"I want you to know the true status of things. So much has been said that is wrong."

Thus Mrs. Leland Atherton Irish prefaced a statement issued yesterday, assailing "a group of false friends" and delineating her stand in regard to the many club candidacies with which her name has been linked.

Her statement in part follows:

"I want you to know the true status of things. So much has been said that is wrong. The following are some facts:

"Ebell: The first thing that was said was that I was a candidate for Ebell. It is true that a group of close friends wished me to be, and I wished to be, but felt this year that I should not, so declined. The petition was never taken out for I saw that it was not.

"Matinee: Another group of very close friends in the Matinee Musical Club asked me to be their first vice-president. I was honored, indeed, but explained over and over again that I would not take so important an office with not sufficient time to do it justice.

"I am not that ambitious. That petition was never taken out.

URGED TO MAKE RACE

"Woman's Club of Hollywood: As soon as a group of friends in this club learned that I was resigning from the Bowl they urged to run my name. I felt it would harm the Bowl and bring in the second Bowl disturbance, for the very same thing was done regarding Mrs. Carter. They took the Bowl fight into the club. One member of twenty-five years and a loyal friend of mine told them she did not wish this to happen again; that she was a friend of mine, and that if I did run, to keep the Bowl out.

"I, therefore, consented but the opposition has been so very unkind, so false that I asked to have my name withdrawn. I gave it in the first place unwillingly and against my better judgment. However, now that these things are being said, I cannot withdraw and do not intend to do so.

DEFEAT EXPECTED

"I shall be defeated without a question; but I will not turn my back to my enemies. I have nothing to explain nor have I anything but five years' hard conscientious and loving service in my past record for the Bowl. For eighteen years I have endeavored to serve in some capacity for the good of the community. If all that I have done can be obliterated by a group of false friends and by lies, then I am sorry. But it does not embitter me nor spoil my optimism or spirit. I love people and too many fine ones are in this world.

"Europe: I am leaving in June, not May. I am returning for the last two weeks of our precious Bowl concerts. I was largely instrumental in obtaining the conductor for the last two weeks, Enrico Arbos, from Madrid, and I cannot bear to miss him.

"I am retaining some of my minor affiliations for I cannot stop working altogether. I like activity and after my home is taken care of, I still have time to serve some way."

"FLORENCE M. IRISH."

Hunter, sixth vice-president; Mrs. Emma Rodda, treasurer, and Mrs. F. G. Clark, historian.

TWO OUT FOR MUSIC CLUB HEAD

Interest in the forthcoming election of officers to serve the Matinee Musical Club for the ensuing year was brought to a climactic point Thursday when, after a ballot which drew out a large number of voters, Mrs. Carlos Hardy and Mrs. Pearl Cole McMullen were announced as candidates for the presidency.

Mrs. Mary Linck Evans and Mrs. Arthur Hewitt were retained as contenders of the office of first vice-president, and Mrs. Frank Suttle as second vice-president. Mrs.

"DRY" RALLY TO BE HELD

Temperance Society to Celebrate Victory of Prohibitionists in Congress Hearing

Los Angeles County Women's Christian Temperance Union will hold a rally and jubilee in the membership campaign of the organization the 21st inst. at West Boulevard United Presbyterian Church, beginning with a luncheon. The program will follow.

From the national W.C.T.U. comes a statement regarding what is termed the victory of the dry forces throughout the United States. In part it reads as follows:

"The wets failed at every point in their testimony in the prohibition hearings before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives. They continued the old bludgeoning tactics of the United States Brewers' Association, presenting noisy testimony, but little evidence. They appealed to prejudice and appetite rather than to reason.

"Only three small and professionally promoted organizations of women appeared for the wets before the committee; a pitiful demonstration offset by the heads of practically every national organization of women in the United States who stood firm for the Eighteenth Amendment and strict enforcement of the law.

"No better example of the differences between the character of witnesses and testimony could be given than the witnesses on both sides, who discussed prohibition and the farmers. The wets produced a professional agitator hired by the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment, who has little, if any, connection with agriculture, and has not operated a farm in forty years. His statements were immediately denied by telegraph to the committee by leading reputable citizens of his own State. On the other hand, the head of the National Grange presented an able brief showing the enormous economic benefit prohibition has been to the farmers.

"The witnesses for the dry side of the argument produced the one document which effectively disposes of government sale of liquor; namely, the Dominion of Canada's own official report on the liquor traffic in Canada. That report, issued by the Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce only a few months ago, reveals that under government sale of liquor whisky sales have increased more than any other intoxicant; drunkenness has increased; drunken driving has increased; crime has increased; bootlegging has not stopped and that the only successful feature to government sale is the financial end."

Interest Shown in Recital by Jascha Gegna

Interest is being shown in the pupils' violin recital, to be given by Jascha Gegna, Russian violinist, composer and teacher, the 17th inst. at the Friday Morning Club. Although in Los Angeles but eight months, Gegna is repeating the success here, which he formerly enjoyed in New York City.

An interesting program has been prepared for this occasion, and in addition to ensemble numbers and trios, eight soloists are to be heard.

Gegna is a former student of the Kiev Conservatory, where he studied under the celebrated Leopold Auer, is known as a master of tone and technique.

ISSUES OF IMPORTANCE DISCUSSED

Hollywood Convention of Music Clubs Adopts Resolution

The two most important issues during the twelfth annual convention of the California Federation of Music Clubs, conducted in Hollywood, were the adoption of a resolution presented by Redfern Mason of San Francisco for the subsidization of music by local authorities in all communities, and the annual election of officers.

Mrs. Horatio F. Stoll of San Francisco, newly elected president, is a musician of high standing, being both a messo soprano, and pianist, having studied music since she was 6 years of age. Mrs. Stoll was president of the San Francisco Musical Club from 1923 to 1925.

Mrs. Warren Egbert, first vice-president, is a resident of Oakland and is past chairman of Alameda county, and was parliamentarian during the convention.

Mrs. Charles Jabin Hubbard, second vice-president, resident of Hollywood, is president of the Music Settlement School of Los Angeles, and second vice-president of the Wilshire Woman's Club.

Mrs. Aaron Bergner, vice-president-at-large, is a resident of Los Angeles, and is past State treasurer and parliamentarian of the Schubert Wa-Wan Club.

Forbes will install the following officers elected for the ensuing year: Mrs. Charles Irving Walker, as president; Mrs. Harry Leigh Bentley, Miss Elisa J. Quinn, first and second vice-presidents; Mrs. Alice Letteney, recording secretary; Mrs. Thomas Jay Nash, corresponding secretary, and for directors, Mrs. E. K. Harkness, Mrs. E. C. Kesling; Mrs. Alfred Barnes, federation secretary, and Mrs. Charles Lloyd, publicity chairman.

At the close of the meeting Lawrence Hill will conduct the guests on a tour, visiting the historical places around the old Plaza.

AMERICAN PROGRAM GIVEN

Matinee Musical Club Young Singers and Players at Concert Last Thursday

An all American program was presented Thursday at the Matinee Musical Club session under the direction of Ann McKinley, program chairman. A feature attraction of the afternoon, the opening number, was a quartet sung by winners in the Victor Herbert memorial contest which was held earlier in the year.

A selection from Herbert's opera, "Naughty Marietta," was the number presented, the quartet being composed of Ida Schuelts, soprano; Irene Hough, contralto; Glenn Munro, tenor, substituting for Harry J. Williams, who was unable to be present, and Robert Kingdon, baritone.

Solo numbers also were contributed by the younger singers, among them being an expressive rendition of "Homing," by Mr. Kingdon, and a musicianly interpretation of a song entitled "Tommy Laddie," by Mr. Munro, whose tonal shadings were effective.

Miss Hough evinced a pleasing quality of tone in her rendition of Bohm's "Calm As the Night," and Miss Schuelts, in her singing of David's "Chennant Oiseau," displayed power and clarity of tone, especially in the coloratura passages. Reginald Evelyn, a young student from the Hullinger Flute School, provided a flute obligato to this selection and also played two solo numbers, of which the "Offertoire," by Donjon, was especially pleasing, as it gave him an opportunity to demonstrate his ability in trill playing.

Grace Sheley Poirier of San Marino received a large ovation for her dramatic rendition of "My Fernando," from Bottesini's "Lea Favorita," and Richard Malosek, 'cellist, was heard to advantage in the third concerto for 'cello by Goldserman. Mr. Malosek, sponsored by Matinee Musical, was the winner in a contest for young artists, held at the convention of the California Federation of Music Clubs last year in Oakland. His performance Thursday was distinguished by some very good legato playing combined with a fluent technique.

Clad in a velvet Blue Boy costume, Johnnie Crain, 5-year-old son of Harold Crain, made his initial bow, playing a violin arrangement of the "Song of the Volga Boatman," and displaying a remarkable sense of pitch for one of his years.

Speaking on "The Treaty Making Power of the Constitution," Miss Jacqueline De Witt of the Marlborough School for Girls, pleased the audience with her oration on the Constitution, which won the first prize in the sixteenth California district finals in the National Oratorical Contest.

The meeting Thursday was held in the Ambassador Hotel Theater, with Mrs. Mae Shumway Enderly, president of the Matinee Musical Club, presiding.

CLUBS PLANNING BANQUET

Head of Business and Professional Women to be Entertained by Organizations Next Thursday

The National Business and Professional Women of Los Angeles, with other clubs, is planning a banquet at the Elks Club Thursday evening in honor of their visiting national president, Miss H. Marion McClench of Ann Arbor, Mich. Mrs. Mary Wiley Eisen, president of the Los Angeles club, will preside at the meeting.

Committees have been appointed to make arrangements, under the chairmanship of Mrs. Anne Leidendeker, principal of the science and industry department of the public library.

MARION McCLENCH

Among the clubs invited to participate in the affair are the Culver City Business and Professional Women, South Bay District Business and Professional Women and the Oceanside Business and Professional Women, all members of the national federation, as well as other local business women's organizations.

Miss McClench is a member of the original group of 200 women who gathered in St. Louis in July, 1919, to organize the federation. Since that time she has been president of the Detroit Business Woman's Club and served for two years as president of the Michigan Federation of Business and Professional Women. She has been a member of several committees of the national federation and was national recording secretary in 1926-1929. She also served as general chairman of the recent national convention.

Miss McClench cherishes a number of objectives for the period of her presidency, one of them being the establishment of at least one club in every county in the United States. Also it is her hope that a site may be selected and initial steps taken toward the establishing of the new headquarters in Washington, D. C., the fund for which has already been started.

Following the banquet Miss McClench will leave with Mrs. Eisen to attend the State convention of the California League in San Jose.

Organization Holds Election of Officers

Mrs. Frank B. Duncan was re-elected president of the Daughters of 1812 State of California National Society, at the last meeting, conducted in the Women's University Club. Ward, historian; directors, Mrs. Nathan Cole, Jr., Mrs. A. W. Johnson and Mrs. T. Dwight Tucker.

The Los Angeles chapter will conduct its annual business session next Wednesday in the Chapman Park Hotel at 2 p.m. Mrs. E. L. Christopher will give an outline of the work done for better living conditions among the Indians of California. PROGRAM CONTAINS TALENT

More noted talent has seldom been presented on a single program in Los Angeles than that which is to appear Tuesday evening at the Biltmore for the benefit in recognition of the work being done by Faith Chevaillier, better known as the "little angel of the prisons."

Mrs. O. P. Clark, general chairman for the benefit, is to present three masters of ceremonies, a surprise feature of the program, to be notables from the picture studios. Mrs. Horace Edward Montague, program chairman, has been fortunate in obtaining a brilliant array of talent from the screen and stage.

She is founder of the Los Angeles Resthaven. Fred Solomon will present the Los Angeles Firemen's band and the Georgia-street station police quartet. Club women and others are selling tickets for the benefit.

FROM SUEZ TO NEW YORK

New Novels Present Life Under Stress of War in the Orient, of Pioneering and of the Slums

BY LILLIAN C. FORD

SOUTH OF SUEZ. By William McFee. Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.

First field during the war, with its strangely mixed population drawn from Alexandria, Bagdad, Damascus, Jerusalem, Constantinople, and all the isles of Greece, as well as from the French possessions and the British Isles, makes the exotic background for the tale William McFee has to unfold. It is of Stephen Rumford, neutral transport officer, who had all the British sense of duty, the middle-class belief in the value of the day's work, the marine officer's faithfulness to each rule and regulation of the service.

In the mixture of Syrians, Malays, Arabs, Greeks and others that he massed together as "dagos" Rumford soon discovered that treachery and dishonesty, with the sale of hashish to the ruin of his crew members, were rampant. All he had to do was to wink at these things and become rich. But this was no temptation to him. He presumed to do his duty, loved to trip up the wily dark-faced plotter, was proud on his own efficiency. Overworking, he became fagged and irritable, while his unpopularity increased. His wife, the seemingly practical kind, tried to advise him to a profitable conformity, while carrying on an affair with his superior officer of which her husband remained unaware. He vaguely realized that his marriage was not satisfactory, but this he attributed to Mary's frigidity.

When he succumbed to the Greek dentist's lures he learned that love in northern countries was romantic, but south and east of the Mediterranean it was necromantic.

There are sufficient complications to make this a good story of love and intrigue during the war, with everything leading up to a finely melodramatic climax in which the commendable Briton proves true to himself and his code to the very last. But it is in the knowledge of the dim-eyed, low-browed, shifty of particular peoples of the East, as they revealed themselves in the war, that gives "North of Suez" an interest that is beyond that of a story in which these strange characters have their part. It is a book that demands slow reading, which quickly becomes absorbed reading.

THE SEVENTH WAVE. By Marion Minnigerode Andrews. Albert & Charles Boni, New York.

Mrs. Andrews, whose "Memoirs of a Poor Relation" and "My Studio Window" have proven her ability to recreate the past, has in her first novel followed an Ohio family through four generations. She begins with Benderson Higgins, who made a fortune on the Mississippi in the 1850's, started a town in the west and became its banker and first citizen. He was a lusty, hearty, tobacco-chewing self-maker. He married a New England Chase, who continued to be prudish but never corrected one of her children for traits copied from their father. When his son's wife died Benderson insisted upon remarrying again and selected the school-teacher, Ellen Atkins, who became an admirable stepmother to the small Hendy. On the death of her husband she was found out of her dower rights and revolt, which as everybody knows is nothing new in world history. He refused to be a banker, a doctor, a lawyer. He dabbled in art and in time escaped to Paris with his correct wife, who was wise enough not to see the worst of his infidelities.

The last cycle is that after the Civil War, with old Benderson dead, and Hendy and his family returned to Higginsville, where, ironically, Gerald Ebenezer is the president of the bank and the leading citizen. The changes in standards during the years, the progress from pioneer freedom to conformity, the absurdities of each social era, are presented in a way to make the story one that interestingly presents more than one facet of America's past.

AARON TRAUM. By Hymen and Lester Cohen. Horace Liveright, New York.

The plight of the Jewish immigrant in New York in the days when every ship brought in its horde has never been better presented than in "Aaron Traum," written by father and son, authors of "Sweepings" and other books. The family making its way from Russia, where it had sprung from a rabbinical background; the hard life in the New York slums; the grandmother's terrible determination to give Aaron the chance to go to school; the hunger that drove him to the sweat shops and kept him there for years, despite a spirit that was ever seeking the freedom and the beauty he knew were to be found, and his final emancipation, are told with a gripping reality that spells truth.

That Aaron's later march forward covers too much ground and gives an impression of a story rather than of the record of a life, is merely to admit that the demands of fiction often result in a let-down.

THE GHOST WRITER

That the "ghost writer" is not the product of the modern sport page is shown by H. M. Paull in his "Literary Ethics" (E. P. Dutton & Co.) In the chapter of his book devoted to "The Literary Ghost," he says: "I cannot do more than refer to those authors whose output was so great that it is impossible they could have written them without 'ghostly' assistance. Dumas, for example, in his "Memoires," alludes to his 1200 works. There is a tale that on his asking his son, "Have you read my last story?" he replied "No sir, have you?"

GENUINE ANTIQUE FURNITURE. By Arthur De Bles. Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York.

Arthur De Bles is well known as a lecturer and writer on antique furniture. For ten years he has been a lecturer at the Metropolitan Museum. Hence, this volume is authoritative.

In it we follow the history of furniture from the Gothic era through the Italian Renaissance and French Renaissance, the Tudor and Elizabethan periods and so on through to the death of Sheraton in 1806. A special section is given to American furniture, with a valuable chapter on genuine versus fake antiques.

Many plates help to make the book an invaluable compendium for the student or home maker interested in the subject, as well as for the professional.

BOOKS and Their Makers

A Group of Recent Books

HOT COUNTRIES. By Alec Waugh. With woodcuts by Lynd Ward. Farrar & Rinehart.

"Hot Countries" by Alec Waugh was officially published this week, instead of on March 7 as first announced. As a delightful travel book of striking individuality written by a novelist of parts, it merits special attention, while its woodcuts by Lynd Ward enhance its interest.

Looking for "a place where one can live on thirty thousand words a year," Alec Waugh first found Tahiti. Of the free life there and the easy falling into the customs that Stevenson, Maugham, Loti, Brooke, Gauguin and John Russell have celebrated, Mr. Waugh writes in a way to send the tired reader for a ticket for the next boat. He recognises that the ground has been pretty well worked out, but by adopting a chatty, companionable method he manages to reawaken the interest even of those who thought they were tired of the South Seas.

Tahiti is only one of the hot countries he visited. La Martinique, Siam, Ceylon, the New Hebrides and Haiti, all have their lure as we read about the interests they had for this wandering author.

HISTORY OF ALASKA. By Henry W. CLARK. The Macmillan Company, New York.

The author of this new history of Alaska stresses the fact that it is a selective history that endeavors to bring out the salient facts not only of Alaska's past but also of conditions now prevailing. Geographic and climatic features, economic development, social conditions and its present and prospective wealth are all given due consideration.

Mr. Clark was born in Alaska but has for years been a resident of New England. He acknowledges his inspirational debt to Prof. Edward Channing of Harvard University.

ADVENTURE. By Maj.-Gen. J. B. Seely, Frederick A. Stokes Company, New York.

The officer who commanded the Canadian cavalry during the war counts that as only one of his many hazardous activities. He seems to have been born with a charmed life, for he has lived dangerously and encountered all sorts of mishaps, including an airplane accident. Now at 60 he tells his almost incredible story.

As an explorer in New Zealand, a soldier in the Boer War, a member of the British Parliament, Secretary of State for War, and commander of cavalry during the war, he always kept in the thick of things, as all who read his story will realize.

ORDERLY. By M. R. Werner. Cape & Smith, New York.

The author of "Barnum," "Brigham Young" and other biographies here turns back to his experience as an orderly in a war hospital in Normandy. Mr. Werner does not attempt to make his story dramatic or exciting. Instead he gets down to the bare facts, which are ugly, boring, harrowing or disgusting as the events warrant.

This method proves effective as it is disillusioning. Instead of the young American who volunteered to help care for the wounded being considered as a human being doing his best, he was treated as a part of the war machine, a thing without pride, hope, worth or future.

FAMOUS DUELS AND ASSASSINATIONS. By Lewis Melville and Reginald Hargreaves. J. H. Sears & Co., New York.

Every duel that caused a pother in its day is here staged anew, so that those who like to give their time to the dead scandals and quarrels of the past may have their fill. It must be admitted that the authors have got into the history of the affairs and have managed to give, along with the stories, a good idea of their historic settings.

THOREAU: Philosopher of Freedom. By Henry David Thoreau. Vanguard Press, New York.

This is a new and specialised edition of the writings on liberty of the apostle of the great outdoors and the simple life, selected by Prof. James MacKaye, professor of philosophy at Dartmouth College, whose introduction to the work is a particular feature of this selected edition. At this time, when Mahatma Gandhi, in India, is advocating such action, Thoreau's "Civil Disobedience" is of pertinent interest. One of the outstanding articles in this edition is his "Plea For Capt. John Brown," whose death on the gallows seventy years ago heralded the Civil War, and whose "Soul goes marching along" in the cause of freedom, not only here, but throughout the world. It is a book which reaches down into the hearts of those seeking truth and realities, as well as the idealism of natural life.

WHILE THE PATIENT SLEPT. By M. G. Eberhardt. Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.

This book by the author of "The Patient in Room 18" has been awarded the Scotland Yard $5000 prize for the best detective story of the year, and is the Crime Club selection for the month.

Miss Keate is called upon in her capacity as a nurse to go to the musty old Federie mansion to care for Jonas Federie, a victim of paralysis. She overhears a mysterious conversation between beautiful March Federie and an unseen man in which he urges her to do something evidently perilous, concluding his arguments with, "The Federie hand is born to fit the curve of a revolver." That night Adolph Federie is shot dead!

That March could have done such a thing is unthinkable, but someone in the Federie home must be the murderer. What is the strange secret hanging over the weird old mansion? What is the household searching for, and why? Why does everyone want to be notified immediately in the event that Jonas regains speech? Lance O'Leary has cause to ask himself these and many other questions before he discovers Adolph Federie's slayer. Here is Eberhart at her best.

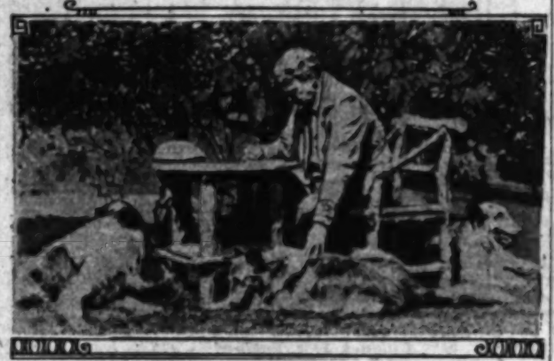
A HAPPY AUTHOR REMEMBERS

BY M. F. CUMMINGS

TO THE BEST OF MY MEMORY. By Albert Payson Terhune. Harper & Bros., New York.

This bulky volume of reminiscences by a veteran "sidewalk pounder," journalist, concoctor of serial fiction, "ghost writer," department editor, magazine contributor, realistic novelist, dog biographer and general "literary feller," is at once solidly informative and immensely entertaining. Its one unpleasant implication is that it contains all the good stories its author ever founded or discovered, and not one will be left for the delectation of after-dinner companies who have an inalienable right to be amused by celebrities.

Albert Payson Terhune has turned



Albert Payson Terhune,
Author of "To the Best of My Memory," just published.

out an immense amount of entertaining literature. He attributes its volume to the fact that when he began work he resolved to act as his own Simon Legree and let nothing short of a catastrophe interfere with his self-allotted hours of work. Thus he has become rich as well as famous. He finds more profit in doing a great deal of acceptable work than in striving at all times to achieve the best he can possibly produce. He says: "I deliberately, happily, sold my putative birthright for a very actual and bounteous mess of pottage."

Mr. Terhune gayly boasts of his ghost writing. His work in this line began in 1907 when the Evening World published a fiction serial in ten installments written by "Ten Beautiful Shopgirls." "I," chortles Mr. Terhune, "was the 'Ten Beautiful Shopgirls.'" He adds: "The stunt went so well that the paper printed a serial by 'Ten Popular Actresses.' Followed a serial by Lillian Russell. I was Lillian Russell." Later he was Mrs. Leslie Carter, Jim Jeffries, Terry McGovern, Jim Corbett, David Belasco. For the latter he wrote the novelisation of "The Return of Peter Grimm," published under Belasco's name. He explains that even the theme of the play was not Belasco's own. He had bought the idea from Cecil De Mille for $500.

The only rational objection to be brought against Brother Terhune's literary rule of faith and practice is that when enlarging upon this subject he draws so hard and fast a line between those he describes as "cognoscenti" and "the lowbrows." Surely these may be allowed to have some tastes in common. Because Mr. Blank finds Homer his favorite poet and Juvenal his most admirable satirist must he, therefore, ignore Walt Mason and deride Will Rogers?

Yet in spite of its author's lack of literary catholicity, his insistence that all readers, like trolls, shall have but one eye apiece, his book is richly worth reading. In a world so sadly filled with disappointed people it is good to listen to one man who boasts of his home, his wife, his gains, his dogs, his troops of friends, his industry and his general well-being. Such a man needs no hope of heaven and assuredly need fear no hell. All that he asks is the wages of going-on "as is" forever and ever. May his tribe increase!

HERE ARE GOOD WESTERN TALES

THE LIGHTED LANTERN. By John Lebar. D. Appleton & Co., New York.

Here's a western story that has freshness of plot, good writing, knowledge of the cattle country and a mystery that keeps up the interest to the last page. In it Ruth Warren is pitted against the man Snaveley, part owner of the ranch she had inherited from her brother.

There is no trick Snaveley did not try to oust her, no meanness he scorned. She stood her ground and won out at the last, as such a dauntless heroine should.

The book stands on its own merits as a good western. But is is doubly interesting when it is discovered that "John Lebar" is a pseudonym for Gilbert Wright, son of Harold Bell Wright, who was once the most popular author in America. Gilbert Wright knows his Arizona, knows the love of certain old settlers for the land and their hatred for those who keep crowding in to the destruction of the range. This is his second book. The first was "The Doubtful Year."

THE SHAGGY LEGION. By Hal G. Evarts. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

This is a typical wild-west thriller of the days when the buffalo roamed the plains and the Indian challenged the right of the white man to the ranges.

It is placed in that stirring period when the railroad was being laid across Kansas, when Wild Bill Hickok was in his glory and Buffalo Bill was making a reputation that later coined money under the big top.

Breck Coleman is the handsome, cool, daring young man whose nerve and clearsightedness give the story its swing and go.

There is, of course, a romance. No such yarn is at all complete without such an element. The lady who finally winds herself around the heart of the hero is all that the western heroine should be. Those who like western romance will get their money's worth out of this.

HORSE-KETCHUM. By Dane Coolidge. E. P. Dutton & Co., New York.

Death Valley as it appeared to the pioneers in covered wagons comes to life again in Dane Coolidge's first chapter of "Horse-Ketchum," where we see a whole cavalcade perish after drinking of the poisonous water. Randolph Morgan and his wife alone survived.

Years later Morgan, settled outside the valley, gets into action in defense of a mine. Gun play, fistic encounters, dirty plots foiled only just in time, with fortune on the side of the just man, all have their part in an exciting story of the days when horses and cows and hard-riding men made life interesting. Mr. Coolidge has introduced a new element in the phantom horses that appear at critical moments, to startle and confound the enemies of his hero.

AN ARMY WITHOUT BANNERS. By John Beames. Little, Brown & Co., Boston.

From the time Billy and Maggie Clovelly came in their covered wagon to the Saskatchewan wilds where they built their log cabin and started the first farm Clovelly showed himself a true pioneer. These first settlers welcomed the coming of others until neighbors became too numerous, when they began to look with suspicious eyes upon the ever-increasing horde of immigrants.

The details of their pioneer years and of the change that time wrought are well told by a man who evidently has first-hand knowledge of the trials of the wilderness.

THE YUKON DRIVE. By Robert Ormond Case. Doubleday, Doran & Co., New York.

Those who like western thrillers never tire of the Yukon during the gold rush of '98. Even though the hero is usually a noble young tough who has to fight single-handed uncounted, ignoble toughs of all ages before he wins the gold and the girl, there is usually sufficient variety of detail to satisfy. This is certainly the case with "The Yukon Drive," by the author of "Riders of the Grand Ronde."

SWIMMING THE AMERICAN CRAWL. By Johnny Weismuller. In Collaboration with Clarence A. Bush. Houghton Mifflin Company, Boston.

The swimming champion here tells, with the aid of another, how he wins all the cups, and how he perfected the crawl stroke and thus became the world's greatest swimmer. Those who wish to know about the honors he has won and how to emulate him will find this book valuable.

Gossip of the Book World

$2500 Prize Winner

The dollar-a-word prize competition ($2500 for a 2500-word short story) held by the Pictorial Review has been won by Mary Ellen Chase over 11,000 contestants. Miss Chase is professor of English at Smith College, and is the author of "Mary Christmas" (1926) and "Uplands" (1927.)

First Novel at Fifty-five

For the information of reviewers of "The Trader's Wife," who have spoken of "the fresh, new talent of this remarkable first novelist" Coward-McCann, the publishers, state that Jean Kenyon Mackenzie is a little white-haired lady of fifty-five. She is the author of a number of books of essays and sketches of African life which she knows well from her fourteen years as a missionary in the Camaroon, but "The Trader's Wife" is the first fiction she has ever done. "I had the story in mind for about fifteen years," she explains simply. "And then I wrote it. Will I write another novel? No, I think not."

Prize-Winning Poems

Many of the Indian folk lyrics in "Songs of the Coast Dwellers," Constance Lindsay Skinner's new book of poems which Coward-McCann publish, have appeared in French, Spanish and Russian, and have been the subject of prizes awarded by the London Bookman, the Lyric West and Poetry.

Blue Ribbon Books

A co-operative effort in cheap edition publishing is inaugurated by Blue Ribbon Books, Inc., in which equal shares are owned by Dodd, Mead & Co., Harcourt, Brace & Co., Harper and Brothers and Little, Brown & Co. The four firms will contribute to Blue Ribbon Books, Inc., the cheap edition rights of their successful nonfiction titles and will also publish titles from nonmember houses on the usual royalty basis. Eugene Reynal, formerly promotion manager of Harper and Brothers, has been named manager.

King Mob

Harcourt, Brace & Co. received a manuscript a few weeks ago so exciting that they have decided to publish it on May 6 instead of waiting to include it in their fall list. "King Mob" by Frank K. Notch is a violent attack on the organised power of modern advertising, current catchwords and high-pressure salesmanship—an attack on the organised mob. Publishers, book clubs and authors are named, as well as politicians and perfumers, in the author's exposures of "panicking the public."

Van Doren on Swift

The Viking Press announces that it has secured the publication rights of a life of Jonathan Swift by Carl Van Doren. Mr. Van Doren has been working on this volume over a period of many years. It has now reached completion and will be published during this coming summer.

With or Without Pay?

Capital punishment does not exist in Russia for ordinary criminal offenses, although the soviet authorities execute many individuals on charges of having committed crimes which are counter-revolutionary and strike at the bases of the new social order, according to William Henry Chamberlin, Christian Science Monitor correspondent, whose book, "Soviet Russia," just published, has been highly indorsed by the American Society for Cultural Relations with Russia. It might not be so unpleasant to be in a soviet prison. The maximum term permitted under the legal code is ten years, prisoners are not required to wear uniforms—that is, they may wear what they please—and the well-behaved are allowed two weeks' vacation every year.

Debut of the Irwins

Wallace Irwin, whose new novel, "The Days of Her Life," has just been published by Houghton Mifflin Company, first came before the public eye when he was 6 years of age. The exact account is given by Clayton Hamilton, who explains that "there was a scene in 'The Private Secretary' in which William Gillette made an embarrassed entrance, carrying a small child in his arms and with another child tugging at his coat tails. In the eighteen-eighties, when trouping was still trouping, he was accustomed to borrow children for this scene in every city that he visited. One day he played 'The Private Secretary' in the mining camp of Leadville, Col., a boom town that had attracted many adventurers, but it was not until his farewell tour was announced this present season that Mr. Gillette learned of the identity of the two children who went on with him in Leadville. The 8-year-old boy who tugged at his coat tails was named Will Irwin, and the 6-year-old child whom he carried in his arms was named Wallace Irwin."

NEW CHEKHOV PLAY

The discovery of a hitherto unpublished play by Anton Chekhov is something of an event. It is now translated by John Cournos and published by E. P. Dutton & Co., under the title of "Platonov." The question as to why Chekhov never polished this play to its final form is thus discussed by Walter Pritchard Eaton: "In spite of some old-fashioned soliloquies, the treatment is Chekhov and nobody else, the picture of the futility of Russian provincial society in the '90's is painted with the strangely and abruptly mingled pathos and comedy, depth and surface, which once so bewildered us in 'The Cherry Orchard.'

"Yet Chekhov evidently abandoned the work without giving it that final polishing which brought his other dramas to perfection."

"Voyages en Orient," the great prose work of Gerard de Nerval, friend of Gautier, Dumas pere and Victor Hugo, has been translated into English by Conrad Elphin. It will be published in the spring by Harcourt, Brace & Co., under the title "The Women of Cairo;" scenes of life in the Orient.

CURTAINS FOR "BIG BILL"

Menckenian Author in Satiric Vein Traces the Waning Career of Chicago's Mayor

HIZZONER BIG BILL THOMPSON. By John Bright. Cape & Smith. NEW YORK.

In his introduction to Mr. Bright's book Dr. Harry Elmer Barnes observes that "the permanent value of the book consists in its remarkably vivid instruction in the real nature of American municipal government, with the mechanics starkly bared." "William Hale Thompson," says Mr. Bright, "has been noisy in Chicago for a long time: all through the eras of William the Hearty, Woodrow the Snobbish, Warren the Generous, Calvin the Economical and Herbert the Precise."

He finds that Thompson's story is that of an average man who was able to obtain high political preferment by exploiting "the anthropoid mind with leather lungs and an imposing manner." It is his judgment that had Thompson been left to his own devices he might have given Chicago a fairly decent administration. "But," he says, "intoxicated with absurd ambitions, corrupted and seduced by flattery, he ran amuck and has been passed into the limbo of the ill-famed."

Big Bill Thompson
Caricature by Carreno.

Dr. Barnes, whose introduction is really a review of the book, finds that Thompson possessed the qualities that bring a man to the top in contemporary party politics. He makes this shrewd, but cynical observation: "His arrested adolescence was captivating to the masses."

Thompson's whole political career is here reviewed in a vein of sardonic humor. All of Big Bill's political straddles are sketched, the most absurd being his famous "Sunday Closing Order," which was followed by a parade of 10,000 drys carrying a banner on which was painted "We Knew Chicago Wouldn't Stay out in the Wet." His battle to keep "King George's snoot" out of Chicago politics; his final unhorsing of Prof. William McAndrew, superintendent of Chicago's schools; his close alliance with, first, William Lorrimer and his machine and later with Frank Smith, who like Lorrimer was tossed out of the United States Senate; his absurd ambition to go first to the Senate and later to the White House, and all the other dreams of greatness that obsessed this man who was three times elected Mayor of the second city in the United States, are described with gusto.

The book is written in sardonic, Menckenian strain, with an enlightened dislike of democracy and all its works. It is not only Big Bill who is treated as a perennial boy whose only bit of enlightenment was revealed in his pro-Germanism. All the ordinary American standards and acts are deemed as fit subjects for mockery and for the scoffing of those few bright boys who somehow happened to be born in this deluded nation.

That a book written in this spirit is entertaining rather than wise and judicial is evident. But if it helps to end the public career of Chicago's buffoon Mayor, it will merit the thanks of all the good Americans Mr. Bright finds so vastly amusing.

EVA LE GALLIENNE'S CIVIC REPERTORY PLAYS. With an Introduction and Direction Notes by Eva Le Gallienne. W. W. Norton & Co., New York.

An introduction by Miss Le Gallienne precedes the four plays here presented. The plays are "Hedda Gabler," "La Locandiera," "Three Sisters," and "Two Times Two Equal Five."

Biographical notes of dramatists represented, with stage directions and character interpretations by Miss Le Gallienne, are included.

AN ANTHOLOGY OF RECENT PHILOSOPHY. By Daniel Sommer Robinson. The Thomas Y. Crowell Company, New York.

This ponderous volume is a compilation of selections from the writings of the greatest twentieth-century philosophers, with biographical sketches and analyses, as well as questions.

While primarily intended for college use, it is a volume that all students of philosophy will find of value.

EERIE MYSTERY IS WELL TOLD

THE BLACK DOOR. By Virgil Markham. Alfred A. Knopf, New York.

Rare machinery of mystery is brought to bear in the construction of the plot of this clever novel, one of the most original written in these days of deep-laid detective yarns. "The Black Door" is Mr. Markham's third narrative of mystery, the others are "The Seamp" and "Death in the Dusk." They step up in interest book by book, the present volume being the most fascinating. It contains about as many murders as Van Dyne's "Bishop Case," but it is far easier reading, for while Markham has a fine command of English and uses many piquant expressions, he does not strain for etymological effect, a sad fault in the otherwise acceptable Van Dyne.

All the vital action takes place on a little island off the Welsh coast. On this island is Kestrel's Eyrie, the ancestral castle of the Veryan family, members of which perish one after another in bloody midnight orgies. The hero, Tom Stapleton, a distant relation of the Veryans, is an American of keen wit, and he assists in detecting the criminal, who, of course, as in all mystery stories, is the last person the reader suspects of having committed the crimes.

There is a musical heroine, Arthura, who seems very real because of the rare touches the author gives in the description of her piano renditions. Markham is himself a fine pianist and knows his onions when it come to music. That he also knows how to put together a mystery plot that makes a reader lose sleep in its perusal is evidenced not only by the "Black Door" but by his other well-told though rather grewsome stories.

This rising young California author may be counted upon to produce other and still more interesting novels. But I wish that instead of going to Wales for his plots he would weave one around some place in his home country.

Fiesta Monterey—Bed, $55; Dresser, $90; Night Stand, with Lamp, $39.50

. . . New "FIESTA" Monterey

(1) Romantic Spanish Style

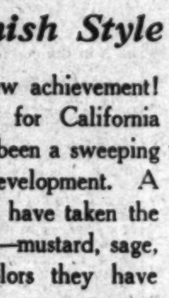
Fiesta Monterey — another new achievement! Barker Bros. created Monterey for California homes of Spanish type and it has been a sweeping success. Now comes a new development. A totally new finish! Skilled artists have taken the colors of the California landscape—mustard, sage, red cactus, desert blue—these colors they have carried out in motifs done in peasant feeling, after the manner of the lines of the furniture itself. They have used an interesting crackle finish that gives a feeling of age—a charming free finish that looks absolutely hand done—and so it is for the most part.

Trefoil Table, $16.75

We call it Fiesta Monterey for the designs have that gay carnival feeling and the colors themselves are festival colors. Because the motifs are all applied by hand the decorations vary on each piece, giving a highly decorative effect.



End Table, $9.95

Living room, bedroom and dining room pieces are now ready in Fiesta Monterey—most of them are individual one of a kind pieces . . . real decorator's models. But throughout the prices are moderate. Complete harmonizing accessories available. Choose now from these individual Fiesta Monterey pieces.

Tuscany

(3) Of Italian Influence

For those homes of the stately beauty of California Italian or Spanish architecture, Barker Bros. have created Tuscany. A style inspired by an authentic old Italian design but introducing modern comfort and convenience. It is made of genuine walnut combined with magnolia wood, rich with dignified carvings and panels. Complete ensembles for bedroom, living room and dining room including all the accessories. Its regal dignity gives it the impressiveness of massive baronial furniture, but it is made in proportions suitable for the average California home. Fine workmanship is essential in such a group—and you find it here. Yet throughout the prices are moderate.

ALBION A California-English Design

(4) If you have one of those charming homes that has adapted its English ancestry to California surroundings, choose Albion furniture. Barker Bros. have adapted an old English Tudor design to fit the needs of California homes. Albion furniture has the fine dignity inherent in Tudor furniture, yet it is proportioned to suit the smaller rooms of California homes. Simple lines, but richly carved—built of genuine walnut, yet because it is produced by Barker Bros. in quantity, very moderately priced. Available in complete ensembles for every room.

Society of Cinemaland

by Myra Nye

Cupid has been more than ordinarily active in Cinemaland during the last fortnight. Foremost among the delightful results of the love affairs and romances was the marriage of petite and vivacious Irene Mayer, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis B. Mayer, to David O. Selznick, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Selznick. The ceremony was performed Tuesday night by Rabbi Edgar F. Magnin, president of the Union Oil Company of California and is connected with that organization. As a wedding gift Mr. and Mrs. Boggs have presented the young people with a house completely furnished at 1010 Selby avenue, Westwood.

De War-Pemberton

Gowned in ivory satin and wearing a long veil of lace and tulle caught by clusters of orange blossoms, Miss Georgia Pemberton became the bride of Donald C. De War, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank K. De War, 521 South Catalina street, at the Little Church of the Flowers Saturday a week ago. She was given in marriage by her uncle, A. D. Lewis, of 1260 Kingsley Road.

The attendants of the bride are all members of a cast of one of Ziegfeld's pictures now in production at United Artists and the bride and bridegroom are also of the cinemalite. They were Vina Gale, maid of honor; Margaret Butler and Lee Auburn.

Rev Robert Shuler performed the ceremony in the Trinity Methodist Church; Helen Walker Hamilton was organist.

A reception and dinner were given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Lyons, the former serving as best man. Ushers were Richard Sumner and C. E. Kelly.

Housewarming

Mrs. Ludovico Tomarchio, opera star, will celebrate her reunion with her husband, who has been on tour in Italy, with an informal tea this afternoon which will be in the nature also of a housewarming of the home they have taken on 100 North Commonwealth avenue. Mrs. Mae Allen of Pasadena, and Mrs. J. G. Early of 402 Occidental Boulevard, will assist Mrs. Tomarchio in receiving more than 100 guests.

Montmartre Reopens

Modernistic severity employed in the redecoration of the Montmartre which had its reopening Monday night, has achieved a new distinction for the boulevard cafe by providing a more formal setting for the gatherings of Cinemaland's society than it did in the past. A brilliant array of film celebrities was in attendance Monday night, many of them had parties of friends including Ruth Roland, James Winton, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Frank, Mr. and Mrs. George Olsen, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Langdon, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Cline, Marion Nixon, Alice and Marceline Day, Robert Milton, Vera Gordon, Walter Donalson, Evelyn Brent and Mr. and Mrs. Archie Gottler. Others were Benny Rubin, Sam Kosloff, Harvey Priester, Thelma Todd, William Davey, Mr. and Mrs. Richard Weil (Isabel Kieth,) Arthur Caesar and Rosa Roma.

Quiet? Please!

Thus George Olsen's orchestra, and the show is on. The show, that is, of the personable maestro's new supper club in Culver City, formally opened Wednesday evening, and which is not, believe you us, confined entirely to the planned entertainment on dance floor and stage.

With apologies to Alice Frankfurter and the New Yorker, our impressions of that unforgettable evening follow:

The arrival, 'mid flourish and fanfare of searchlights, circular driveway, canopy and liveried footmen. The congratulatory baskets of flowers crowding the foyer. The green and black and silver dressing-room. The breath-taking brilliance of the modernistic supper room, its squared tiers of tables completely filled with famous folk, at once impressed and impressive. The humorous greeting of George Olsen, who insists thankfully that the evening's first spilled bowl of soup has gone down his own back.

The versatility of the orchestra. The perfection of the food. The familiar face of Paul Perrot in the role of head waiter. The exquisite dancing of Juliette Johnson and George Murphy. The speech by Eddie Cantor. The reverberation of Bert Wheeler's laugh. The unconscious imitation of Mack Sennett as "the man from the south" with a big cigar in his mouth.

The pantomimic poker game and "tired-out" dancing of Charles Mack, a long Black Crow gone strangely pale. The continuous "entering and exeunting" through crowded tables. The pillar that always shuts out the cleverest dance step.

The sumptuous costuming of the shapely chorus. The predominance of gardenias over orchids. The long gloves . . . wonder how they eat? The long trains, conveniently looped over the arm for dancing. The unconcealed interest in a new twosome, Fred Waring and Dorothy Lee. The unofficial count of dances enjoyed together by Marilyn Miller and Ivan Lebedeff. The solo, throng-encircled Charlestoning of Marilyn Miller and Irving Aaronson.

The amazing blondness of Jean Harlow. The oriental appearance of Swedish Greta Grandstedt in a high-collared evening wrap of jade velvet. The happiness of Sue Carol and Nick Stuart. The attendance of such musicians as Earl Burtnett, Walter Donaldson, Tom Patricola, Gus Kahn, Johnny Hamp and William O'Neill.

The temporarily assuaged sorrow of Hank and Marny Arnold, whose friendly police dog, Nells, was killed Monday by a quail hunter of uncertain marksmanship. The glimpses of Ann Harding, Fifi D'Orsay, Alice Day, Oua Brown, Thelma Todd, the Edgar MacGregors, Kenneth Harlan, Ralph Ince, the Joseph Santleys, Rube Goldberg, Schwab of Schwab and Mandel, and Larry Ceballos. The realization that the assemblage represents a record gate receipt of $10,000 in proud victory over Hollywood's former record, $7800.

The realization that it is 3:30 a.m. and that we have an early engagement tomorrow—no, today!

Premieres De Luxe

It is the season for first-nights. Scarcely an evening of the week that does not see its beautiful premiere, the ones that are typical of social life in Cinemaland.

Beginning with the one a week or so ago, the premiere of "Song o' My Heart," starring John McCormack, at Grauman's Chinese Theater was distinguished by the presence of many musicians of note among the habitual first-nighters. The great tenor himself was unable to be present, but sent from New York a telegram of felicitation.

Monday night at Carthay Circle Theater was shown for the first time "All Quiet on the Western Front" and the ten men and boys who were featured in the great gripping war drama were introduced by William De Mille.

Carl Laemmle, Jr., who produced the picture, was host at the Embassy Club immediately following the premiere. Among his invited guests who numbered more than fifty distinguished in Cinemaland were Lewis Milestone, Maxwell Anderson, George Abbott, C. Gardner Sullivan, David Broekman, Louis Wolheim, Lewis Ayres, John Wray, Ben Alexander, Scott Kolk, Owen Davis, Jr.; Walter Browne Rogers, William Bakewell, Russell Gleason, Richard Alexander, Harold Goodwin, Slim Summerville, Pat Collins, Raymond Griffith and Edmund Breese—all connected with the making of the epochal picture — Paul Bern, Ona Brown, Fred Beetson, Clara Bow, Clarence Brown, Nancy Carroll, Charles Chaplin, Alice Day, Marion Davies, Bebe Daniels, Cecil De Mille, Douglas Fairbanks, Mary Pickford, Ernst Lubitsch, Charles Rogers, Irving Thalberg, Norma Shearer, Lupe Velez, Gary Cooper and Darryl Zanuck.

Among those seen in the throng at the picture showing were Norma Shearer wearing a long white ensemble and rare pearls; Ruth Chatterton in a form-fitting gown of black satin; Pauline Starke in white chiffon, Corinne Griffith wearing a white crepe romaine with wrap of silver cloth, Billie Dove in orchid taffeta, Grace Moore in a Delong model of green chiffon with emeralds and diamonds as her jewels and Lupe Velez in a gown of charmeuse velvet trimmed with crystals.

Later in the week came the premiere of "Mammy," Al Jolson's newest film vehicle at Warner Brothers' Theater. Honoring him, Miss Bess Meredyth was hostess to more than fifty film notables at a charming buffet-supper in a private dining-room at Hotel Roosevelt. Spring flowers in multicolors formed the gay and lavish decorations. Among the guests were Mrs. Jolson (Ruby Keeler,) Mr. and Mrs. Darryl Zanuck, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Langdon, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Erno Rappee, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Politz, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Cohn, Oscar Strauss, Frank Fay, Alan Crosland, Bobby Crawford and the Misses Margaret Ettinger and Harriet Parsons.

Three Parties of Note

Pearl Dannenberg, a much-feted guest of Cinemaland, gave a party Saturday night at the Mayfair in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Efe Asher. Other guests were Arnold Evan Berry, Ona Brown, Ona Wilson, Harvey Barnes and Jack Hartfield.

Crane Garts of Pasadena entertained in honor of Jean Harlow at George Olsen's Supper Club Wednesday night with the guest list including in addition to the former group, Joe Saunders.

In honor of Ona Brown, Mrs. Dannenberg entertained in her suite at the Roosevelt Thursday afternoon. Among the guests were Mrs. Efe Asher, Miss Margaret Ettinger, Lina Basquette, Mrs. Jack Warner, Mrs. Harry Rapf, Rex Lease, Irene Day, Rosetta Duncan, Vivian Duncan, Rosabelle Laemmle, Mrs. Frank Borzage, Mrs. John Mack Brown and Miss Grace Kingsley and a corresponding group of men escorts.

Easter Party

Mr. and Mrs. Monte Blue entertained in their Beverly Hills home with an impromptu Eastern party. Tennis and swimming were enjoyed in the afternoon, while a buffet supper was served in the early evening and bridge was played later.

Guests were Mr. and Mrs. Frank Mayo, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wilde, Mr. and Mrs. Preston Duncan, Judith Vosselli, Joan Lloyd and Ruth Lloyd.

In New York

Mr. and Mrs. George Converse (Anita Stewart) are sojourning in New York, where they are registered at the Sherry-Netherland.

Elaborate Housewarming

Leonard Sillman, recently from New York, where he is well known along the Great White Way, celebrated his arrival in Hollywood with an elaborate housewarming in the home he has taken on Fairfield avenue. Among Mr. Sillman's guests were B. P. Fineman, Leonore Ulric, Dwight Frye, Cyril Hume, George Chiles, Helen Chandler, Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Anderson, Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Kearney, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Wheeler, John Roche, Newell Vanderhoef, Glenn Hunter, Morgan Farley, Carmel Myers, Edward Eliscu, Viola Brothers Shore, Harry Braxton, Philip K. Scheuer and Margaret Reid.

Blossom Room Honorees

Dorothy Lee and Fred Waring, those two youthful stars of "Rah Rah Daze," were guests of honor Monday evening in the Blossom Room of the Roosevelt, where many of the Cinemalite entertained to compliment them.

Among those in attendance were Sally Blane, Raquel Torres, Barbara Bennett, Gwen Lee, Marie Astaire, Thelma Todd, Virginia Bruce, Molly O'Day, Evalyn Nair, Messrs. and Mmes. Ted Cook, Harry Carey, William Beaudine and Reaves Eason, Tom Waring, Townsend Natcher, Robert Agnew, Frankie Richardson, Joe Farnham, Morton Downey, Al Rogell, Norman Kerry and Jack White.

Fishing Trip

A delightful fishing trip is planned for the near future by John Barrymore, who will sail up the Columbia River for the salmon fishing, accompanied on his yacht by Joseph Cawthorn. The first cast will be the latter's dedication of a new rod, a wonderful, gold-mounted affair, the choicest in his large collection and a birthday gift from Mr. Barrymore.

'Ingagi' Film Shows Gorilla Life in Congo

A moot question among men and women throughout the civilized ages has been "How did man originate?"

It was only within the last few years that the nation was rocked by the controversy in which the late William Jennings Bryan and others took part. Scientists have devoted their lives to the collating of data seeking to prove or disprove existent theories concerning the cradle of humanity.

Without making any claims to pointing to the answer, "Ingagi," the African adventure film now in its fourth week at the Orpheum Theater, presents scenes that have aroused the attention not only of the lay public but of savants throughout the country, according to the management. "Startling" is given as the only word to adequately describe the sequences dealing with gorilla life in the depths of the Belgian Congo.

William S. Campbell assembled and supervised the picture, which was edited by Grace McKee, adapted by Adam Hull Shirk and which has an original musical score by Edward Gage. There are also a spoken description and sound effects.

Warner Praised For Film Work

H. B. Warner is receiving praise for his acting in "The Furies," a First National picture previewed recently. Lois Wilson once again appears with Warner.

Warner recently completed the featured role of a Scotland Yard detective in "The Second Floor Mystery," appropriately enough, for Warner Brothers, and is now busy at Fox playing an important role in "Road House."

"GRUMPY" ROLE FAMILIAR

Cyril Maude, English stage star, who is now playing the title role in Paramount's film version of "Grumpy," took the same part on the stage more than 1300 times.

PLAYWRIGHT SIGNS

Marie Baumer, author of "Penny Arcade" and "Town Boy," stage plays, has arrived in Hollywood from New York and has joined the writing staff at the Paramount studios.

THERE was something rather subtle about having that big Welshman, Laurence Grant, for toastmaster at the Shakespeare Foundation's Elizabethan Frolic at the Ambassador. Because, you see, Laurence has always said Shakespeare should be read but not acted. . . .

However, Laurence rose to the occasion with nicely measured wit . . . in spite of the fact that the speaker's table was miles away in lonely dignity from the audience . . . and actors do like to see their audiences close at hand.

We all wore Elizabethan ruffles and caps, ate a Shakespearean menu to a noisy band, in spite of the quotation from "The Comedy of Errors" printed beneath the soup "Unquiet meals make ill digestion," and, in a Shakespearean anniversary function, heard but two minutes of Shakespeare, when R. D. McClean recited, "All the world's a stage."

So the 150 Junior Leaguers present suffered no oppression.

Rather distinctive honors for the two heads of our universities of learning. . . . Dr. R. C. Moore of U.C.L.A. gets a blank check, presented by Avery McCarthy, the Foundation's president, and is saddled with Shakespearean responsibilities, while Dr. Rufus Von KleinSmid of U.S.C. gets the Breakfast Club.

However, Dr. Von KleinSmid has nothing on me. I became a "pal" of the Woman's Breakfast Club and duly clamped my hand in the fried eggs, together with Myra Nye and Jean Louhborough . . . all sitting on wooden horses with incomparable grace.

John Davidson, the actor, was one of the speakers . . . in naughty vein. It was, he said, a new experience for him to breakfast with more than one lady. Hence he would envision them as one, lovely in her lace negligee and would whisper across the breakfast table, "My dear, I am sorry to tell you your coffee is cold." He had been seated next to Mrs. Atherton Irish, so that when he told us he felt that possibly he should settle the Irish question for us, we laughed with proper appreciation. In spite of the fact that the charming Breakfast Club garden was cold, and John had shivered politely for half an hour, he actually achieved wit in the early morning. Quite a startling contrast to a gentleman named Wellington who was so intoxicated with verbiage anent his philosophy of God's beautiful world that we thought we never should get back to work. Even the world's beauty should be condensed to a few sentences on the morning of a working day.

The National Booksellers' convention at the Biltmore oozed interesting personalities. Of course, the occasion was designed to discover finer and better methods of making people buy books, but the dears were so idealistic about it. One for them and two for us, as it were.

The greatest figure there was John Henry Nash, the world's superlative printer . . . tall, broad-shouldered, leonine, 60 years of age, devoting the rest of his life to producing the Scholar's Bible, many copies of which have already been ordered at $5000 apiece.

Ernest Dawson, specialist in rare books, is a quiet little man, rich and famous, who deals in treasures worth a king's ransom. It is told that Ernest, at 10 years of age, bought ten books for 50 cents and sold them for 50 cents each, thus presaging what was to come. He has a well developed sense of humor, loves mountaineering, and is president of the Sierra Club.

A clever little girl, Dorothy Bevis, petite, a light brunette, and still in her early twenties, goes to Europe to buy rare books for Dawson.

Clever girls galore in this business. Alice Whitbeck is a dear, motherly soul, head librarian for Contra Costa county. She is kind to young authors, and so famous for her good judgment that publishers from all over the country send MSS. and proofs to read for them.

Czerna Wilson is keen, pretty, young, poiseful . . . her people own a whole chain of book stores on the Coast. Louise Seaman, 30 years of age, recently a bride, is editor of the juvenile section for McMillans. May Massee, who talked on children's books, represents Doubleday, Doran . . . tall, dressed in a becoming brown sport outfit and a vagabond hat, made her subject gaily fascinating. Mrs. Jack Vallely, our own star book-reviewer, blond, clever, really made the hit of the convention. How the booksellers love her! They give her lectures credit for increasing book sales 30 per cent in California. May Brooks runs a children's book store in Hollywood and loves the work enough to starve for it.

Richard Montgomery, Jr., of Portland is young, good looking, modern, alert, and has made a fortune with his own book club in Portland. John Jay Curtis, president of Bobbs, Merrill, is patrician and bookish. J. W. Lippincott, famous publisher, caught visiting the studios . . . excellent alibi . . . "So many of our authors are now writing for the movies."

Which reminds me. A show of hands was called for to discover which wanted to visit the Huntington Library and which the picture studios. The latter won by a large majority!

Three revered deans of the profession, known as "the holy three" . . . J. K. Gill of Portland, nigh 80 years of age, first in the business on this Coast; A. M. Robertson of San Francisco and C. C. Parker of Los Angeles.

Odo B. Stade of the Hollywood Book Store, an important convention official and much beloved, cannot help recalling how, during the war, some super-patriots gave Odo a hideous time of it . . . a British officer here, in uniform, would deliberately walk down the boulevard with Stade to counteract this situation.

John A. V. Weaver, young, amusingly frank, told how, having failed to sell poetry in good English, transposed it to misused English and won fame and fortune. Rabbi E. R. Trattner, in trying to tell how he came to write "The Autobiography of God" was very self-conscious . . . until he drifted into a sermon on religious tolerance.

The Reserve Officers were holding their convention across the hall. They all looked so grand in their dashing uniforms, especially Dr. Von KleinSmid. Oh, dear, is the pen really mightier than the sword? The officers get lots more space in the newspapers.

The Friday Morning Club has two candidates for vice-president, Mrs. Agusta Urquhart, with an ardent W.C.T.U. crusade complex, and Mrs. G. E. Winn, an equally imperative D.A.R. So at the last hearing, they were striving to find a candidate whose most ardent interest might perhaps be the Friday Morning Club.

Vivienne Maud Huntington, niece of the late Collis P. Huntington, recently excited English society by marrying Alfred Cecil Durban, a newsboy from Folkestone. So they decided to become colonials and sailed on the Canadian liner, steamship Montrose, arriving in Canada last week. Durban expects to get a job in Toronto. Fellow-passengers on board found the couple highly interesting . . . hence this note.

LONG LINE OF PLAYERS BEHIND RUSSELL GLEASON

Acting comes easily to Russell Gleason, now appearing in "All Quiet on the Western Front" at the Carthay Circle. He is the fifth generation of actors in his family, and has a brilliant record to live up to.

Gleason's great-grandmother was the fascinating Julie LaBlanche, of Paris. A dancer of renown, LaBlanche was known abroad and in this country for her charm and grace. When young Clarkson Crolius saw her dancing in New York, he fell in love with her and married her a few days later. From this glittering romance sprang the grandfather of James Gleason, W. D. Crolius. Two daughters were born to him, who are now living in Hollywood and who have reputations as actresses, as well as being the mother and aunt of James Gleason.

Russell Gleason, the boy of "All Quiet on the Western Front," began his career in Portland, Or., when 6 months of age, being the son of the leading lady of "Heir to the Hoorah." Strangely enough, this leading lady was his own mother, who liked having Russell at the theater, where she could watch out for him. He came on in her arms for his scenes, and slept behind the curtains when not on call. Mrs. Gleason is still keeping a watchful eye on her son, as she is associate producer on the picture he is playing in at Columbia.

RESORT AND HOTEL NOTES

Easter Sunday was Trustees' Day at the Flintridge Riviera School. Bishop Stevens, president of the board of trustees, and the following trustees were present: Rev. Edwin Lewis of Pasadena, Rev. Perry Austin of Long Beach, Mrs. Carlton Winslow, Mrs. Ralph Lindley and Mr. John J. Lawlor. Trustees' Day, an annual affair, was devoted to visiting the school, taking lunch to sample the food, and after the business meeting viewing the grounds and witnessing the recreation activities on the grounds.

The Arrowe Hotel was host to a party of the record-breaking number of anglers who visited Lake Arrowhead for the opening of the season last Thursday, according to Mrs. Copeland, manager of the hotel.

The dining-room, which was closed up during the winter months, is once more being operated by Mrs. Copeland.

The combination of a health-giving springs and a mountain resort, among the pines is found at Big Bear Lake by the Big Bear Springs and Inn. The mineral water, whose principal, chemically is sulphate of soda, is effervescent, and comes from a depth of a temperature of 90 degrees. There are two swimming pools filled and the warm mineral water flows through each of them continuously.

The Inn, newly completed, has a modern heating system and is attractively furnished.

The Inn was formally opened on May 1 and reports that a capacity number of anglers was present for the opening of the trout season on that date.

According to word received from Ralph Starr, manager of Camp Baldwin from the Isaak Walton League of Upland, excellent fishing was experienced throughout the month of the San Antonio Dam since the opening of the season last Thursday. The stream which runs directly through the camp was last year stocked with more than 6,000 trout from the San Gabriel hatchery by the California Fish and Game Commission.

Fred Wheeler returned to this city, on Wednesday a light fall of snow on the ground at the lake and from two to three feet of snow still on the higher elevations.

Plans which will record in the history of the part which the Warner Brothers have played in the history of California is to be fastened to the walls of that historic old building by the San Diego Parlor of the Native Daughters of the Golden West and the Native Sons of the Golden West. The ceremony will take place about May 15, according to Mrs. Edwina S. Cole, chairman of the landmarks committee.

The Warner Ranch house was built by Jonathan Trumbull Warner, a trapper who came to California in the early 30's, later became a citizen and obtained a grant of 35,000 acres of land in the vicinity of San Jose.

The Warner Ranch, including the Hot Springs, famed for their curative powers for centuries by the Indians, is now owned by the San Diego County Water Company which supplies the water for Escondido and Vista irrigation district from the reservoir at Lake Henshaw.

A party given by the Cauldron Club of Pasadena given Saturday evening, the 3rd inst., at Switzer's Camp in the Arroyo Seco proved to be one of the most delightful social events ever held at the popular resort. The orchestra of twenty pieces will also furnish a program at the Switzer's and dinner service this morning will be served in the Rock Room instead.

Members of the Sunday-morning class services today will be conducted by Burton S. Wilcox of the boys' department of the Y.M.C.A. A group of young people from the Second Christian Church will lead the devotional part of the services.

Among the guests from Los Angeles at the Hotel Virginia, Long Beach, last week were: Clayton Mr. and Mrs. Cortelyou, J. C. Ott, Mr. and Mrs. Frank E. Calkins, Mr. and Mrs. E. E. Calkins, A. G. Jones, Mrs. Jones and Seymour Marks.

Thousands of visitors marvel at the beauties of nature but only a small percentage know the trees, flowers and birds and the desire of the educational department of the National Parks to assist people in learning the trail signs that they may know and enjoy the forests. The staff of rangers under the direction of Superintendent C. A. Harwell has been trained to better serve the thousands of visitors now entering the park.

Many of the hotels and camps have started on hikes about the floor of the valley. The names of the birds, birds and trees and many other interesting things are pointed out. Parties are conducted to Glacier Point and other points of interest.

One feature which is expected to interest with visitors is the trip to Mariposa Grove of Big Trees under the escort of a ranger naturalist.

Among recent arrivals who have registered at the early spring days at Big Bear Mountain Resort were Mr. and wife and children, Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Bishop and party, Mr. and Mrs. Marion R. Gray, Miss Jean Hunter; Misses Butterworth, Santa Monica, Mr. Albert Hall and Mrs. W. L. Gefford, Mr. Alfred B. Hastings and party, and Mr. C. W. Lefferts, Mr. A. S. Halsted of Pasadena.

Among recent visitors to Forest Inn as well as these mountains are the day on Sundays, fishing and finding good sport at the Rimrock Angling Club.

THIS NEW YORKER IS REAL ONE

Actress Appearing in Hollywood Playhouse Also Lived Abroad

Helen Baxter declares she is one of the few New York actresses actually to have been born in that city.

Instead of being a native of Terre Haute or Baton Rouge, Miss Baxter was born in New York. She went abroad at the advanced age of one year. Her father, George M. Baxter, published the first American magazine in Europe, so that she spent much of her early life in Paris and in London.

Her mother had been a noted actress, so that on the death of her father she turned naturally to the stage. David Belasco, a family friend, offered her a stage engagement, but because he had no immediate production plays she cast about for something in the interim.

She thought of motion pictures, and as the Metro studio was the nearest one to the Belasco Theater she went there. She said that she found herself adapting stories for pictures and watched Billie Dove play her first lead in "Beyond the Rainbow," and Clara Bow, the winner of a beauty contest, make her start as a screen player.

One of the callers at the studio was Wellington Cross, who was taken with Miss Baxter's vivacity and charm, and offered her a role in his vaudeville sketch, "Wives." That was five years ago.

To gain stock experience Miss Baxter played ingenue roles at the Elitch Gardens in Denver for a summer with Helen Menken and Charles Waldron. Then she went back to New York and was engaged for "The Haunted House," with Wallace Eddinger. After that she played the lead in "The Great Gatsby," then was with Margaret Lawrence in "The Behavior of Mrs. Crane," and created leads in "Cortez," with Lou Tellegen, "The Town's Woman," "Get Me in the Movies" and "The Unsophisticates."

Miss Baxter came to the Coast two months ago and is now appearing as the wealthy and imperious Julia Seton in "Holiday," the Philip Barry comedy at the Hollywood Playhouse.

Cromwell to Direct Next Powell Film

John Cromwell, former New York stage producer, actor and director, now for more than a year established as a leading film director in Hollywood, has been assigned to William Powell's next starring picture following his success with "Street of Chance."

The new Powell picture is "For the Defense," adapted by Oliver H. P. Garrett from an original by Charles Furthmann. In another respect "For the Defense" will be similar to the previous Powell success, for Kay Francis again will have the chief feminine role.

Cromwell came to Los Angeles a little more than a year ago with the New York company playing "The Racket," and was signed to a contract as a player and "student director."

His first screen work was the part of the detective in "The Dummy," one of Paramount's early talking pictures. Later Cromwell, with Edward Sutherland directed "The Dance of Life" and "Close Harmony," and since that time has been directing without collaboration.

Broadway Asks Vivienne Segal to Return Again

That the Broadway producers are worrying over the dearth of talent available for the fall season is evidenced by successive offers received in the past week by Vivienne Segal, favorite of the eastern stage and now active in talking pictures.

Miss Segal, whose musical screen debut occurred recently in "Song of the West," was obtained by Warner Brothers after her latest stage engagement in Ziegfeld's "The Three Musketeers." She has been a stellar light on the New York musical stage for the past several seasons, and the feminine attraction of scores of eastern musical hits.

A contract with Warners for two more pictures and a decided preference for the talking screen constitute Miss Segal's answer to the Broadway producers.

Fawcett Plays Role of Judge

George Fawcett's fans, especially his English admirers, have always associated him with judges, because he has played so many.

Various English writers who have met the actor and interviewed him invariably ask for a picture of Fawcett showing him in the role of a judge, and they are always disappointed if they cannot take away a "still" showing him at a table wrapping for order.

His authoritative manner easily won a run of judges for him as a stage actor, and the call to his first picture, "The Crisis," was to portray Judge Whipple. Now Fawcett is playing another in "Road House," which Leo McCarey is directing for Fox.

Gribbon Will Play New Role

Harry Gribbon, it is said, will appear in a new light in "Bride 66." The role of Boris the Dane involved great make-up study and has utterly changed his appearance.

Character studies are no new thing to Gribbon, who was classified as a character actor when he was in his 'teens. One of his notable roles was played by him when at the age of 19. He made up for a man of fifty in the original New York company of "The Spoilers."

DIALOGUE IN McCORMACK FILM TRUE

Scene in Singer's Great Play Based Upon Real Happening

In the John McCormack starring picture "Song o' My Heart," directed by Frank Borzage, which is now playing at Grauman's Chinese Theater, there is one bit of dialogue that is far removed from fiction.

The particular scene takes place in the New York office of a concert manager, played by Edward Martindel, with McCormack and his accompanist, Edwin Schneider, who also makes his screen debut in this picture, conferring with Martindel over the itinerary of a coast-to-coast tour.

As they are leaving, Count Andre de Segurola forces his way into the office and tries to sell Martindel the idea to team him up with McCormack on the concert tour.

"I have seeng with him in grand opera," persists De Segurola.

And this is the true part of it. Count de Segurola actually did sing with McCormack at the Metropolitan Opera Company. The count is now solely engaged in screen work.

"Song o' My Heart," based on a story by Tom Barry, gives the world's most popular lyric tenor an opportunity to introduce eleven song numbers, four of which are heard from the screen in a scene which is an exact replica of one of McCormack's concerts at Carnegie Hall in New York City.

LON CHANEY SINGS

Lon Chaney sings "Sweet Rosie O'Grady" in his first talkie, "The Unholy Three," which Jack Conway is directing. "Tibbett and all us boys," Chaney informed Conway, "never seem to find orchestras that fit our voices."

SOUND EQUIPMENT WILL BE PLACED ON TRAIN

The world's first complete sound studio on railroad tracks will soon move out of the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios, en route for Gallup, N. M., to film western drama in the ancient pueblo country.

A special train equipped with Pullmans that will be a traveling hotel for William Haines and the party, a special car fitted up as camera shop and laboratory and carrying a complete sound-recording apparatus, was assembled for the trip. Dynamos operated by steam from the locomotive charge the storage batteries of the sound plant, and cables from the tops of the pueblos will drop down 300 feet to the recording car to carry the voices of the players from "location" to the microphones.

The strange location train was made necessary because of the primitive region into which the company is penetrating. No hotels are available near the country to be used and there is no electricity. Hence the traveling hotel and studio on wheels.

"Easy Going," Haines's new comedy romance of the modern West, is the picture that required this elaborate detail. The location is to be at the top of a pueblo and reached only by ladders up which the players will climb 300 feet. Cameras will be hauled up by cables from the roof of the train.

In addition to cameras, equipment and cast, the train will carry horses for the cowboys and portable stable equipment.

Fred Niblo is directing the new picture, in which Haines plays a circus grafter, who turns cowboy to meet with thrilling and hilarious adventures. Leila Hyams plays the heroine, and Cliff Edwards appears as a comedy singing cowboy and Polly Moran as the ranch cook.

Role of Crook Given Benedict

Brooks Benedict will play a crook part in Paramount's "Manslaughter," which features Claudette Colbert and Frederic March.

The role is similar in character to that of the "welsher" gambler which Benedict portrayed in the William Powell starring vehicle, "Street of Chance."

Benedict, a former student at Harvard University's school of the theater, came to motion pictures from the stage. He has played many menace roles for the screen.

NEW YORK STAR HERE

Claudette Colbert, who became established as a screen star in New York, is now working in her first Hollywood-made film, "Manslaughter," in which she appears with Frederic March at the Paramount studios.

Important Role Assigned to Claud Allister

Claud Allister, English comedian whose chief film successes have been scored in "Bulldog Drummond," "Three Live Ghosts," "Slightly Scarlet" and "Ladies Love Brutes," has just been signed for the most important part in his screen career.

Allister will be featured with Jack Buchanan and Jeannette MacDonald in Ernst Lubitsch's next production for Paramount.

The story will deal with the foibles of certain titled European aristocrats from an unidentified and wholly imaginative kingdom, according to Lubitsch, who will direct it after the formula he so successfully used in bringing "The Love Parade" to the screen.

The New in Stores & Homes

Novelties, Ideas, and Suggestions

By OLIVE GRAY

Not only women exhibit thoughtless or selfish traits on street cars. There's the man who hogs the middle of two seats, and, his nose buried in a newspaper, calmly ignores the piercing gaze of tired standers. I'll wager that at home he insularly peruses the paper, forgetting to serve the family and, when his wife asks a leading question, absently replies, "U'h, Hu'h."

Newly Snake-Skinned

Snakeskin of every species has become an of-course for handbags shoes and belts, but new is the use of this commodity in making those big document cases, loved of lawyers and other professional men. Very masculine looking, too, are these cases, when fashioned from reptilian hide. One is led to imagine the real he-man attacking the savage serpent in the wilderness—or something of the sort. And it must have been an enormous snake, to afford so large a spread of skin—unless taxiderny has found some way of welding reptile skins.

New Furnishing Ways

It truly does require some education in the new furnishing ways, to bring about the proper scheme, since one no longer may simply decide to have a "green room," or a "pink room," or one in yellow matching every item perfectly. The right grouping of color in furnishings, is a study. I noted, in that shop adorable, where every mode and manner of newness is displayed, that color was used to form the center of a group, the varying shades of that color tapering off from the central, striking note; truly a nice art.

Bread Crumbs

Daily, new home-helps come upon the market. Now one may obtain bread crumbs, all ready to apply to chops, cutlets or to sprinkle the tops of baked viands. Nice and brown and crumbly, these come in sealed containers and, as they are put forth by that finest of baking companies, they are certain to be excellent in quality and, as everyone knows who has prepared them at home, a great convenience, as they are always in readiness.

That Pink Boudoir

How different from the girls' room of other days, is that pink boudoir, shown by the modish and mannerish shop, in the big furniture store where daily there is something new and interesting.

The novel pink room for the teenish girl has not a single article of furniture, but expresses the unusual. Squared, low dressing tables, boxish writing desk, bed builded upon lines most modernistic, even the small accessories so loved of girls, as different as if compounded in a world far removed from the one in which ordinary people dwell. I wonder how far the modernistic outlook upon surroundings will affect the outlook upon life? If environment affects character, as some scientists believe, here is food for speculation.

The Extreme

We were speaking of the modern way in home-making—the lack of ornamentation and crowding, in contrast to former ways in the house. "I sometimes think the modern homes are so unornamented as to seem cold, barren!" said she.

"That may be," replied Editha, given to speaking, her mind and to calling a spade a shovel, "but look at Honoria's house! So fussy, so cluttered with bric-a-brac that you quite marvel that the wood for the nreplace is not hand-painted! Or incased in embroidered bags!"

Jazz-Jamas

Isn't that a good name for them? Those pajamas fashioned from brilliant flowered cretonne. And who does not like a bit of jazz? And now those gay pajama suits enliven the home, the porch, garden or camp! More of the romance of cretonne, these present.

Cacti in Bloom

Several of the cacti in our garden are in bloom. How strange that these surly, introspective plants suddenly put forth such marvels of flowering! It is as though they would say, "You have little understood us, thinking us dour and unappreciative of your friendship, but, behold the secret sweetness of our souls!"

May Day

May Day has been made Child's Health Day, a sort of concentrated essence of the health guarding for little ones. It is doubtful if, in any age, so much thought has been given to the health of children, as at present engages the scientific minds of experts in this line. If the trend is correct, the rising generation should perform marvelous feats and life should be prolonged as we are told it was in old biblical days. I wonder if they studied such matters then, or if such study was needless by reason of general sturdiness. Perhaps overconfidence in Nature's providence led to deterioration and our era suffers from that long-ago neglect!

Our Forbears

We sometimes have thought, when hearing of the stressful labors of our forbears—washings, scrubbings, weaving—all kinds of strength sapping feats, performed unbelievably soon after some of Nature's most devastating experiences, we have thought that, possibly, these feats may have been the cause of weakness and ill health in the ones who followed.

STUART ERWIN RETURNS

Stuart Erwin, who was sent to New York by Paramount to carry the comedy lead opposite Helen Kane in "Dangerous Nan McGrew," has returned to Hollywood for further film work.

Earl Lee Owns Collection of Valued Stamps

When Earl Lee is not busy at the theater one will find him pasting rare editions of stamps into his books. He has a collection valued, it is said, at several thousand dollars.

"I should have been a philatelist, not an actor," said Lee, sitting in his dressing-room at the President, preparing to transform his thin, somewhat angular face into the semblance of a smiling African. "It's my greatest hobby. And it's an educative one. It has started me reading more history, biography and books on travel than I might have done otherwise. That's something for an actor to do, especially if, as happened to me for many seasons, he has a new part to learn each week and forty-five weeks out of the year at that."

Lee's role of Jasper, the colored servant, in "The Blue Ghost," which the Henry Duffy Players are presenting, is the 400th of his career.

The comedian admits to a hideous past. He was once that youthful pest known as a boy soprano. In New York he was the golden-haired child who sang ballads in variety shows, running off the stage to dodge members of the Gerry Society, who believed that child actors should be suppressed.

Lee came to the Coast five years ago and has been with the Henry Duffy Players in San Francisco, Seattle and Portland. His last appearance here was in "The Best People" at the Hollywood Playhouse.

'STRICTLY DISHONORABLE' WILL OPEN AT BILTMORE

Brock Pemberton's production of "Strictly Dishonorable," Preston Sturges's widely praised, diverting comedy, is to be given by a specially selected New York company at Erlanger's Biltmore Theater, beginning tonight.

Personally staged by Mr. Pemberton and Antoinette Perry, who gave the original its adroit direction, this production contains a cast of reputedly high merit. Its widely varying characters include Margaret Perry (who played the stellar role in New York during the illness of Muriel Kirkland.) Lino Manzoni, Lee Bawker, Ralph Locke, George Meeker, Jerome Daley, Guido Alexander and Edward Hartford.

Pronounced by writers for the theater a masterpiece of deft playwriting, with a wealth of alert and intelligent humor, intriguing romance maintaining a sprightly bouyancy, the comedy has taken its place in the upper class distinction of "Holiday," "Let Us Be Gay" and "Paris Bound," as a worthy and lasting contribution to the theater.

ETTA DELMAS LOVES GREAT OPEN ROAD

Etta Delmas, who plays the Irish mother in the comedy "For Cryin' Out Loud," which Brown and Forrest are presenting at the Egan Theater, is a lover of the open road. The nearest that she has come to gratifying her desire for travel was her many years' experience on tour with New York productions.

SCREEN DUTIES CONTINUE

As his first screen assignment since he took a leave of absence to produce his own play in New York, George Abbott is now directing Claudette Colbert and Frederic March in "Manslaughter" at the Paramount studios in Hollywood.

STAR, DIRECTOR REPEAT

John Cromwell, who directed William Powell in his first Paramount starring film, "Street of Chance," is now directing the star in "For the Defense."

ARIZONA CITY LOSES CHANCE

Cost of Railroad Fare Lost Film Capital to Flagstaff, According to De Mille

One of the most interesting "untold" stories of Hollywood is that which tells how close Flagstaff, Ariz., came to being a big and bustling film center.

Said Cecil B. De Mille recently, "In 1913 both Jesse L. Lasky and I were sold on Flagstaff as the seat of our new studio. I liked both the name and the location. But when we came to buy tickets west we were told that we could go on to Los Angeles for the same price. So we merely stopped off at Flagstaff, and then came along to Hollywood, where we located in the barn of a lemon orchard."

Hawaii to Be Portrayed in New Manner

Visitors to Hawaii who confine their sojourn to the beaten track of the tourist miss much of the rare charm that abounds there, according to Bradley King, author and scenarist, who has returned with material for a screen play of the islands.

Miss King, now at the First National studios preparing the screen play and dialogue for Richard Barthelmess's next picture "Adios," spent two months visiting out-of-the-way regions and listening to the folk lore of aged natives she found in the interior. Upon the strange and colorful tales she heard from these people, she will base a story which she promises will present Hawaii in a new and interesting atmosphere.

"The tales of Hawaiian kings are tremendously fascinating and the old natives still bask in the memory of those days," said Miss King. "They seemed much pleased to know that a story is to be written which will record some of the pomp and glory of their youth. The commercial advancement of the islands interests them little, but they are proud of their history and eager to have it written with fidelity to tradition."

Fashion Revue Gets Setting

Unable to find a swimming pool or garden big enough, Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer went right ahead and built a gigantic setting for the fashion revue and ballet spectacles in "Our Blushing Brides," in which Joan Crawford is starred by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer.

The setting, for which towering concrete ornamental pillars were specially molded, has been erected on an outdoor stage and covers more than an acre of space, including the modernistic pool and a myriad of splasing fountains.

Sunday School Lesson.

*"The International Sunday School Lesson for May 11 is, 'Jesus Acclaimed as King.'—Matthew xxi:1-11.

BY WILLIAM T. ELLIS

As I write these words, squads of steel-helmeted and armed British soldiers are on duty at the Jaffa Gate, the Damascus Gate, St. Stephen's Gate and at the lesser entrances to the city. Machine guns are mounted on the walls. An armed sentry stands at the door of the postoffice, and of every other public building. All is tense preparedness against any possible outbreak by this tumultuous and unpredictable population, which flames into outbursts whenever its religious passions are touched.

A cold and rational westerner may question the swift enthusiasm of the populace over the appearance of Jesus on Palm Sunday; but not so one who knows Syria. The triumphal entry was wholly true to form.

SOME MODERN INSTANCES

I have seen parallel incidents. During the war, when the Turks ruled Jerusalem, all Russian priests were banished from the city, and the orthodox churches were served only by faithful women who suffered sore privation. One day, after the war, I was sitting in my hotel near the Jaffa Gate when a great tumult called me forth.

"The Russian archbishop has come," said the hotel keeper. I found the streets thronged by a crowd, mostly women, following the prelate's carriage and shouting hysterically, running forward to kiss the hem of his robe, or to touch the wheels and the horses. It was a miniature triumphal entry of the representative of the church, who would restore regular worship.

I saw the crowds that greeted the American Commission on Mandates in Palestine, but most nearly like the triumphal entry were the demonstrations in Egypt, in 1919, over a premature report of independence. Hundreds of thousands of Egyptians of all degrees crowded the streets in improvised processions. The ululations of the peasants mingled with the concerted cries of the students. Fellaheen tore off their long robes, their galabeahs and flung them in the way. Branches were stripped from the trees and strewn or waved. All the volatile emotions of the Orient were unloosed. Anybody who saw those wonderful days could easily picture the triumphal entry of Jesus into Jerusalem. The event was true to type.

SMALL STAGE, GREAT DRAMA

Jerusalem seems to have been created for theatricals. It is a stage city with the grand-stand seats on the Mount of Olives. The intimacy and closeness of the setting is remarkable. All that befell on the day of the triumphal entry was within easy walking distance, and within hearing of the sounds of the shouting and tumult. Bethany, around the shoulder of Olivet, is so near to even the opposite side of Jerusalem that I have more than once strolled thither for a before-dinner walk. And be it remembered that this village of Bethany was the place where Jesus habitually sojourned in the home of Lazarus and Mary and Martha.

There is a touch of mystery about the readiness of the ass and her colt, to be given over upon the utterance of a password. "The Lord hath need of them." His hour had arrived, and all things were made ready. The King would come to His own in prophesied fashion. Not on a horse of pride, with gaudy trappings, but on the lowly ass He presented Himself to the throngs who had come up to the feast from every part of far-scattered Jewry.

A DEAD MAN'S PART

Two major motives animated the crowd which acclaimed Jesus. One was interest in Himself because of His miracles and His teachings. There arrives a time in every person's life when he become the recipient of the effects of his accumulated past. The triumphal entry garnered the fruits of three years of ministry. The fame of Jesus had permeated the nation. So He had become the central figure of the feast.

Lazarus, too, was a magnet for popular interest. Wonder of wonders, here was a man who had been raised from the dead by Jesus. The deeps of human imagination were stirred by thoughts of this man who had passed beyond the portals of death and come back again. Nothing like this had been seen since the days of Israel's great prophet. We cannot fully understand the triumphal entry unless we recognize that Lazarus had drawn curious multitudes to Bethany, the nucleus of the throng that surrounded Jesus in the procession to the city.

In the swift, strange fashion by which news vibrates to the innermost chambers of palaces and hovels in the Orient the tidings of the approach of Jesus ran throughout all Jerusalem. The crowded khans, the sedate homes of the Pharisees and the busy bazaars all heard it quickly. Suddenly there arose one of those unpredictable popular demonstrations which make life an anxious thing for officials in the East. "Lo, the world has gone after Him!" cried the highly placed plotters, priests and politicians.

LOOKERS-ON IN CRISIS

It is easier to understand the excited, demonstrative, effervescing multitudes than this company of critics who stood aside from the great ovation and commented upon it. They were the sophisticated and cynical upper classes, the Pharisees and scribes, to whom all enthusiasm seemed bad form. No selfless passion ever stirred their pulses. No cause or leader ever led them to forget themselves or their carefully nursed dignity in an outburst of pride or joy or loyalty.

In the midst of this wild delirium of popular fervor they could still plot and scheme, and send emissaries to remonstrate with the conquering hero, "Master, rebuke thy disciples."

But the flashing-eyed Christ, to whom the hosannas of the hosts and the recognition of His kingship as the expected son of David were sweet in this, His royal hour, sternly cried, in legal reproof, "I tell you that if these shall hold their peace the stones will cry out." This was Jesus's recognition, and He knew it. Gone was His patience with the perfidious Pharisees. Tomorrow might belong to them, but today was His. Not until after He had risen and ascended did even His own disciples know the sublime significance of this triumph.

HOLLYWOOD IN PERSON

BY MOLLIE MERRICK

The village, treated the other evening to a glimpse of a talkie made inside its environs, heartily applauded the fine technique which goes to make it one of the best pictures recently shown.

Paul Bern's production of "Young Man of Manhattan," made in Manhattan, hasn't a waste moment. What is more, it incorporates the inexplicable charm of Manhattan into its fabric.

It was another opportunity also to witness the charming work of Miss Claudette Colbert, but recently arrived here in Hollywood. From every point of view she is a dangerous rival to the beauty queens of the gilded hamlet.

This director has had a strange career in Hollywood. He astounded the producers when he asked for Adolphe Menjou as his lead in "The Case of Lena Smith." Miss Smith has now passed from the annals, but that was the picture by which this blond lady will be remembered. Josef Von Sternberg made her act.

Sternberg has one major ambition. He would like to shoot a picture in sheer realism; a story in which every person played the part he plays in real life and reacted as in life.

Richard Dix is one of those gods of the silent regime who has found the talkies kind. For his next story $100,000 was paid, which shows that the he-man is still in favor with the public.

The story is "Cimarron," Edna Ferber's tale of the opening of Oklahoma Territory. The hero is a striking character for movie purposes. He is colorful, exaggerated sufficiently to make any actor glad to portray him, and he is full of romantic appeal for the audience.

A general clean-up on the part of the authorities seeks to remove the menace of fake mediums, clairvoyants, spiritists and such fol-de-rols from the village picture.

The sudden shift in styles from extreme dignity brought about one of the most amusing sights Hollywood has seen these many years. Gowns worn by movie stars and subsequently were auctioned off on one of the studios. Clothes aggregating more than $25,000. Bought about $1800.

Dancing stars is not such an easy business as one might think. They almost make themselves. There is a rapport between personalities which inevitably finds its way to the audience.

Joan Francis and Bill Powell seem to enjoy playing opposite each other. So, the public enjoys seeing them. They are moderns; sophisticated to a certain extent.

Joan Francis is one of the tallest girls in Hollywood. She is also one of the most striking. Her one ambition is to play in the cinema the part of young Katherine Cornell has made popular on the stage.

Bill Powell is that amazing paradox, a sophisticate from the Middle West. Born in Kansas City, he has a continental flair. His English is meticulously correct. His sense of humor would do credit to Noel Coward and his keen analysis of human situation is a revelation to anyone accustomed to chatter by folk who are devils before dinner but duds at a luncheon party.

The most interesting chapter in the book of celluloid history is a trip to Africa where dog "Barkie" pictures are being made.

Fierce Boston bulls mainly, trained to move their jaws at a given signal. Each movement responds to a sign from the trainer. The script is held by him and indicates the syllables to be spoken by the dog makes the necessary motions. When a human voice is dubbed in, the result is a comical effect of the animal actors in lines. As for the acting ability of the troupe, they make of the human element fade into the background.

A general movement in Hollywood, completely, threatens the talkies which has made it the center of interest.

Many of the feature pictures being produced has nine principals to the cast. Any one of them could properly claim the right to be featured in a large picture. And the names are acknowledged

Ramon Novarro is one. Nancy Carroll

the Kid's Will Be Put on Screen

Years of close research can disclose more than sixty different biographies have been written about "The Kid," the desperado of the West in the late '70's, who will make his talking-picture debut in a film Vidor production for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. John Mack Brown will play the role.

The adventurous career of "The Kid" came to a close, it is learned, the most hectic of all the "wild West." It is said nearly every person who knew "The Kid" or served in a capacity that him "took pen in hand" describe the laughing New Mexico desperado who is now known as "the most dangerous man ever knew."

Many have attempted to duplicate the exact appearance of the persons of the Lincoln-Tunstall New Mexico.

APPEARS IN ENGLISH TALKIE

[illegible], who has appeared in many films in Spanish, is now before the microphone in English. "Men of Romance" is the latest effort in the native tongue of Hollywood. It is a Metro-Goldwyn production.

Ramon is Argentine, but his parents are Basque. He learned to speak French and Spanish. He was fortunate enough to be cast in the first American talkie in a foreign-language version, "Sombras de [illegible]," played in "Asi es [illegible]" directed by George Crone.

ed many portraits here as well as pictures of early Spanish life and the missions. In this portrait he has done a remarkable work. It is one of the finest portraits ever painted here, flees against a richly decorative background of Spanish life and architecture, he has held the attention completely upon the portrait proper by contrasting its cool, silvery tones with the warmth of the background. The texture of the lace mantilla is excellently rendered, the beauty and dignity of the head and figure create the pride and richness of the Spanish tradition.

Visitors to the annual fiesta of the Southwest Museum, to be held this afternoon at the Casa de Adobe, will have an opportunity to see both portrait and sitter, as Senora De Dodson is to be one of the hostesses.

CRITIC REVIEWS NEW TRENDS

during the season with "Brothers."

THE brightest play that has come to the stage here for many months, indeed, is "June Moon," the Ring Lardner and George S. Kaufman sketching of the song-writers' world. It has a spontaneous humorous excellence that is entirely captivating, and it is being given a very acceptable performance.

What is particularly clever about this piece is the manner in which it avoids thrusting its plot upon you. The dramatic portion is really rather serious, but it is compressed into ten or fifteen minutes in the last act, and the rest is sheer entertainment.

I would give the palm for performance to Murray Smith as Maxie, and, by the way, his piano playing is exceedingly effective. That bit of washing the window at the end of the second act is exceptionally well maneuvered by him, and it is a brilliant bit of stage business.

Cleve Moore fits effectively into the role that he does in this play, and gets an abundance of laughs. Ruth Abbott is exceedingly good in the vampish portrayal, but Edith Van Cleve with her ability to high light the humor is perhaps the strongest attraction among the women. James Spottswood incidentally gives a highly efficient portrayal of the husband. Ross Hertz is responsible for a fine bit as the overzealous songwriter, and little Nancy Dover is well cast.

I note that this play is not expected to run for very long, but I don't know why it shouldn't. Unless people have a notion that "June Moon" is a musical comedy, and are disappointed when they find it is not.

OF ALL the pictures which I have seen recently one which garnered very much genuine applause was a recording and photographing of the final act of "Faust" the other evening. One must admit that the artifices of opera are a little amusing on the screen, but the sincerity of the operatic artist can do much to overcome this. And it certainly seemed to, as regards the majority, in the instance of the "Faust" excerpt.

Producers, in a great many cases, are convinced for some reason or other that audiences do not want this type of picture. Yet—how then explain the evident enthusiasm for this example.

Buchanan Back in Hollywood

Census enumerators had one more name to count with the arrival from London of Jack Buchanan, English stage favorite, here to make a picture for Paramount.

Buchanan is the musical comedy star well known for his appearance in various Charlot's Revues with Beatrice Lillie and Gertrude Lawrence, and more recently as a star of the London and New York success, "Wake Up and Dream."

CLUB NOTES

Judels Claims Holland for Native Land

While Holland is known chiefly for its canals and its cheeses, it also holds the distinction of giving America one of her best screen comedians.

Charles Judels, whose antics furnish many of the laughs in "The Big Party," the melodrama at the Boulevard this week, was born in Amsterdam, of a theatrical family. Coming to this country when only 9 years of age, Judels was almost brought up in the theater, his father being the stage director at the Metropolitan Operahouse for thirty-five years.

Young Judels went on the stage at the age of 10, and has been connected with it ever since, having produced nearly ninety plays himself.

"The Big Party" is declared to be one of the funniest musical productions to be offered by the Fox studios this year. The cast, in addition to Judels, boasts an array of talent that is headed by Sue Carol, Walter Catlett, Douglas Gilmore, Dixie Lee, Richard Keene, Frank Albertson, Jack Smith, Elizabeth Patterson and Dorothy Brown.

MUSIC-MAKING INDUSTRIALIZED

several numbers for "Sally" and other pictures. Joe Burke individually earned $11,000 more on a ballad entitled "Carolina Moon," published before the talkies got him. We won't be listening to these pieces as long as we have listened to a couple of pre-Tin-Pan Alleyites called Gilbert and Sullivan, but look where Gilbert and Sullivan are now.

WHENCE COME HITS?

It is natural to question where "hits" come from. After all, though song writing may be a business, those in it cannot make a number a hit. They can "plug" it wherever men have ears and they can "spot" it to advantage in a presentation, but they cannot tell whether it will be a hit until the public makes it one. That's where the fun comes in.

As far as plugging a tune goes, the studios now practically own the music publishing industry—an acquisition that has its advantages for the purpose. The matter of spotting a number at the most effective moment in a show was less easily disposed of, the studios having been somewhat notoriously able to draw mostly blanks where they should have drawn hits. The old problem of knowing exactly when to burst into song was further complicated at first by the innocent attitude of movie audiences who, unaccustomed as they were to public singing, couldn't appreciate the spirit that moved a hero to tell his best girl what he would do if he had a talking picture of you-oo instead of clasping her to his bosom without all that fuss.

PSYCHOLOGICAL MOMENT

Now, however, the producer and the composer have entered into a sort of compromise, whereby the producer promises to do right by the composer—and incidentally himself—and exert greater care in spotting a number where it will do the most good. This procedure is like the one that has been followed for years in the musical-comedy theater, where an average of two "naturals," or reasonably sure-fire hits, were allotted psychological moments in each play.

Sometimes, of course, a melody will become a success unexpectedly—and nobody will be more surprised than its creators. "The Pagan Love Song" and "Should I?" (from "Lord Byron of Broadway") are instances. They tell the story, too, of one enterprising publisher who questioned the respective sales-powers of films and radio. It was his contention that the air had it all over the screen when it came to spreading insidious propaganda for music. So by devious paths he came at last into possession of a twenty-year-old ditty that had done yeoman service for the boys of the University of Maine; and this ditty he had rearranged for the dance orchestra. The first one to send its rousing strains into the ether was dear old Rudy Vallee himself, and the example he set was rapidly emulated by others. Today the same number occupies first place in sales at a great many key centers of America; you hear it wherever you go; but the movies had no share in its dissemination. It need hardly be added that the roundelay in question is that one known simply to one and all as "The Stein Song."

ANOTHER HOLLYWOOD LOCATION WIDOW CROP

With outdoor films returned to major prominence on the production schedules of the studios, Hollywood again has its location widows.

They are the wives and sweethearts of the men who go to the wide-open spaces to make outdoor action pictures.

During the hey-day of the silent western films there were from 100 to 500 location widows in Hollywood at all times. The average motion-picture unit on location includes from 75 to 150 persons, counting players and technicians. From one to ten units from the various studios invariably were on location somewhere in the west.

With the first coming of talking pictures, location widowhood ceased. Filming was confined to the interior of sound proof stages at the Hollywood studios and gone were the long jaunts to the mesas of Arizona, the canyons of Utah and the Sierras of California.

Outdoor sound recording apparatus was perfected and the first tentative jaunts outside the studios were followed by longer excursions. Now the location trips are back again, longer than ever.

FILMS FURTHER WORLD PEACE

lain and no crime; 17.5 per cent, the villain was killed; 33.8 per cent, the villain was apprehended by police; 19.4 per cent, the villian reformed, and that of the other cases, the villian received punishment at the hand of the movies. Not once did he escape punishment for his wrongdoing.

Probably the most extensive survey of the influence of motion pictures on behavior was undertaken by the department of psychology of Columbia University under the direction of Dr. Joseph L. Holmes. In a report of the findings, published in the Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology, Dr. Holmes declared:

"In an attempt to determine experimentally to what extent the antisocial suggestions of the worst sort of crime-depicting film are comprehended by children, the writer re-edited a seven-reel picture, which in its entirety was a farce, so as to make it a portrayal of assassination, false accusation and suicide. Among the leading characters were a soldier who was accused of betraying his country; his brother, a weakling who, though not guilty, confessed the crime; two spies, one of them the forsaken mistress of the soldier, and the other a man who committed suicide when accused of the murder. The leading character was, after successfully eluding the police for a time, put in prison.

SHOWN TO CHILDREN

"This picture was shown to about 500 school children in the fourth to eighth grades, inclusive. This was done with the consent and fullest co-operation of all the officials and teachers of the schools. The children were then examined on the content of the picture in two ways. They were asked to answer forty questions, ten of them very leading. Then they were required to write an essay on the picture telling the story. Those below the fifth grade were unable to do so, not having received at that time sufficient training. Of all the children, none indicated the least sympathy for the various evil characters portrayed. None showed by either response to questions nor anything in their narratives the least hint that they understood the true relations that had existed between the murdered man and his cast-off mistress. Of course, there were great individual differences between the amount of material remembered by the children of the same ages and especially those of different ages. Only the older children were able to give any accurate and extended accounts. The one fact reported most frequently was that 'he was put in prison' or 'he was put in a dungeon' or, as one sixth-grade boy expressed it in the vernacular, 'he ended up in jail.'"

PUNISHMENT REMEMBERED

In the motion picture, it is further explained by Dr. Holmes, the important consideration is that there is a continuity from the crime itself to the detection of the offender and his punishment; and it is that application of punishment to the crime which is the most often remembered by the audience, especially children.

Consideration of the fact led the newsreel companies, operating under the aims set down by the organized motion-picture industry under the guidance of Will H. Hays, to determine among themselves not to feature crime news. That is why the newsreel is the first art form to develop a policy of editing current crime out of its record of news events in motion-picture theaters.

But the newsreel serves perhaps an even more important purpose, one of world-wide import. As a single example of the motion-picture's development as an international medium for the exchange of ideas, the leveling of barriers to understanding and sympathy, and the fostering of good will among the world's nations, it stands eminent.

Twenty-five per cent of the newsreels made last year were photographed in foreign countries. The eyes and ears of the motion-picture camera today lend themselves to every important happening and to notables in every land. They record the pageantries, the joyful occasions and tragedies of all people. They help the nationals of every country to gain a fairer comprehension of the character and aims of their neighbors.

Will H. Hays was mindful of the basic psychology of strife when he formulated the principles by which the member companies of the producer association should be guided in their delineation of aliens on the screen.

"It is the purpose of the association," he said, "to portray sympathetically the nationals of each country to the nationals of every other country, believing that when men understand one another they do not hate, and when they do not hate, they do not make war."

The position of the motion-picture industry on the question of peace is further reflected in the consistent attention given to all peace activities by the newsreel companies. These events are featured first among world happenings.

WAR STRIPPED OF GLAMOUR

The power of the motion picture to strip war of its glamour by a visual exposure of its havoc and folly has been ably described by Mrs. C. M. Wilson, eminent British educational authority. In discussing the great preponderance of antiwar answers given by 4000 British pupils to an inquiry made by the educational committee of the League of Nations, Mrs. Wilson wrote:

"It is one thing to know about war and be told of its evils, quite another to envisage it as something real and appalling. Moving pictures appeal vividly to the imagination, sometimes with the lure of beauty, sometimes with the thrill of the unknown or unexpected, always with the fascination of movement. They can make things living and real. They are exciting and call forth strong emotion . . . Our literature, our history, our art are soaked with the old glamour of war as war . . . War films, however, censored, modified, doctored or distorted, come to the children as a revelation. They get a glimpse of modern war as a real thing. No wonder they are excited and thrilled. And perhaps it is not so strange, after all, that in so many cases the lasting effect is a sense of the horror of war."

The motion-picture industry on numerous occasions has proffered the screen to deserving projects for the advancement of international brotherhood. These services include its co-operation with the Committee on World Friendship Among Children to stimulate the production of motion pictures illustrating good-will projects among the young of different nations, and with the Boy Scouts in order to put at their disposal newsreels and other film material for an international picturization of Boy Scout life.

Among those who have expressed themselves on the subject of motion pictures, there has been a preponderance of opinion that the screen gives people conceptions of war, crime and other detriments to mankind that no amount of preaching could convey.

GERMAN BOOK INTERESTING

An interesting book dealing with all German dance academies and containing numerous illustrations has recently made its appearance in Berlin, according to word from there. Bearing the title, "Monographs of Dance Schools," by L. Freund, the book deals with Berlin and its thirteen leading schools. It also contains a register of all the schools and classes authorized by the educational authorities of the Berlin district and from this list it is interesting to note that there are about 150 schools, eight of which are conducted by members of the nobility.

RADIO MERGER PROJECT CAUSES STIR AT CAPITAL

Department of Justice Investigates Proposed Deal of R.C.A. With Electric Companies

BY JOHN S. DAGGETT

The proposed acquisition by the Radio Corporation of America of the radio activities of the General Electric and Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Companies has stirred Washington more deeply than any other recent event.

As explained by David Sarnoff, president of Radio Corporation, the combination was planned for the purpose of obtaining increased efficiency and economy in the manufacture and merchandising of radio receiving equipment which, "ultimately," he said should "bring down the cost of radio sets and tubes to the public."

Immediately following announcement of the proposed merger, it was made known that the Department of Justice had undertaken an investigation to determine whether it would set up a monopoly in restraint of trade under the Sherman antitrust law. The department, which already had the Radio Corporation under scrutiny and has promised to make a report in the near future to the Senate committee, which, under the chairmanship of Senator Cousens, has been investigating the radio situation, is understood to have been fully advised of the general plan of the combination before details were made public.

DOUBT EXISTS

Some doubt exists as to what the government might be able to do to prevent the merger, it being pointed out that the joining of these three companies, which own or control thousands of patents on radio apparatus, will not lessen competition for the reason that the corporations are already at least indirectly related.

There is also some question as to whether such a monopoly, if it is deemed one, can be defeated since patent monopolies invariably have been held legal by the courts. A number of important antitrust prosecutions have been brought, involving monopolies resulting from the ownership of patents, always ending in the defeat of the government.

Possible effect of the proposed merger upon radio legislation pending in the Senate is a subject of much speculation in Washington. In a bitter attack upon the proposed acquisition, Senator Dill of Washington, prominent in the consideration of radio measures, charged that it is obviously a phase of an effort to form a world-wide radio trust.

"This combination," he asserts, "shows what the intent of those in charge has been from the start of this radio organization. If the Department of Justice has needed anything to show what the intent was they certainly have it now.

OWEN D. YOUNG HIT

"The truth of the matter is that this is a part of Mr. Owen D. Young's plan to have formed a world-wide radio trust; there is no question about that. There is just one step more needed. Mr. Young is chairman of the board of the General Electric Company and chairman of the executive committee of the Radio Corporation. He has been very active in all these world unification movements and primarily in the organization the international world bank. With the General Electric Company holding in its hand as parent company the control of the electric power business in this country, of the electric-manufacturing business and the radio business through the various subsidiaries of the Radio Corporation, he is in a position now to connect it up with the world bank and make a special use of the exclusive contracts which the Radio Corporation has made with every great government of the world except Russia. These exclusive contracts must come through the Radio Corporation. So there is just one more step needed to complete the world-wide radio trust that Mr. Young is evidently planning.

"There has never been anything like it in the history of mankind; and the worst feature of it is that it deals not merely with present radio rights, not merely with present conditions, but these contracts and these arrangements are planned to include all future developments."

Pointing out that Sarnoff announced the merger proposal after he had visited President Hoover at the White House, Senator Dill declared that he could not believe the President had sanctioned the combination, the impression which he intimated Sarnoff sought to give.

The proposed merger, from the viewpoint of the independent radio industry as expressed by Oswald F. Schuette, executive secretary of the Radio Protective Association, is a "challenge" to the Department of Justice, the Federal Radio Commission and Congress.

FAT CURES HELD TO BE WORTHLESS

Agriculture Department Warns Public Against Use of Nostrums

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. (Exclusive)—"Almost all fat reducing preparations are worthless and some are even injurious," it was announced recently by the district office of the United States Department of Agriculture, after analysis of hundreds of "obesity "cures." The announcement says no mixture of drugs known to the medical profession at the present time can be offered for the promiscuous use of the public in reducing weight without introducing an element of danger, and adds that careful dieting and proper exercise are the only safe methods of getting rid of surplus fat. The warning stated: "Thyroids and laxatives frequently are found in the cures. Use of thyroid, unless given under the advice of a physician, may result in injury or even death.

"The government can force manufacturers to keep false claims from the labels of their preparations but cannot control the circulars accompanying the remedies. It is best to compare the labels with the circulars, the label is authentic."

Oakland Seeks Dornier Plane For Air Show

OAKLAND, May 3. (Exclusive)—With the Oakland Municipal Airport chosen as its site, Northern California's first great air show, the Pacific Coast Aeronautical Exposition, will be held here for nine days commencing June 28, and will offer to millions their first opportunity to see, at close range, all of the newest developments in the world of aviation.

Plans now under way contemplate the exhibition of many types of aircraft, including such famous developments as the Curtiss Tanager, winner of the $100,000 Guggenheim safety award, the Pitcairn Auto-Gyro and the Northrop Flying Wing, sensations of the industry's most recent developments, the huge thirty-two-passenger Fokker transport ship, and a great array of sport planes, lighter commercial ships, gliders and engines, among them the new and world-famed Packard Diesel motor. Possibility that the giant Dornier DO-X, 160-passenger flying boat may be on hand for the exposition is also seen in the efforts of the committee in charge of developing the show. This massive seaplane will, according to plans, be flown to America early this summer, and efforts are being made to arrange for its presence at the forthcoming Oakland display.

WHALERS READY TO SET SAIL

Fleet Will Depart From Seattle by Middle of This Month

SEATTLE, May 3. (AP)—The whalers are making ready to be away to their goal in the Bering Sea and the Arctic.

Ordinarily the movements of the whalers are leisurely excepting when they sight the giant animals of the ocean, but they will be on their way north by the middle of this month at the latest. Then the Arctic will be free of ice barriers until November.

Seattle's whaling fleet consists of seven "killer" ships. A total of seventy-seven whalers will man the vessels. They will operate from two stations.

Two land crews totalling 130 men will go to the stations where they will prepare oil, fertiliser and whalebone for delivery to the United States.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. (Exclusive)—The British warship H. M. S. Dauntless will visit Los Angeles Harbor the 24th to 29th inst., according to information received by Maj.-Gen. John L. Hines's headquarters at the Presidio.

Gen. Hines has directed Lieut.-Col. Carr W. Waller, Coast Artillery Corps, who is in command of the harbor defenses of Los Angeles at Fort MacArthur, to extend the usual courtesies and facilities to the Dauntless when she arrives at San Pedro.

The H. M. S. Dauntless is a 4560-ton vessel with an armament of six six-inch guns and four eight-inch guns.

Following its Los Angeles visit the Dauntless will cruise north and visit the Alaskan ports of Juneau Wrangell and Sitka.

BRANCH BANKS BEING STUDIED

Congressional Committee Considers Groups

Steady Growth Shown By Chain Institutions

Fewer Restrictions Proposed by Finance Men

WASHINGTON (D. C.) May 3. (Exclusive)—Continued growth of branch banking and particularly of chain and group banking is reported by the Federal Reserve Board as Congressional committees are giving consideration to legislation to liberalize restrictions now prevailing.

Out of 24,630 banks in the country on December 31, 822 operated a total on 3547 branches. On June 30, 1929, out of 25,115 banks 818 operated 3440 branches. The number of banks in chains and groups which are not restricted by law, on December 31, totaled 2103 as compared with 1821 in June. The growth of chain and group banking has taken place particularly in States which prohibit branch banking, among these being Illinois.

HEARINGS BEING HELD

Just how Congress will deal with the situation is as yet uncertain. Hearings have been in progress before the House Banking and Currency Committee for several weeks on the proposal of Controller of the Currency John E. Pole, for legislation to permit national banks to maintain branches within wide limits. Under his proposal the banks would be able to establish branches at points within specified trade areas, possibly within the limits of Federal reserve districts instead of being required to limit their branch banking activities to the cities within which they are located at present. So far sentiment has not definitely crystallized among members of the committee as to how far the bars should be let down and as to what should be done with respect to States where State laws now prohibit all branch banking. The McFadden law gives national banks no branch banking privileges in States where the State banks cannot operate branches.

LEGISLATION DELAYED

While the House committee may perfect a bill at the present session it is not likely to press its passage before next winter. Even then it is probable that Congress will not be ready to enact legislation. The Senate Banking and Currency Committee has only recently authorized an investigation of banking conditions, one phase of which will include branch, chain and group banking, and its inquiry probably will continue into next winter.

Opposition to branch banking does not appear to be so strong in Congress as it was at the time of the consideration of the McFadden law in 1926 and 1927. One reason for this is that many of the independent bankers who were active in opposition to legislation permitting an extension of branch banking have now become associated with chain or group banking. This is said to be true of some of the bankers in the outlying sections of Chicago who were prominent in the antibranch banking fight of four years ago.

Spread of chain and group banking, where control of a number of banks is held by a holding company or by other banks or by individuals has been most pronounced in Minnesota, one of the twenty-two States where branch banking is prohibited. In Minnesota on December 31, there were thirty-seven chain or group systems, being 308 banks and with $584,000,000 in loans and investments. This was an increase of almost 100 per cent in resources.

ILLINOIS CHAINS

In Illinois there were twelve chain or group systems on December 31 with a total of eighty-four banks and loans and investments amounting to $1,212,000,000. The largest group consisted of sixteen banks. In the case of three of the systems control was maintained by large banks while in the nine other cases individuals controlled through stock ownership. No holding companies were operating in Illinois as in some States. The number of banks in chains or groups in Illinois last June was seventy-nine while loans and investments at that time amounted to $996,000,000.

In Wisconsin there were six chain or group systems involving fifty-eight banks and with loans and investments of $212,000,000 on December 31. In Iowa there were twelve systems taking in sixty-seven banks with $90,000,000 in loans and investments. In Indiana there were three systems with seventeen banks and $41,000,000 in loans and investments. Branch banking is prohibited in all of these States. In Michigan, where branches are permitted under certain restrictions, there were eleven chain or group systems with 135 banks and $1,362,000,000 in loans and investments. The number of banks in chains or groups in Michigan increased by more than 50 per cent in the six months period and resources tripled.

LARGEST GROUP

The largest chain or group in the country maintains its headquarters in New York City and has loans and investments aggregating $1,500,000,000. It operates in New York and California. A Chicago group, operating in Illinois, comes fifth in rank with loans and investments exceeding $500,000,000. Seven banks are in this group. Another Chicago group with fourteen banks ranks twelfth with loans and investments in excess of $250,000,000. Another Chicago group with five banks and loans and investments of $171,000,000 ranks fourteenth and still another Chicago group with three banks and loans and investments of $132,000,000 ranks twentieth.

"While chain and group banking developments have not been generally restricted by provisions in State banking codes," says the Federal Reserve Board in its review of the situation as it existed on December 31, just issued, "the area within which these developments have been relatively more considerable in extent is composed largely of States which have prohibited the establishment of branch banking offices—as for example, in Minnesota, North Dakota, Kansas, Iowa, Illinois, Oklahoma and Texas. Developments of this character have, however, by no means been restricted to these States. In certain other States, particularly in several which have restricted the development of branch banking to the building up of home-city or local systems as in Michigan and New York as well as in California, which permits State-wide branch banking and in Florida, Georgia and Montana chain or group banking has shown very considerable developments. There were in fact relatively few States in which no affiliation or banking institutions in chain or group systems was reported in December, 1929. The area within which such affiliations have been relatively predominant, however, comprises the central, middle western, northwestern and western States."

LAST CABMAN STAYS ON JOB

Accidental Death of Steed No Setback to Old Cabby

COLOGNE, May 3. (Exclusive)—The last driver of a horsecab in Cologne has reappeared on the New Market with a new cab and a new horse. A collision with an automobile last December killed his old horse and demolished his cab, but he is determined to end his life as Cologne's last and only cabman, and the authorities have granted him a license for his new outfit.

MILK SETS NEW MARK FOR PURITY

Dairy Records For 1929 Show Gains Made Over Previous Year

SACRAMENTO, May 3. (AP)—California's market milk set a new high record for purity and quality in 1929, attaining 94.96 per cent as an average quality score for the year, Director of Agriculture G. H. Hecke has announced. Bacterial count in the various grades was shown to be far below the number permitted by law.

Due principally to diversion of milk to higher priced commodities such as market milk and cream and ice cream, butter manufacture in the State decreased 5.5 per cent, or 4,300,000 pounds, from the 1928 production, Hecke said. As a result, there was an increase in butter imports from other States.

Whole milk and part skim cheese of all varieties showed a slight increase, and skim cheese production gained 80 per cent and there was no material change in per capita consumption of that product. Market milk consumption gained and production increased 3.5 per cent.

Ice cream production increased 1,000,000 gallons, or 8.5 per cent, with per capita consumption increasing to 2.22 gallons.

Cottage cheese production fell off approximately 1,000,000 pounds. Skim milk powder production showed an increase of more than 35 per cent, while sweetened whole condensed milk also gained over 1928, as did evaporated milk, dried casein and milk used in poultry or stock feeds.

Records showed the California dairy cow did her part by increasing production of milk fat by three pounds per animal during the year.

Mexico Museum Shows Nation's Chief Products

MEXICO CITY, May 3. (Exclusive)—In an agricultural and industrial museum recently established in a building of the Ministry of Agriculture in suburban Mexico City there is now on exhibit a wide variety of Mexico's varied tropical, semitropical and temperate agricultural products, and many products that are manufactured by hand by Mexicans.

One of the most interesting sections in the new museum is that of lumber. There are samples of many kinds of precious cabinet woods, many of which are unknown or virtually so as yet for commercial purposes. There are, of course, the mahogany, cedar and redwood, which abound in many parts of the republic, but there are also such cabinet woods as caobilla, croton lucidum, cedralla ocorato, and various varieties of ebony.

An official count of the various woods in Mexico lists 200 varieties, only a few of which are as yet on display in the new museum. Half of the mahogany consumed in the United States, it is estimated, is produced in Mexico. Most of Mexico's mahogany comes from the southern States of Chiapas, Tabasco, Vera Cruz and Campeche and in the as yet more or less uncivilized territory of Quintana Roo the mahogany that abounds there is used for making canoes.

Japanese Learn to Sleep in Beds

TOKIO, May 3. (Exclusive)—The increasing use of beds in Japanese homes is held by local furniture dealers as one of the most striking evidences of the rapid westernization of the empire. According to the head of the Tokio Furniture Dealers' Association, Yorishige Masaoka, the demand for beds has shown a tremendous increase within the last two years.

Because locally manufactured beds are "hardly considered excellent," and imported beds are very expensive, Mr. Masaoka plans to leave soon for America and Europe to study the manufacture of beds. He hopes to improve the Japanese product and make it inexpensive enough for people of moderate means. "In these days, when Japanese are eagerly westernizing their mode of living, the custom of sleeping on the floor must soon disappear," the furniture man holds. If his predictions are true the inevitable "futon" of the Japanese inns and homes will follow other characteristic furnishings into the discard.

Famine Victims Moved to Safe Manchuria Area

MUKDEN, May 3. (Exclusive)—Thirteen outlying districts in Liaoning Province, Manchuria, have been demarcated as reclamation areas for colonization by famine refugees and means of encouraging colonization announced by the Manchurian political affairs committee.

Prospective settlers, it is announced, will be given free accommodations and maintenance upon their arrival and then will be transported to the colonization areas at the expense of the provincial government.

BETTER VISION AIM OF SOCIETY

National Organization Wages War on Blindness

Annual Report Shows Gains Made by Science

Trachoma Only Continues to Baffle Workers

NEW YORK, May 3. (Exclusive) A record of steady achievements in the campaign to conserve vision is outlined in the fifteenth annual report of the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness, made public here today. "Let There Be Sight!" is the commanding title of the report which is being forwarded to members of the society throughout the United States.

Tribute to the memory of the late Chief Justice William Howard Taft, honorary president of the society for the last fifteen years, is paid on the opening page. Throughout the pages following, there runs a note of hopefulness for the chances of materially reducing the number of recruits to the ranks of the blind.

BLINDNESS PREVENTABLE

"We are especially concerned with the problems of that enormous number of children and adults, otherwise perfectly normal, who are constantly handicapped in their work or study and in their enjoyment of life because of defective vision," explained Lewis H. Carris, managing director of the society. "With care, early in the life of a child, weak vision often may be strengthened or, at least, frequently kept from diminishing and perhaps being lost entirely. Science is teaching us that most of the causes of blindness are preventable.

"The Society for the Prevention of Blindness has always felt that conserving sight has a place among the interests of all organizations, whether they be health, educational, welfare or industrial. This spirit of co-operation with other agencies was never more apparent in the life of the society than in 1929."

"SORE EYES"

A number of activities directed at preservation of the eyesight of children, discussed in the report, trace the interest of the society from the general health of the expectant mother, even before the baby's birth, on through successive stages of the child's life until it has been given every opportunity for clear vision which modern science affords. The use of prophylactic drops in the eyes of babies at birth, in order to prevent ophthalmia neonatorum, usually called "babies' sore eyes," is now required in most States. Entire eradication of this source of blindness—once the most prolific of all causes—is said to be scientifically possible.

An increase of forty-five "sight-saving classes" within the last year is noted in the report. There are now 350 of these classes for the education of children with seriously defective vision in ninety-five cities of twenty-one States. Through the use of large-type books, movable desks, ideal lighting and special teaching methods, children with little vision are not only given the same sort of education that children with full vision receive, but they are taught how to conserve their remaining sight. The society estimates that approximately 5000 such classes are needed in the United States. To train teachers for this work, special courses will be given in the coming summer months at Columbia University, the University of Chicago, the University of Cincinnati, and the State Teachers' College in Buffalo, N. Y.

TRACHOMA BAFFLING

Trachoma, the disease of the eyelids which leads to blindness, continues to baffle the best minds of ophthalmology, the report discloses. Renewed impetus to research into the mysteries enshrouding it was given through a five-year program of investigation started recently by the medical school of Washington University, St. Louis, and financed by the Commonwealth Fund. In addition to co-operation with the Federal trachoma clinic at Rolla, Mo., during 1929, the National Society for the Prevention of Blindness assisted several other agencies in a study of the incidence of trachoma among the Chippewa Indians of Minnesota.

Concerning the formation of the International Association for the Prevention of Blindness at The Hague last September, the report states:

"It is noteworthy that this world-wide effort was inspired and accomplished largely through the example of efficiency and effectiveness on the part of the American National Society for the Prevention of Blindness. The international organization was established after a joint study by the American society and the League of Red Cross Societies regarding the international aspects of sight conservation. Twenty-five countries and numerous interested bodies, including the League of Nations, were represented at The Hague conference. Dr. Park Lewis of Buffalo, N. Y., vice-president of the American society, was elected also vice-president of the international association; Lewis H. Carris, managing director of the American society was appointed United States correspondent for the international association."

LARGE ESTATE DISTRIBUTED

Heirs of John D. Spreckels Receive Fortune

Inheritance Tax Amounts to More Than Million

San Diego Capitalist Died Four Years Ago

SAN DIEGO, May 3.—Distribution of the $13,792,000 estate left by John D. Spreckels, San Diego capitalist who died in 1926, was ordered today by Judge C. N. Andrews. Inheritance taxes due the State were estimated at $1,467,797.03. The distribution as ordered involved that part of the estate left after all specific bequests had been paid.

It was distributed in four shares subject to adjustments of gifts that had been made by Spreckels prior to his death, three to three children and the fourth to four children of John D. Spreckels, Jr., who died before 1926.

The court's decree of distribution is still in preparation based on report of the inheritance tax appraiser showing the following amounts of each heir subject to inheritance tax deductions:

Mrs. Grace Hamilton, daughter, $2,702,662; Mrs. Lilly Wegeforth, a daughter, $2,700,943; Claus Spreckels, son, $2,753,859; Maria Spreckels Elizalde, grand-daughter, $1,256,930; Adolph B. Spreckels, grandson, $1,258,109; John D. Spreckels, III, grandson, $1,237,283; Geraldine Ann Spreckels, grand-daughter, $1,263,-788.

Shares of Claus Spreckels and Mrs. Wegeforth have been assigned to the Crocker First Federal Trust Company of San Francisco it was stated and their shares will be paid to that institution.

A supplemental report filed by the executors fixed the fee to be paid executors of the estate at $191,874.42. Attorneys for the estate are to receive a similar amount.

OXNARD, May 3. — Amid great fraternal splendor marked by large attendance, the new Odd Fellows' Temple at the corner of Fourth and B streets was formally dedicated at impressive services yesterday. Grand Lodge officers conducted the ceremonies.

Dedication services climaxed the biggest day in local history for Odd Fellows. Open house and reception to Grand Lodge officers took up the greater part of yesterday morning. Visiting continued throughout the afternoon with a banquet for some 300 persons at 6 o'clock. A parade was staged through the city streets at 7:30 and at 8:30 the lodge convened for the dedication exercises and the meeting continued until a late hour.

Among the dignitaries present were Grand Master Hjalmar Johnson of Pasadena; Deputy Grand Master F. Kushaw of Fresno; George Hydeson, Past Grand Master and now Grand Secretary of San Francisco; H. Charson of Pasadena, Grand Marshal; H. Bancroft of Los Angeles, who presided as Grand Conductor.

Frank Inglis of Oxnard was honored at the opening session by being appointed Grand Chaplain pro tem.

Oldest Woman Has Birthday

ALHAMBRA, May 5.—Mrs. Maria Challoner of 710 North Marguerita avenue reached her hundredth birthday today. She is the oldest resident in Alhambra.

Mrs. Challoner spent the day quietly at home with her grand-daughter, Arabella C. Cooper. There was no special observance of the occasion.

SPRING WEATHER WAKES UP SNAKES

UNIVERSAL CITY, May 3.—Just as everybody had begun to believe that all the rattlesnakes back of Hollywood in the Santa Monica Hills had been killed out, a few more have been seen. Police and mountain rangers while hiking through one of the canyons near here ran into a "nest" that had been brought out by the new, warm spring weather. A half-dozen of the rattlers were killed. There was one papa snake in the bunch almost five feet long. He had nine rattles.

EXCITING TIME EXPECTED

New City Council at Redlands Plans Shape-up of Municipal Affairs, it is Rumored

REDLANDS, May 3.—Some very exciting sessions of the Redlands City Council are presaged by persistent rumors that there has been a split in the ranks of the Law Observance League and that two of the men elected to the Council on that ticket have "been read out," the remaining two forming a coalition with Theodore Krumm, holdover member of the Council, to control affairs of the city.

W. L. Fowler and H. Earl Cromas are the two who, it is said, have been left out in the cold because they refused to "line up" on certain plans for a shake-up of city officials. Krumm on election night seemed destined to two years of lonely service, but the split has placed him in an enviable position where he can trade with both factions. It is predicted, however, that he will place with the faction wanting to get rid of Walter Thomas, Chief of Police; Walter Hartzell, City Attorney; George Hinckley, City Engineer, and M. E. Armstrong, Building Inspector.

At least, the next meeting of the Council is expected to be an interesting one. There has been considerable discussion on the streets of the coalition, since it was this move which elected N. Leo Leland Mayor, although Fowler was re-elected to the Council and had the highest vote of any.

The cause of the break in the Law Observance League ranks is unknown, except to officials of the league and the Councilmen involved. One explanation involved City Marshal Thomas. It is said that league officials insisted Thomas must go, but that Councilman Fowler said he would reserve his judgment until some candidate against Thomas appeared and some proof was produced that such a change would be wise and the city gain better law enforcement. Because he would not commit himself to "take the program" laid down by league officers he is said to have been cast out. No explanation is available for reading Cromas out.

State Congress Holds Session at Riverside

RIVERSIDE, May 3.—Mrs. R. L. Cardiff, State president of the California Congress of Parents and Teachers, arrived in Riverside today preparatory to the opening of the State convention here next week. Other members of the State board will arrive on Sunday, in order to be here in time for the State board meeting commencing at 9 o'clock Monday morning, and lasting all day, at the Mission Inn.

On Monday night the Riverside P.-T.A. Council will hold a reception to delegates at the Memorial Auditorium. Refreshments will be served during the evening in the patio of the auditorium, providing it does not rain.

Regular convention sessions will open on Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock in the Memorial Auditorium, and will last throughout Friday. Every morning and evening business and program sessions will take place at the auditorium; in the afternoons conferences and study sessions will be held in various churches and other meeting places of the city.

Among the national and State officers expected at the convention will be Mrs. Hugh Bradford, past State President, and now third vice-president of the national organization. Mrs. Bradford is also candidate for the national presidency. Mrs. W. A. Price, candidate for the State presidency and now vice-president of the State organization, will also be here, as will all the State officers.

Editor Wins First Prize

VENTURA, May 3.—J. Bruce Mendenhall of Moorpark has been declared victor in the 1930 eisteddfod literature contests with his poem, "The Tanglecoated Horse." Mendenhall is associate editor of the Moorpark Enterprise.

Second prize went to Merle J. Rogers, Ventura attorney and former Superior Court judge. His poem was "When the East Wind Comes."

Mrs. Flora Udall Pickard of Oxnard won third place with her entry, "Stars."

Winner in the adult comedy competition held last night at the Oxnard Union High School was the alumni association of that school. They received a grading of 97 for their presentation of "The Eligible Mr. Bangs."

Yesterday's program officially rang down the curtain on Ventura county's sixth annual eisteddfod. Rural school chorus competitions were held most of the day at the Oxnard High School.

Officers Find Mystery Can

VENTURA, May 3.—Sheriff's officers today are investigating the find of a tin can containing six or eight bottles of what they believe may turn out to be explosive acid, found yesterday afternoon underneath one of the buildings of the American Beet Sugar Company at Oxnard.

The material was discovered by E. P. Fairbanks, field manager of the sugar company, who immediately notified the authorities. Deputy Ed Hearne brought the can and its bottles, which were padded carefully with cotton, to the chemical laboratory at the Courthouse for analysis.

STANFORD STUDENTS HONOR PASADENA BOY

PASADENA, May 3.—Stanley A. Milne, son of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Milne of 774 East Villa street, has been appointed manager of the Stanford University student body for the year 1930-1931, it was learned here today.

Young Milne is a senior and is editor of the university annual, The Quad. He is majoring in journalism. In 1925, he was editor of the Pasadena High School paper.

His new duties as student body manager include the handling of all student finances.

Fisherman Has Wild Escapade in Open Boat

VENTURA, May 3.—Adrift alone for two days on the Pacific Ocean between here and Anacapa Island, in an open twenty-seven-foot fishing boat minus its propellor.

That was the experience of a man about 60 years of age, name not learned, who tied up here last night after drifting to shore at Pierpont Bay.

According to men at the Ventura Wharf and Warehouse Company, at whose docks the boat was anchored, the man says he was fishing quite a distance from shore, when in trying to start his motor he discovered the propellor was gone.

He had two fishing nets out at the time, and they are still there, for all he knows. He claims to have waved at one passing boat, but those on board seemed to take his frantic gestures as friendly greeting, waved back and passed on.

The lone fisherman is trying to get word to his base at San Pedro for a new propellor.

MONTEBELLO WOMAN'S CLUB NAMES BOARD

MONTEBELLO, May 3. — Mrs. Walter F. Malone was yesterday re-elected president of the Montebello Woman's Club.

Other new executives elected by the members were Mrs. W. W. Clark, vice-president; Mrs. Ethel Brown, recording secretary; Mrs. Fred Voorhees, corresponding secretary; Mrs. I. W. Whaley, financial secretary; Mrs. I. M. Yerian, treasurer, with three new directors, Mrs. Jane M. Schaak, Mrs. Caspare Rea and C. Y. James.

Always prominent in the club and social life of the community, Mrs. Malone has just completed a most successful club year. Mrs. Malone also attained, a few months ago, the honor of being the first woman to be elected to the directorate of the Chamber of Commerce and now carries the title of first vice-president. She is the wife of Walter F. Malone, general manager of the Simons Brick Company, a director of the Chamber of Commerce and a member of the City Council.

OWENSMOUTH TENDERS FIRE STATION SITE

OWENSMOUTH, May 3.—The offer of a free site here for a fire station has been approved by the Los Angeles Fire Commission, which will urge the City Council to take action at once. The offer of the site carries a proviso that the City Council appropriate $39,500 for the building and equipment of the station.

The site is valued at $7000. About a year ago a similar site was offered by Reseda, four miles east of here. It has not yet been approved by the Fire Commission. It is likely now that the west end of San Fernando Valley will acquire a paid branch fire department. When a fire occurs in this section it necessitates a ten-mile run of fire engines at Van Nuys.

AIRPORT TO STAGE OFFICIAL OPENING

BURBANK, May 3.—Following the aerial battle maneuvers that recently were staged at the United Airport near here, it is announced today by Thomas F. Hamilton, president, that the port will have its official opening on Saturday and Sunday, the 10th and 11th inst. The airport is to be further improved with the immediate construction of three more large steel and concrete hangars. Lighting equipment of the latest sort also is being rushed. The field has an area of 243 acres, most of which is planted to alfalfa and other greenery to obviate the dust caused by the rising and landing of planes.

CHAMPIONS ENTER CONTEST

Event at Anaheim Excites Interest

Beat the World at Packing

Marjorie Richards and Eve Christenson, former winners of the world championship orange-packing contest held in conjunction with the California Valencia Orange Show at Anaheim, will compete again this year in the championship contest. They are shown with the trophy that is awarded, together with hundreds of dollars in cash prizes to the winners. The orange show this year will be held May 22 to June 1 and the contest will be run off in heats on several successive days.

City to Help County Fight Argentine Ants

SAN FERNANDO, May 3.—This city will bear its part of the expense of carrying on a campaign by the County Agricultural Department to rid San Fernando of Argentine ants, following the decision of the Council to co-operate fully with the county agricultural commissioner in the fight to exterminate the pests.

According to F. A. Pomeroy, Councilman, the city appropriated $300 last year to aid in the fight and only a part of this sum was used, the rest being available for a continuance of the campaign. Pomeroy said that citrus packing-houses were contributing thousands of dollars to the war chest to spread ant poison throughout the valley and urged fullest co-operation of this city. San Fernando, he said, has been found to be the most densely populated part of the valley so far as Argentine ants are concerned.

Money appropriated will be used to purchase tin containers of poison to be placed in trees in all parts of the city.

Fugitive Held in Canadian City

SANTA ANA, May 3.—Sheriff Jernigan and Dist.-Atty. West of Orange county left yesterday for Toronto, Ont., to bring back William W. Ross, Santa Ana motor truck dealer, who was arrested in the Canadian city on a charge of forging a check for $8000. The complainant is the Federal Finance Company of this city.

Indictment of Ross by the Los Angeles county grand jury has been asked by the Long Beach branch of the Bank of Italy. Asserted fraudulent transactions by Ross are said to have totaled $300,000, with the Long Beach bank and the Santa Ana finance company as the victims.

Through a telephone call to his Santa Ana home last Thursday night Ross was traced to the King Edward Hotel in Toronto, where he was said to have been living under the name of Louis Brown. He has waived extradition, the Toronto police have notified the Orange county authorities.

TRACK PERMIT GRANTED

RESEDA, May 3. — The Pacific Electric today was granted permission to build a spur track across Gault street, between Darby and Canby avenues. The new track will be used in facilitating the shipments of perishable freights.

ANAHEIM, May 3.—Manager George W. Reid of the California Valencia Orange Show today announced the prizes, rules and regulations of the annual contest to decide the world's orange-packing championship contest, which will be held at Anaheim starting the second night of the Valencia Orange Show, May 23.

The prize money this year, besides the silver trophies which will be given, has been increased more than 200 per cent. Money prizes for the first ten teams will amount to $1000, $700 more than last year.

The prize for the world's championship packing team is $350, and the trophy which represents supremacy. Second prize is $200, third $100, fourth $80, fifth $70, sixth, $60, seventh, $50, eighth $40, ninth $30, tenth $20.

It is expected that the champions of the past three years, Marjorie Richards, Eva Christenson, and Jessie Wheldon, will again enter and it is also expected that the speed of former years will be cut down considerably, as thirty teams of two girls each are all that will be allowed to enter, and competition is expected to be stiff for the larger prizes.

All entries must be in the hands of the management of the California Valencia Orange Show by the 15th inst., together with the entrance fee of $20 a team. This year the contest will be held in five heats, one each on the 22rd, 24th, 25th, 26th, 27th, 28th, and 29th inst., giving all who attend the show a chance to see the packers at work.

The rules are similar to those of last year: the size of oranges will be 216's, the size of wrappers No. 10, and the contest is to be judged on the contents of two packed boxes only. In the contest for the packing-house trophy, the scores of packers will be considered as a team, but their individual scores will be recognized in the judging for the world's championship. The contest will be supervised by official timers, and the score of each contestant will be announced daily.

Only in case of tie scores of packers will a final elimination contest be held. Point scores on a scale of 1000, are: Speed, 400; neatness, compactness, general appearance, 168, twist, 96; wrap, 120; prints, 216.

The fancy packing contest, with three prizes totaling $150, will also be held this year as it has been for four years. Contestants are allowed to select their own design, using special wrappers and ready-wrapped oranges if they want to. Judging will be on speed and neatness as well as cleverness and originality of design.

NEW RESEDA CHURCH HAS FIRST WEDDING

RESEDA, May 3.—Fred A. Hake, Jr., and Miss Stella Veiriing were married tonight in the new Shierry & Walling mortuary chapel which also is the place of worship of the newly formed Reseda Episcopal Church. They are the first couple to be married in the chapel.

OXNARD REMAINS SIGNLESS

Highway Commission Halls Work of Chamber of Commerce Over Roads Controlled by State Board

OXNARD, May 3.—Everything was running smoothly for the Oxnard Chamber of Commerce and the community of Oxnard in the matter of erecting two Neon electric signs at the north and south city limits today until an order came from the California Highway Commission ordering the work stopped because the chamber has no permit.

As a result of the situation which arose today the city finds itself in the peculiar situation of having city limits in which the City Council has no jurisdiction at all as far as the State highway right of way is concerned.

The signs were being erected within the city limits on a verbal permit from the highway department, which stated that no permit was necessary so long as the signs are to be erected inside the city limits. Official sanction from the city of Oxnard and City Engineer E. C. Imus was obtained and the work started.

It seems that the jurisdiction of the highway commission extends within the city limits both north and south to points in the neighborhood of 1200 or 1300 feet. The highway commission states that the signs cannot be hung beyond their jurisdiction line although the territory in question is well within the city limits.

The matter was gone into carefully today at a special conference of city officials and will be fully threshed out at the Council meeting next Tuesday night. The city has one of two courses, either to move the poles already in place nearer to the business section or extend the city's jurisdiction over the State highway to the city limits proper, taking over supervision and maintenance as well. The question has raised considerable doubt among members of the local board and prominent Oxnarders, and the matter will be watched with interest on Tuesday.

A civic celebration for the turning on of the two signs tomorrow night has been called off and all progress halted. The two signs were today sent back to the Los Angeles makers where they will repose pending a final settlement of the entanglement.

Among the dead girl's effects was a clipping from a Tacoma newspaper, illustrated by her picture, and stating that she, as representative of the Junior Advertising Club of Tacoma, had won first prize with a skit presented at the Chamber of Commerce convention in San Francisco. She played the leading role in her skit. Friends said she was a graduate of the University of Washington, and a member of Pi Omicron Sorority. She was 22 years of age, and was the twenty-ninth suicide to plunge from the Colorado-street bridge to death.

Pasadena Span Adds Another Victim to List

PASADENA, May 3.—An autopsy was conducted today on the body of Esther E. Estep, who leaped to death from the Colorado-street bridge yesterday. Vital organs were sent to the county chemist for a chemical analysis to ascertain if there were traces of chloroform. This action was taken because Dr. Trosengaard of Pasadena Emergency Hospital said he detected the odor of chloroform about the girl's mouth when she was rushed in a dying condition to the hospital.

No inquest is contemplated. The post-mortem examination at the Reynolds & Eberle mortuary revealed that the girl's spine had been fractured and one lung burst by concussion in the fall from the bridge. The body will be sent to her mother, Mrs. M. V. Estep, 1208 East Thirty-fifth street, Tacoma, Wash.

Police expressed belief that the case was one of suicide, and added that they had been informed that the girl's father went insane and committed suicide some years ago. Friends said yesterday that Miss Estep was in good spirits and breakfasted heartily yesterday before leaving home at 268 South Larchmont street, Los Angeles, to go to work at the brokerage offices of Burcham & Co., Los Angeles. Other friends told police that Miss Estep quarreled during recent weeks with a Los Angeles man.

Real Estate Salesmen to be Examined

POMONA, May 3.—The Pomona Valley Real Estate Board today announced that examinations for real estate salesmen and brokers' licenses would be held in the Pomona High School at 1 p.m. Thursday under direction of George Shaw, deputy in charge of examinations, in order to give all valley real estate men the opportunity to obtain temporary and permanent licenses.

According to Mr. Shaw, the local examinations may be taken by real estate dealers residing in the following districts: Pomona, Ontario, Upland, Chino, La Verne, San Dimas, Glendora, Walnut, Spadra, Riverside, Cucamonga, Claremont and other near-by towns.

He also called attention to the fact that all temporary licenses issued January 1 will expire on June 31, making it compulsory for all holding these to complete their final examinations in order to qualify before the time limit expires.

Flood of Water Makes River of State Highway

VENTURA, May 3.—About 500 feet of the State highway east of Ventura was flooded and near-by fields were covered with water yesterday afternoon when the Montalvo Mutual Water Company's reservoir on the Jae Peters ranch broke.

The Peters ranch, just off the main highway on the Saticoy road, was not damaged, while near-by property belonging to James Dunn, Fred Pidduck and E. P. Cook received a drenching of about three inches of water.

Sheriff's officers were called to the scene to direct traffic over the flooded highway.

According to Walter Duncan of the water company, the break occurred after the water in the uncemented reservoir ate through a gopher hole. About eight feet of the bank was torn out, but was dammed up before more than three feet of the water in the reservoir had escaped.

PIONEERS PREPARE FOR ANNUAL PICNIC

CHINO, May 3. — The greatest round-up of pioneers ever undertaken in Chino Valley is under way this week. Several committees are at work locating the addresses of former residents of the valley to invite them to the annual picnic reunion of the Pioneer Association of Chino Valley.

The pioneer picnic is one of the outstanding events of the year for Chino residents. Old-timers of the valley who have moved to eastern cities make it a point to return for the picnic and most all cities of Southern California contribute pioneers for the event. All who established residence in Chino prior to 1908 are more extensively sought.

An all-day program is planned in Chino City Park.

Grand Jury Goes Deeper Into Affairs of Land-Buyers' Syndicate Under Investigation at San Diego

SAN DIEGO, May 3.—With a number of subpoenas in preparation by the District Attorney's office it is expected the county grand jury will be exceptionally busy next week. The jury is scheduled to meet Tuesday morning. However the meeting of the inquisitors Tuesday is not expected to be devoted to the affairs of California Land Buyers' Syndicate. With some probability of an indictment being voted Tuesday afternoon the grand jurors are understood to be considering a charge of forgery based on all investigation recently announced by the police department.

Wednesday and Thursday may be devoted to questioning of witnesses in the land buyers' probe from which recess had been taken because of illness of Katherine Dempsey, syndicate secretary. The grand jury may round out its probe late Thursday, unless Ed Fletcher, Jr., president of the syndicate, is granted the hearing he petitioned for.

This final phase of the investigation may require calling of the grand jury Friday morning.

Result of the land buyer's probe is shrouded in uncertainty. Caused apparently by charges filed by four plaintiffs in civil suits in which the plaintiffs sought varying amounts of damages on the ground that the syndicate officials violated terms of a State certificate to sell stock the probe was to determine whether the civil charges might constitute a basis for criminal action. A voluminous report on financial study of the concern was filed with the grand jurors by the office of the State Corporation Commissioner.

WOMAN'S ESTATE DWINDLED

Speculations Said to Have Wiped Out $100,000 of Supposed Fortune

SAN DIEGO, May 3.—A petition asking probate of the estate left by Mrs. Sara Upton Edwards, La Mesa widow, who died April 20, not long after having suffered a loss of more than $100,000 in securities, according to a complaint reach the District Attorney, was filed in Superior Court today. The estate now amounts to no more than $20,000, according to the petitioner, Daniel L. Upton, a nephew, living in Los Angeles.

Upton recites that Daniel L. Wilkinson, another nephew of Mrs. Edwards, had been named executor of the estate, but declines to act. The will lists fifteen nephews, great-nephews and grand-nephews and twenty nieces, great-nieces and grand-nieces as heirs. Not one of the heirs lives in San Diego, however. Kellogg B. Finley of La Mesa and the Central Congregational Church of La Mesa are listed as devisees, the amount not being stated in the petition for probate.

While Mrs. Edwards, up to a few months ago, possessed a fortune believed to have approximated $130,000, her estate now consists of real property valued at $15,000, and securities valued at $500, according to the petitioner's estimate.

Her loss was attributed to misplaced trust in stock and bond manipulators.

FACT AND COMMENT

Los Angeles architects and builders who depend upon the prosperity of the Southland for their own business, should reciprocate whenever possible by specifying locally-made products for buildings which they design.

There has been displayed either a lack of knowledge as to what these products are or thoughtlessness in specifications for many local structures. Goods made in the East have been given preference in a number of cases where local products were equal both as to price and quality.

No better indorsement of California-made goods could be given than for California people to use them. Money spent for local products remains here, provides work for the unemployed and adds greatly to the prosperous condition of the Southland. It behooves architects and contractors to bear this in mind.

The Chamber of Commerce at the present time is exerting every effort to stimulate business. One form of this campaign is an educational endeavor to apprise citizens as to the range of our manufactured articles. Such information will be given with pleasure by chamber officials.

Evidence of Growth

Probably no better evidence of the stability of business in Los Angeles and of bright prospects for the future can be shown than the action of large mercantile and food establishments, national in scope, who have entered the local field during the past year to a greater extent than in any previous twelvemonth period.

Announcement has followed announcement in rapid succession during recent months of these concerns opening not one but dozens of stores throughout the city. They have taken long leases on property and spent large sums of money here in remodeling and in building warehouses. Additional sums have been spent for equipment.

Before these concerns select cities in which to locate and choose sites in these cities for stores, they conduct exhaustive investigations. Long experience guides them in their selections and the selection of Los Angeles for extensive development in this respect may be regarded as an indication of the increasing regard eastern capital is holding for this locality.

San Gabriel Valley Cities to Advertise

MONROVIA, May 3. (Exclusive)—Plans for an extensive advertising campaign whereby virtues of the San Gabriel Valley will be publicised are now being worked out by an executive committee representing three valley cities. The personnel includes Mayor George Maxfield of Covina, Mayor A. L. Meier, Azusa, and Charles A. Baker of El Monte.

Tentative plans call for a fund of $40,000, of which $10,000 to $12,000 will be contributed by the various municipalities and the balance financed among corporations, banks and loan organizations over a period of three years.

Beach Resort Frontage For Sale as Whole

Extensive development of Seal Beach ocean frontage for amusement resort purposes is anticipated, following the offering for sale of 4000 feet of beach land there, announced last week. It is believed that this property, offered as a whole, constitutes the largest section of resort beach land recently placed on the market. Approximately 600 lots and fifteen acres of unsubdivided land is included in the offer, in addition to a pier, bathhouse, dance hall and other buildings.

The property, now owned by the Bayside Land Company, originally was controlled by three stockholders, two of whom have died while the third is forced to retire from business by illness.

CASH DEALS IN BUSINESS SITES TOLD

All Properties Bought Will be Developed for Chain Stores

Cash deals in business properties, amounting to $305,000, were consummated during the past week by Burton & Co., according to B. A. Burton, president.

Trabue Pittman purchased three business sites including 120 feet of unimproved frontage on El Prado, Torrance, adjoining the building to be erected for Newberry's store, for approximately $40,000. The unimproved corner of Fifty - seventh street and Mesa Drive, directly opposite the property of the Ralph's Grocery Store, was obtained by Pittman for approximately $40,000. Another of his purchases was the seventy-five feet fronting on Angelus Mesa near Fifty-fourth street to be improved with a building structure, the total investment approximating $50,000.

Burton also reports sale of the corner of Vermont and Kingswell, improved with a two-story building. The total investment amounts to $75,000. The building is to be remodeled and leased to a chain store. Mr. Burton declares that all the aforementioned properties will be developed for chain stores. Leases and rentals negotiated during the past week by Burton and Company exceed $50,000.

April's Record Loan Demands Show Activity

Indicative of an increase in building operations, a record demand for loans during the past month, one of the most active periods in the history of the State Mutual Building and Loan Association, is reported by C. H. Wade, president.

During April 263 loans were made, amounting to $662,556, as compared with 203 in the corresponding month of 1929, amounting to $544,650.

During the first quarter of 1930, State Mutual made 476 loans, aggregating $1,336,500, as compared with 658 loans totaling $1,728,421, during the last quarter of 1929. The size of the loans averaged $2500 for April and $2800 for the first quarter. Since January 1, the association has made 739 loans amounting to $1,999,056. This represents an average of about eight loans for each business day since the first of the year.

Bank Appraisal Group to Meet

George L. Schmutz, realty appraiser and lecturer for the extension division of the University of Southern California, will speak on "Methods of Appraising Real Estate" at the regular meeting of the Los Angeles Bank Appraisers Association to be held at 6:15 p.m. next Thursday at the Los Angeles City Club, 833 South Spring street, R. S. Fuller, secretary of the association, announced yesterday.

APPRAISAL GROUP WILL BE FORMED

Invitation Sent Realtors to Attend Meeting for Organization

Organization of a permanent appraisal club will be perfected at a meeting to be held in the Los Angeles Realty Board Building on Grand avenue on the evening of the 12th inst., according to D. E. Lane, who as temporary chairman has sent out invitations for a number of realtors to attend.

The formation of the proposed group is an outgrowth of a meeting held at the Roosevelt Hotel in Hollywood recently, when more than seventy men especially interested in appraisal work were present.

The appraisal club will be formed of realtors who have been members of the various appraisal classes held in and around Los Angeles during the past two or three years. The organization committee is composed of representatives of these groups from all sections of the city. It is the hope of Chairman Lane that through mutual co-operation and a further study of appraisal practice, a helpful adjunct to the real estate profession can be evolved.

Those who will be present at the initial meeting are D. E. Lane, chairman; Richard Willis, chairman of the Realty Board appraisal committee; Frank Buckley, B. L. Vickery, Arthur McDevitt, Tom Mason, Stanley McMichael, George Schmutz, Edgar Selecman, Ayers DuBois, Charles Shattuck, E. A. Christy, W. L. Pollard, R. T. Tustin, Frank Greve, Leroy Ackley and George Shaw.

Revenue Data Shows Steady State Growth

California corporations reported gross income totaling $6,621,294,392 to the Federal government for the calendar year 1927, as compared with $6,561,949,228 for the previous year. This is the latest available Internal Revenue Bureau report. In 1927 a total of 11,610 corporations reported, as against 19,901 in 1926.

Corporations which had net income showed gross earnings of $5,349,886,876, as compared with $5,217,404,101 for the previous year. "These government figures show that California's big business is steadily forging ahead," according to a survey by G. R. Dexter, president of the Bank of Hollywood.

Aviation Firm Official Will Address Group

Aviation's effect on Southern California will be the subject of an address at the Southwest branch, Los Angeles Realty Board hall, 4143 South Figueroa street, tomorrow night, according to A. C. Hoodenpyle, chairman of the entertainment committee. Hugh Shippey of the Western Air Express traffic department, will be the speaker.

Mr. Hoodenpyle said that the position attained by Southern California and Los Angeles in particular in the aviation world was not generally understood.

OWENSMOUTH, May 3. (Exclusive)—The Owensmouth postoffice building at 21511 Sherman Way is nearing completion. The work is being done by Charles Lyon. All of the local postoffice equipment will be transferred into the new structure by the middle of next month, it is announced by Postmaster Frank Pesler.

HOME BUILDING GAINS IMPETUS

Almost Half City's April Values Residential

Other Municipalities Report Similar Conditions

General Construction Work Declines on Coast

BY JAMES L. DAVIS

Home building in Los Angeles has begun the long-predicted increase. During the month of April 45.5 per cent of the valuation of all building permits was for homes or apartment-houses and a similar condition is reported by many other cities of the Southland.

During the month of April new accommodations were provided for 1123 families, while during March new family accommodations totaled 992. Last month a total of $3,185,390 was spent for homes and apartments, as compared to $2,689,946 in March. March home and apartment permits were 37.7 per cent of the total issued.

REDUCED VALUES

Building operations along the Coast in general during April were in keeping with the present condition throughout the country. Reductions in the value of permits granted as compared to the corresponding month one year ago were recorded in the majority of cities, but twenty-two showed increases compared to April of 1929. These cities were Santa Monica, San Marino, North Hollywood, Alhambra, Bakersfield, Santa Ana, Wilmington, San Pedro, Culver City, Newport Beach, Pomona, El Centro, Inglewood, Calexico, Brawley, Santa Maria, Manhattan Beach, Hermosa Beach, Arcadia, Oceanside, San Clemente and South Pasadena.

Of the northern cities along the Coast all showed declines in building permits with the exception of Sacramento. In the south, Phoenix reported gains in valuations of permits for April compared to one year ago. A complete table of permits issued in cities along the Coast and Southern California is found elsewhere in this issue.

LOS ANGELES PERMITS

In Los Angeles fifty-five permits were granted for frame and masonry apartment-houses of a value totaling $1,055,100. There were 368 permits granted for one-story dwellings to a value of $1,013,151. Permits for all classes of single dwellings totaled 433 for a value of $1,644,010. Double residences totaled eighty-two, valued at $486,280.

Forty permits for mercantile buildings were granted, the value being $336,174. Nine office-building permits totaled $1,353,900. Two schools cost $171,000, according to the monthly report of J. L. Backus, superintendent of buildings in Los Angeles.

Among the larger permits issued during the month were the following: Addition to office building for Harry J. Once Overcrowded Ranks of Southern California Real Estate Salesmen Thin

THOUSANDS DISCOURAGED BY EXAMINATION PLAN

Many Former License Holders Fail Thus Far to Qualify Permanently While Others Abandon Vocation

The probability that Southern California will have approximately two-thirds fewer real-estate salesmen by the close of the present year than during 1929 loomed yesterday when it became known that 14,000 holders of real-estate licenses have failed thus far to qualify for permanent license under the new examination plan of the California Real Estate Commission.

Since the law providing for examination of real estate salesmen was passed, but 6000 applicants have appeared in Southern California, exclusive of San Diego and Imperial counties, for examination. Of this number 4000 faced the test during the last five months of 1929. Two thousand have been examined this year and of this number one-half have applied for examination during the month just closed.

NEW SET OF QUESTIONS

The rush of applicants during April is attributed by deputy commissioners to the fact that a new set of questions is to comprise examinations beginning this month. These questions are declared to be much more difficult than in the past, consequently the rush to pass the examination before the new quiz becomes effective.

During 1929 there were approximately 20,000 real estate salesmen's licenses granted in Southern California exclusive of San Diego and Imperial counties. Thus far but 6000 applicants have taken the examination for license, the others either abandoning the field or now operating on temporary licenses. The last of these will expire by July 1. Temporary licenses in the future will be issued only to those who have not previously been engaged in the real estate business here and they must obtain permanent license within six months.

VOCATION ABANDONED

Real estate commissioners declare that the falling off in numbers of realty salesmen is due to a large number abandoning the occupation and to the examination feature itself. In the past large numbers of men and women in all manner of vocations have held real estate salesmen's licenses so as to turn into commissions information they might obtain regarding prospective purchasers of property.

These license-holders worked on the plan of passing this information on to brokers who would follow up and make the sale, giving them a share of the commission. The license was necessary because the realty law prohibits the granting of commissions to persons not holding a salesman's license. Inability to pass the test is said to have caused many persons in this class to abandon their realty endeavors.

It is reported that of all applicants who appeared for examination, approximately 95 per cent have passed the test.

WESTERN GOODS BOUGHT BY CITY

automobile, beauty and other exhibits. Los Angeles keep in close touch with the rest of the West. In this connection it is interesting to note that California leads all other States as regards the number of tourists traveling in Montana and that 50 per cent of Washington's summer tourists are Californians.

ENORMOUS PURCHASES

Indicative of the size of the Los Angeles 1929 shopping bag and its relationship to the States listed, is the fact that of the aggregate sum spent for food products, $15,336,836.30 went for butter, cheese, eggs and dressed poultry; $14,920,440.50 for 744,725 head of cattle, calves, sheep and hogs; $10,983,000 for 3000 carloads of flour, wheat and bran and $4,838,230 for 3122 carloads of fruits and vegetables. Here are a few high-light purchases:

Los Angeles took $8,232,716 worth of dairy and poultry products and 2666 carloads of potatoes valued at $2,666,000 from Idaho. This city last year bought 21 per cent of Arizona's live-stock production. From Montana came twenty-five carloads of acid phosphate and eighty-three carloads of copper wire. There were 155,985 hogs bought from Colorado for $2,495,280. Los Angeles bought 1,200,000,000 feet of lumber from Oregon and Washington for $30,000,000. From Utah came 4,987,609 pounds of butter valued at $1,971,043.60.

One of the important developments is the strengthening of the trade contact between Los Angeles and Texas, which promises to show a larger value every year hereafter.

Los Angeles last year bought the following commodities from the eleven States mentioned:

Arizona—$2,497,707.05 worth of food products comprising 295,772 pounds of dairy and poultry products valued at $109,096.55, also 212 carloads of fruits and vegetables worth $209,330; live stock aggregating 71,542 head valued at $2,179,290.50; also 22,550,000 pounds of copper at $4,059,000 and $60,000 worth of wool.

Colorado—$3,100,455.15 worth of food products comprising $496,675.65 worth of dairy and poultry products, thirty-eight carloads of fruits and vegetables valued at $31,600 and 158,608 head of live stock valued at $2,972,179.50.

Nevada—$810,923.10 worth of food products comprising $271,634.60 worth of dairy and poultry products, 226 caloads of fruits and vegetables at $141,600 and 17,347 head of live stock at $397,688.50.

New Mexico—$1,033,537.35 worth of food products that included $85,006.35 worth of dairy and poultry products, forty-one carloads of fruits and vegetables worth $24,600 and 43,990 head of live stock at $923,931.

Sales Manager Appointed for Developments

Charles E. Lindblade announces that Charles E. Gillett has been appointed general sales director for the Charles E. Lindblade Company and will devote his entire time to the furthering of sales at University City and University Art Colony, adjacent to the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios in Culver City.

Gillett previously headed a large sales organization which sold many millions of dollars' worth of property in the Los Angeles industrial section.

The Charles E. Lindblade Company has recently instituted an intensive sales campaign in University City in conjunction with the improvement and building expansion program which is now under way. The development of the University Art Colony is declared to have been aided greatly by the recent expansion program of the Fox Film Corporation.

Memorial Dormitory Completed

Building Designed for Girls

Originally planned by E. L. Doheny, Jr., and carried to completion by his father, the Doheny Memorial Dormitory, for girls of the University of California at Los Angeles, has recently been completed. Stanton, Reed & Hibbard designed the structure, which was built by the Doheny organization. Quarters are provided in both single and double accommodations for 104 girls, the building rising on three sides of a patio planted with shrubbery and flowers. A large reception room with beamed ceiling is an important part of the plan. The dormitory is close to the shopping district of the Janss Investment Corporation's Westwood Village development, where fifty-six merchants have established themselves in the past year.

FOOD SHOW IN CHICAGO PROJECTED

Market for California Products May be Formed in Loop District

California food products soon may be on exhibition to tempt Chicago buyers if plans of the Woolworth Building Company, sponsors of the Chicago Loop Merchandise Mart, materialize.

This concern plans to devote a large space in its building at State and Washington streets in the Chicago Loop district, to the display of food products of this State. Joseph I. Thompson, representing the company, and C. L. Seagraves, general colonization agent of the Santa Fe Railway, are in Los Angeles seeking to interest growers in the project.

The sponsors of the display point out that the exhibition of these products in Chicago would provide additional markets for California-grown foods and that the program eventually includes the exhibition of local fresh vegetables.

FACT AND COMMENT

comers to the Southland should not be misled by the promise of "free lots" often offered by real estate subdividers. These promises on their face appear very appealing but often lead the recipient into difficulties.

Various methods are followed by subdividers in their "free lot" gifts. In some cases transfer charges are assessed and these generally include a sum equal to the worth of the lot. In other cases the deed is actually given outright but the lot is worthless for any purpose other than the beautification of the desert.

In this latter case company salesmen generally follow up the leads thus obtained for the purpose of selling other property or of trading the "gift lot" for more valuable land elsewhere.

The California Real Estate Commissioner has investigated scores of such cases and his reports are to the effect that the beneficiary of the "free lot" gets "just what he paid for it."

Phoenix Plans Zoning of City

PHOENIX, April 26. (Exclusive) City zoning is near at hand in Phoenix after several years of work of a special commission headed by W. G. Hartranft. For the past sixty days the plans have been open for public inspection at the City Hall, with report that few objections have been maintained against the proposed establishment of limits for industries and business.

National Program Relation to be Discussed

Architects to be Guests of Building Industry

Gov. Young, Chamber President to Speak

The building material industry will be host to the architects of Southern California at a luncheon to be given next Tuesday in the Architects' Building Material Exhibit rooms, Fifth and Figueroa streets, John C. Austin, architect and president of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce, is to be the guest of honor, and Gov. C. C. Young will be the principal speaker.

JOHN C. AUSTIN.

The purpose of the luncheon is to discuss the California building program in its relation to the national program that has been planned by President Hoover. Gov. Young will talk on this subject and will give an outline of the campaign as it pertains to California.

GOVERNOR YOUNG

Mr. Austin will discuss the present building conditions from the standpoint of the architect. He has said, "As president of the Chamber of Commerce, I can say that not only the members, but the architects and contractors as well, are bending every effort toward creating and carrying forward work that was originally planned for some time in the future. This is in accord with President Hoover's national stabilization program, and will alleviate the unemployment situation and better business conditions in general."

Among the guests at the luncheon will be Harold C. Chambers, president of the Southern California Chapter of the American Institute of Architects; Sumner Spaulding, president of the Los Angeles Architectural Club; Edwin Bergstrom, president of the Allied Architects' Association; Horatio W. Bishop, president of the Architects' League of Hollywood; Edwin L. Westberg, president of the Pasadena Architectural Club; Roy Seldon Price, president of the Certified Architects of Beverly Hills, and William H. Wheeler, Gordon B. Kaufmann and Eugene Weston, directors of the American Institute of Architects.

The consolidation brings into one organization property interests the assessed valuation of which is in excess of $100,000,000. This combined group represents 95 per cent of all the large office and loft buildings in Los Angeles, in addition to a few individual buildings, in the same category, in Pasadena, Long Beach, Glendale and Santa Monica.

Development of State Farm Land by City Workers Foreseen

MIDDLE-AGED EMPLOYEES ALL PLAN RURAL RETIREMENT

Answers to Questionnaire of State Real Estate Association Disclose Reasons for Return Movement

Rural areas of California in coming years may anticipate the unparalleled development that they have ever experienced, according to farm land experts and students of eastern industrial conditions. A decided trend is declared to be apparent among industrial workers of the large eastern cities to locate on small farms in California, the experts declare.

Behind the tendency of factory executives to speed up production of machine-driving plants, increase efficiency of workers and supplant older men with more active employees is attributed this "back to the land" movement.

SALES INCREASE DUE

Answers to a questionnaire recently issued by the farm lands division of the California Real Estate Association disclose that of six-teen farm land brokers, fifty-per cent say the tendency of the times is for increase in number. That farm land buyers are coming from the cities was indicated by forty-one replies.

The report of the State association declared that the chief motive of people to buy farms now is to use them as a home and a haven. Other reasons advanced are the improvement of marketing conditions, lack of employmens and unfavorable conditions in cities, drop in the stock market, the desire to be independent, a change in economic conditions in the country, avocados, the call for development of orchards, the market better stabilized, building conditions improving, and increase in real-estate sales.

According to C. L. Seagraves, Chicago, general colonization agent of the Santa Fe Railway, in Los Angeles last week, thousands of middle-aged workingmen in the East, anticipating their retirement from active factory work, are contemplating the purchase of a plot of ground in California on which they may spend the remainder of their lives.

"The industrial situation today in many cases is such that the younger generation is crowding out the older workers," Seagraves states. "Many of these older men have anticipated such a condition and have been patiently saving their money until they now have from $5000 to $15,000 to provide for their maintenance in their declining years.

"They realize that their savings are not sufficient to last throughout their entire remaining life and want some place where they can settle down to enjoy life in comfort and at the same time earn a partial living. California is the mecca of many of these men and as they realize that California employers also desire younger men, their thoughts are of a small farm in suburban communities.

"In a large number of cases factory workers once lived on a farm, the lure of high wages in the cities drawing them to industrial endeavor in their younger days. Farm life and farm work are not new to them. It is natural that they should be inclined to a return to farm life.

"While in many sections of the United States there has been a marked development in industrialized farming on extensive tracts of land that condition is not likely to hold true of California. This State is due for development of the small farm because of the ideal climatic conditions which draw thousands of people here."

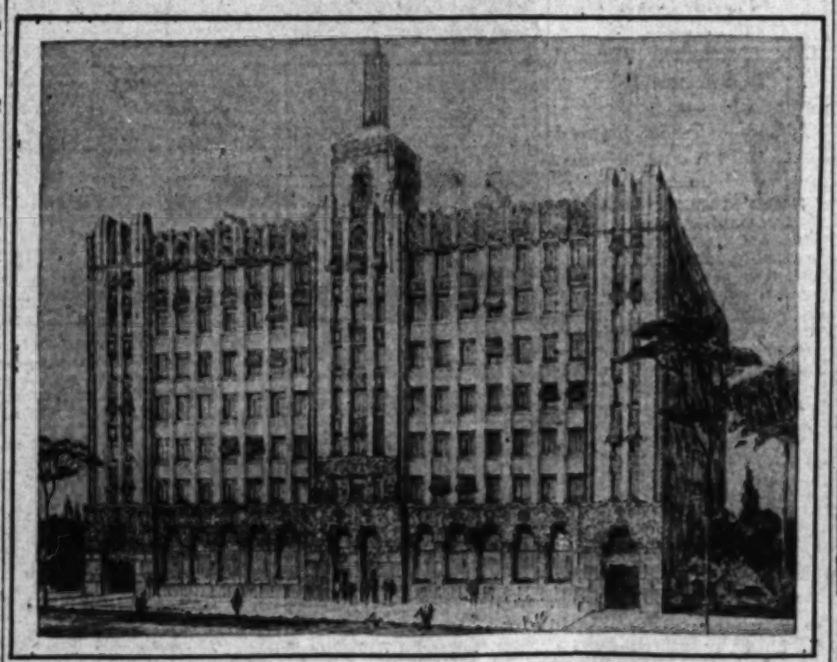
Work Begins Soon on Large Apartment Unit



North Rossmore Structure to Contain Two Tundred and Forty Rooms

Construction work on an eight-story apartment building to cost approximately $750,000, including land, will be started within ten days, according to H. Feigenbaum & Sons, builders and contractors. The structure will be erected at 436 North Rossmore, near Beverly. Max Maltzman, architect, in plans he prepared, provided for a 125-car garage in the basement, a tennis court and golf putting court for tenants. The building will contain ninety-four apartments or 240 rooms. Reservations for rentals are now being made by the Wilshire office of the Frank Meline Company, Inc.

ATTORNEY FORMULATES STEPS IN REPOSSESSION

Citing an opinion requested by a real estate dealer on repossession of property sold under contract, Herbert L. Breed, Oakland, counsel for the California Real Estate Association, made the following statement:

"In order to clear title against delinquent purchaser, it is necessary:

(a) That you should secure vacation of premises by purchaser.

(b) If purchaser's contract is recorded, you should secure quit claim deed from him, so that the same may be recorded; or if purchaser's contract is not recorded, you should secure surrender of same to you, in order that the same may be canceled.

"In the event of the inability upon the part of the trustee to secure compliance with the above, it will be necessary to file suit to quiet title and prosecute same to judgment.

"Notices should, of course, be given, but they are not sufficient to quiet the title. The trustee is, in our opinion, justified in the stand that it takes, not to issue a new contract until it is definitely established that the old contract is at an end.

"In many cases the trustee may know that the premises sold have been vacated by purchaser with intention of abandoning the contract, and may have definite information in its files that purchaser's contract has been lost; but in order to protect itself from embarrassment, will probably require either surrender of unrecorded contract, or execution of quit claim deed, or decree of court quieting title, and in case contract is recorded it will certainly do so, and we feel that such an attitude upon the part of the trustee is not unreasonable."

TWO-YEAR CAMPAIGN HERALDED

Hollywood Limit-Height Construction Expected to Set Record

Limit-height construction in Hollywood will reach record proportions with the 1930-1931 building program under way, N. F. Wilson, president of Hollywood Business Properties, Ltd., announced yesterday.

In addition to the Ritz-Carlton Hotel the construction of five twelve-story buildings is scheduled to begin during the two-year period with other major building operation assured, Wilson declared. Limit-height improvement of two of its properties is planned by Hollywood Business Properties, Ltd. With almost a mile of Hollywood key frontage acquired by lease, purchase or interest, the company will improve its properties as conditions warrant building development, Wilson said. The $1,250,000 Pantages Theater Building, in which Hollywood Business Properties, Ltd., is interested, will be opened May 29, next.

Hollywood's present high occupancy of office buildings, stores and homes will call for a record building campaign during the coming two years, it is declared. Residential construction, especially in the hillside area, is expected to be heavy, as the increase in property values in the level area has converted a former residential area into income and business property, the present high values making this section prohibitive from a standpoint of homes, Wilson said.

"Within five years strategic corner frontage on Hollywood Boulevard will be worth $20,000 per front foot," he added.

BUILDING-LOAN GROWTH RAPID

Film Capital Develops Into Financial Center

State-wide Group Evolves in Past Decade

Associations Vital Factor in Home Building

Hollywood's evolution from a hamlet of 7500 population in 1910 to an outstanding financial center in 1930, the twentieth anniversary of its annexation to Los Angeles, is reflected by the development of a building and loan association structure, State-wide in its scope, in the world's film capital.

GILBERT H. BEESEMYER

Head offices of Guaranty Building and Loan Association, Mutual Building and Loan Association and affiliated institutions, with seventeen headquarters throughout California and combined resources of $21,334,777, are located in Hollywood. Executive headquarters of United States Guaranty Corporation, holding company for a State-wide building-loan group, are also centered in the screen city.

Hollywood Building and Loan Association, of which F. C. Hardy is president, and Security Building and Loan Association, Frank Meline, president, are included in the roster of Hollywood institutions of this type. Pacific States Savings and Loan Company, another State-wide association, is represented by a branch office.

Until 1921 when the Guaranty Building and Loan Association was formed, there were no institutions of this type in Hollywood, according to a survey made by Gilbert H. Beesemyer, who organized the Guaranty and United States Guaranty Corporation and headed the company which built the Guaranty Building, Hollywood's pioneer limit-height structure.

"From resources of $203,421 as of December 31, 1921, there has been built a building-and-loan structure, with headquarters in Hollywood, which on January 1, 1930, had combined assets of $21,334,772," said Mr. Beesemyer. "The growth of the group has attracted the attention of building-loan executives all over the United States.

"From one small office opened in Hollywood in 1921, the affiliated associations now have seventeen headquarters located in the business centers of leading California cities extending from San Francisco to San Diego.

"With $16,450,352 of loans in force, principally on homes, the group of associations has become a vital factor in State-wide home-building. The Guaranty has financed the construction of more than 3000 Hollywood and Los Angeles residences. Resources of the company increased from $7,979,977 in 1928 to $11,076,738 in 1929, and Mutual of Hollywood increased its resources from $1,209,520 to $1,331,799.

"That Hollywood is becoming the building-loan save-by-mail capital of the nation is indicated by the fact that savers from every State in the Union and from eighteen foreign countries have opened savings accounts with the Guaranty."

ARTICLE IV—VALUE AND PRICE

We closed our last chapter with a reference to "The Standards of Appraisal Practice" of the National Association of Realty Boards. According to these standards, "the market value of a property at a designated date is that competitively established price which represents the present worth at that date of all the rights to future benefits arising from ownership." In this definition we find the following words: "market value," "price," "rights," "future benefits" and "ownership." These terms were evidently used in their technical economic sense, the only possible way, if the same meaning is to be imputed to these terms by the various readers. Let us look into the meaning of these words.

If you say that a certain street is twenty "parasangs" long (a Persian measure of length,) I will ask what you mean by "parasangs." If you say that twenty parasangs is the same as thirty "stadia" (a stadium is a Greek measure of length.) I am no wiser than before, as I have not the slightest idea of how long either a parasang or a stadium is. If, however, you say that the street referred to is a half-mile long, or so many feet or yards, I will know what you are talking about. Let us, therefore, try to come to a common understanding of what the meaning is of the various words as used in this definition of market value.

DEFINITION GIVEN

The economists tell us that value is the common measure of "wealth," of "income" and of "property." In other words, value is the common denominator of these economic concepts, and the unit of value is price, expressed in the accepted medium of exchange, which is money.

Economics is said to be the science of wealth, and it used to be said that wealth consisted of all useful material things which are owned by human beings. The early economists held that wealth did not include useful services like those of doctors, lawyers, teachers, preachers, police, army, navy, etc., because such services were nonmaterial, and therefore, it was argued, could not be wealth in the accepted sense. Our modern economists who still hold to the definition of wealth as given above, however, admit the usefulness of such services, and include them in the more comprehensive term of "economic goods," or cover them by an expression such as "services rendered by free persons." We shall, for the sake of brevity, and for the purpose of this discussion include in the word wealth both material and nonmaterial goods.

To say that wealth is useful is the same as saying that it furnishes benefits and that it renders service. Such benefits or service rendered by wealth is income. Income is referred to as the desirable events caused by wealth. But there are also undesirable events caused by wealth and such are termed costs. The difference between the desirable and undesirable events caused by wealth, that is, the difference between income and costs, is termed "net income." Income, costs and net income, as set forth by the economists, correspond very closely to our every-day conception of these terms.

MEANING OF PROPERTY

The term property as used in the definition of market value quoted above is synonymous with ownership or property-right. It is the right to the income, or the right to the benefits or services of wealth.

When a person owns a thing he has a right to its use or to the service or income from the thing owned. He may be the sole owner or he may have a divided ownership. A tenant, for example, has the ownership of the property during the term of his lease, while the owner has the right of ownership for the rest of the time. A leased property may, in the economic sense, be said to have two owners—the lessor and the lessee.

DIFFERENCES EXPLAINED

Wealth is the source of income; property is the distribution of income. Wealth determines the quantity and the nature of the income which people may enjoy, while the property rights determine the manner in which the income shall be divided among the members of the community. You may, for instance, change the property rights without changing the quantity of material wealth. Such wealth is measured by determining the amount in existence at a certain instant of time, while income is the amount of service rendered over a specific period of time.

You cannot add up an automobile, a doctor's service and the grapes from a farm, but if you can reduce these different items to a common denominator, they may be added up. In order, therefore, to measure wealth, income and property, we must have a common measure and this common measure is value, and the unit of value is price, expressed in money, the accepted means of exchange.

Therefore, say—

Price of automobile is	$1000
Price of doctor's service is	100
Price of grapes is	500
Value is	$1600

We shall look further into the concept of market value in our next article.

Builders Start Manufacturing Company Plant

Ground-breaking ceremonies were held and construction started last Tuesday by the John M. Cooper Company, Inc., architects and builders, at the site of the five-story and basement Brownstein-Louis Company building at Twelfth street and Stanford avenue, to cost approximately $350,000.

The owner of the structure is Harry Siskin, president of the Angelus Furniture Manufacturing Company, who is leasing to the Brownstein-Louis Company, garment manufacturers, for a fifteen-year term at a gross rental of $560,000. The building will have a frontage of 257 feet on Stanford avenue and 165 feet on Twelfth street, and will contain a total floor area of 135,000 square feet.

School Board Approves Plan for Buildings

The Los Angeles Board of Education has approved the plans for the two-story, twelve-room school building to be erected on property adjoining Huntington Palisades. The cost of the building and the equipment will total approximately $100,000, according to P. W. Rairden, vice-president of the Santa Monica Land and Water Company.

"The new school at Huntington Palisades will afford complete educational accommodations for all grades from kindergarten to the ninth year," says Rairden, "and is so designed that additions can be made as rapidly as local needs warrant."

DIATOMACEOUS DEPOSIT MINED

Minute Marine Organisms Provide Origin

Heat Insulation Material Best Known Use

Carloads Already Shipped for Exportation

Established but four months, the Dicalite Company, at work on the diatomaceous earth deposits which surround its plant in the San Pedro hills, is shipping approximately fifty carloads of its commodity each month to many cities of the United States and is fast reaching out to foreign markets as demand for diatomaceous earth grows, according to company officials.

Dr. M. L. Hartmann, vice-president and general manager for the Dicalite Company, states that the initial output of fifty cars per month is just beginning. Before the end of the year he expects to produce at least 200 cars per month as new and ever-increasing uses for diatomaceous earth, or "dicalite," are discovered.

The company now employs seventy-five men on a monthly pay roll of $15,000. The plant is located in the center of about 500 acres of its product about two miles from Torrance in the San Pedro hills. This deposit, said Dr. Hartmann, is one of the only two commercially valuable diatomaceous earth deposits in the United States, both of which are in California.

MANY USES

When questioned regarding the uses for "dicalite" Dr. Hartmann explained that diatomaceous earth is best known as a heat insulation material for walls of buildings and industrial furnaces. It is employed extensively as a filter aid for water, oils and other liquids, and in refining sugar. Within the last few years it has also been used all over the United States as an admixture for concrete, following experiments begun as early as 1916 in building the United States Shipping Board's concrete ships during the war.

"Concrete becomes very plastic and workable when mixed with diatomaceous earth, which we market as 'dicalite'," said Dr. Hartmann, "the mixture makes concrete a uniform mass without impairing its strength. With new uses being found for our commodity constantly, there is no telling to what extent it can be marketed in the future. Did you know that every automobile carries about five pounds of it in the walls of its battery box?"

VEGETABLE REMAINS

Diatomaceous earth, he explained, is not really an earth at all. It is the remains of millions of vegetable organisms called diatoms, the green scum-like growth which is found particularly in salt marshes and left deposited in the soil after the water has receded from that particular territory. The deposits are traced back to the Miocene age as evidenced by frequent discovery of whale bones, fossilized fish and sea cows when digging into the hills.

"While other deposits are known to exist," said Dr. Hartmann, "the two in California are the only ones so far commercially valuable. Our proximity to Los Angeles Harbor affords easy outlet for export trade. We have already shipped quantities to the Orient, Java, Great Britain and Europe, in addition to practically every point in the United States. With our present plant and transportation facilities we expect to increase our market immeasurably."

Hills Excavated for Earth of Varied Uses

San Pedro Plant Pictured

Above is shown the diatomaceous earth plant of the Dicalite Company in the San Pedro hills near Torrance. Approximately fifty carloads of the commodity are now shipped out each month and a production of 200 carloads per month is expected by the end of the year. The best known use of the earth is as an insulating material, but it is also used in filtering and refining, and in mixing concrete.

WEALTH SHOWN BY LIEN PAY-OFF

Premature Discharges of Year Recorded

Loans Balance Last Year Offsets Deficits

Payments Represent Only Private Releases

BY A. C. ROWSEY

Latest reports of the increase property in Los Angeles county are strikingly confirmed by the straight realty lien market for April, in which it is noted that, for the first time this year, premature payments of liens mark the closing of the month's maturities.

A total of 2456 straight mortgage liens and trust liens was discharged during the month, according to data of the Mortgage Maturity Company compiled exclusively for The Times. Of this total, 118 discharges were in excess of the maturities for the month.

The total pay-off, it is true, lacked $1,548,007 of meeting the maturities, but against this is a balance paid in excess of requirements during the opening four months of 1929.

The data show that $9,525,837 was paid to private individuals during April in the discharge of straight liens, numbering 2456 instruments. There was scheduled for maturity in April $11,973,840. During the same month in 1929, 2801 liens, valued at $12,983,124, were released by private individuals when the months' maturing liens totaled only 2177 liens, valued at $10,567,000.

The comparison of the first four months of 1929 with the same period of 1930 shows last year's period discharging 10,940 liens against a maturity list of 9020, paying $58,067,374, against a requirement of only $43,567,088, while during the same period this year the totals show release of 8943 instruments against a maturity of 9444 instruments, paying $41,578,507, against requirements of $49,209,455. It is assumed the deficit is covered by the excess of last year's opening months.

These payments, it must be noted, are confined in all instances to releases by private individuals as recorded by the Mortgage Maturity Company. Payments to corporations are eliminated entirely from all totals. By translating the word "liens" into the word "investors," an idea of the number of individuals receiving the straight mortgage payments is conveyed. The money is presumably funds destined for the realty market.

The table shows the complete comparison of the first four months of 1929 and 1930.

CHEAP DAY'S TRIP TO NEW YORK PREDICTED

New York to Los Angeles in twelve hours. Fare, $50.

That is the prediction for advertisements within the next ten years, as voiced by A. W. Leonard, district passenger agent of the Western Air Express, before a meeting of the Los Angeles Realty Board last week.

The history of aviation from the time of the first experiments in lighter-than-air craft to the present was briefly sketched by Leonard, who stated that 33 per cent of the air activities of the country are carried on in and around Los Angeles.

He called the attention of the realty men to the possibilities of adequately showing property from the air, especially in projects where contiguous surroundings are a vital factor.

DELINQUENT PAYMENTS DECREASING

California Building Loan Companies Report Ideal Situation

With loans in force totaling more than $403,844,232 and resources in excess of $480,000,000, an amazingly low percentage of delinquencies in payments by persons who have taken advantage of building-loan methods to finance their homes is reported by the California building loan associations, according to Orville L. Routt, president of the United States Building and Loan Association.

Loans now in force include 113,185 loans made on homes, aggregating $281,495,487, an average of $2487.03 each, and representing 70 per cent of the loans contracted by the building-loan institutions of the State. In addition to home financing, 10,888 flat loans, totaling $68,837,867, averaging $6322, and 3194 apartment-house loans, totaling $58,197,684, an average of $18,220, were made, Mr. Routt declared.

In promoting thrift and saving the building-loan associations are developing funds for the financing of thousands of California homes, he added.

TRACT NAME CHANGED AT CEREMONIES

Development Liquidation Sale Declared to Permit City's Expansion

The name of Benmar Hills in Burbank was officially changed to Northwood at christening ceremonies held at this property last night, according to an official announcement from O'Connell & White. This company has just been placed in charge of the liquidation sale of the tract by the bond holders committee which recently foreclosed on the entire area formerly known as Benmar Hills.

The active sale of Northwood starts today, it is stated. According to H. B. Stecher, chairman of the bond holders committee, the sale will permit the westward expansion of Burbank, which, it is stated, has been obstructed by restrictions that prevented the ready sale of the tract under its former ownership.

Northwood extends from San Fernando Road north to the foothills behind Burbank and adjoins the business center of the city. It includes within its borders both the Burbank High School and the Burbank Civic Center.

O'Connell & White have opened offices in connection with this sale on Wilshire Boulevard at the corner of Shatto Place. According to Robert White, official, an active development campaign at Northwood will be started at once. He explained that much of the tract is already improved with concrete streets, ornamental electroliers, and all public utilities installed underground.

THE CAPTAIN: Well, Mister Jones, if we come through this jam with a sound keel under us, I'm through.

THE MATE: You don't mean, Sir, that you're turning in your ship.

THE CAPTAIN: I do just that. Thirty-three years of it . . . windjamming 'round the Horn and the Cape of Good Hope . . . seventeen years on the Great Lakes, the first boat out in the spring, the last boat back in the fall, is enough.

THE MATE: But I can't picture you, Sir, as a land-lubber.

THE CAPTAIN: Wait 'til Jessie and I find my bit of land, and you see.

. . . and then they found Fontana Farms

CAPT. JAMES JACK and his first mate, Jessie, backed and filled a bit before they found the berth they were seeking. There was a venture or two that did not turn out so well, and so when they found Fontana Farms, they had only a meagre amount left out of the savings of thirty-three years. But in Fontana . . . with pedigreed Leghorn pullets . . . their little proved enough.

That was three years ago. By now Capt. Jack has won back more than half of his original fortune. He has done it all with chickens . . . with the aid of Fontana Farms experts. He knew as little about chickens as any sea-faring man might be expected to know when he came to Fontana. Today he is recognized as one of Fontana's most successful poultry-men

Capt. and Mrs. Jack are very happy in their tidy little berth. His certificate for salt-water sailing is renewed each year; he holds, for the seventeenth consecutive year, a master's card from the Pittsburgh Steamship Co., of the United States Steel Corporation. But the sea no longer tempts him—he found the snug haven he was seeking, when he found Fontana Farms.

CONSTRUCTION PLANS QUESTIONS ANSWERED

SERVICE WING NOISE AVOIDED

Plan Facilitates Pleasing Room Arrangement

Additions and Variations Easily Possible

Full Convenience Assured at Low Expense

BY GLENN ELWOOD SMITH
Architect

This bungalow, modifying the popular H-shaped plan, has a pleasing room arrangement. The bedrooms are in one wing and the dining-room and kitchen are in the other, thus insuring the family against the noise of the service wing. This is one of the attractive designs that may be seen in the Small Home Plan Bureau, Architects' Building at Fifth and Figueroa streets.

Almost every room in the house has at least two exposures, affording the maximum sunshine and air. There is ample closet and wardrobe space provided for the convenience of the family and guests, and the arrangement is such that each bedroom has the privacy that is always desirable, but hard to find, in a small house.

The vista from the living-room could be made very interesting and attractive through the treatment of the terrace and the landscaping of the patio. In case variations or additions are desired, a maid's room and bath could easily be added to the service wing. Also the bedroom at the rear of the opposite wing could be made into a nursery, as it gives an opportunity for sunshine and air on three sides.

It would be possible to finish the roof in either tile or shakes, depending on the effect desired. Deep reveals will cast interesting shadows which are so characteristic of the architect of California, and bright shutters and wrought-iron work will lend warmth of color to this design.

Its great simplicity assures the prospective builder of a home of charm and convenience at a low cost. A few years ago it would have cost at least $9000 to build. Now it can be built for approximately $6000. The complete working drawings and specifications may be seen at the Small Home Plan Bureau.

The above design, submitted by Glenn Elwood Smith, architect, may be seen at the Small Home Plan Bureau in the Architects' Building at Fifth and Figueroa streets.

Guyton Takes New Tire Line

Announcement of his appointment as exclusive distributing representative for Lee of Conshohocken tires in Los Angeles is made by W. B. Guyton of the W. B. Guyton Tire and Rubber Company located at 1120 East Eighth street.

Guyton has previously been established in this location handling another brand of tires, a brand that he has represented for nineteen years, so his assumption of the Lee franchise does not put him in the class of a newcomer in the local tire business.

A large service department as well as sales department is maintained.

HIGH SCHOOL AUDITORIUM TO BE BUILT

Board of Education Has Preliminary Plans Under Preparation

WEST LOS ANGELES, May 3. (Exclusive)—Construction of a $175,000 auditorium for the University High School at Sawtelle will be started immediately, preliminary plans now being under preparation by the Board of Education, according to an announcement made last week at a meeting of the West Los Angeles branch of the Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce.

Louis Evans, chairman of the chamber's education committee, stated he anticipated also an appropriation for additional rooms for the high school.

It was declared the new auditorium would be large enough to seat the entire student body and serve as a meeting place for civic organizations and educational programs.

Construction Work Started on Four Homes

HUNTINGTON PARK, May 3. (Exclusive)—Within the past few days construction work has been started on four residences in Huntington Park. C. A. Hays is erecting a dwelling at 3303 Broadway, to cost $5000; Silas Nowell has started construction work on a residence to be erected at 3408 Live Oak street, at a cost of $4000; T. J. Farney is building a home at 6709 Hollenbeck street, to cost $2200, and the Southern California Edison Company is erecting a $2700 dwelling at 6234 Bissell street.

PASADENA TELEPHONE BUILDING COMPLETED

The Home Telephone and Telegraph Company of Pasadena has completed the construction of a one-story Spanish building in the Flintridge area, Pasadena, and is now installing dial central office equipment. The new office, which will provide facilities for approximately 800 telephones and which will require an estimated expenditure of $78,000, will be placed in service during the early fall.

KITCHEN PLANS IMPROVED

Minimum of Wasted Effort for Housewife is Ideal of Present-Day Working Conveniences

In this age of efficiency in business and industry, the largest occupational group in the country, that of the housewives, has been ignored. It is only within the last few years that the kitchen has been considered other than just a place of concentrated drudgery, asserts Katherine Kitchener of the Architects' Building Material Exhibit, Architects' Building, Fifth and Figueroa streets.

Recently great strides have been made in kitchen improvement. Thought has been given to the planning, equipping and beautifying of kitchens, she declares.

"It has been found that there are five steps in kitchen work. The activities which must be considered are: reception of food, preparation of food, cooking and serving, clearing up and washing dishes. There are four working centers in which to accomplish this work; the working unit or kitchen cabinet where much of the preparation and serving of food is done; the stove; the sink where some of the preparation, much of the cleaning up, and the dish washing is done; and the refrigerator and storage space.

WORKING UNIT PLACEMENT

"The working unit generally consists of a porcelain topped cabinet with storage space for cooking ingredients, such as flour, sugar, seasonings, etc., and a space for cooking utensils and mixing bowls below. This should be centrally placed so that one may work from it to the stove, sink and refrigerator with a minimum of steps.

"The accompanying photograph shows a corner of a model kitchen in the Architects' Building Material Exhibit at Fifth and Figueroa streets. The working unit is between the sink and the cooler, with the stove on the adjoining wall to the left.

"Facing the working unit, and beside the outside door, is the refrigerator. It is so located that when groceries are received the perishable articles may be placed in it immediately, without extra steps. The other materials are carried a few steps directly across the room to the working unit and cooler where they are conveniently stored.

LARGE DRAINBOARD AIDS

"A large drainboard, with cabinets above for extra storage and dishes and drawers below, adds immeasurably to convenience and to efficiency. Some of the drawers may be metal and of double depth to be used as extra bins for breads, flours, etc.

"The dining-room door is in the adjoining wall, just to the right of the dish cabinets and drainboard. It is readily seen how convenient such an arrangement is for setting and clearing the table. In this kitchen a breakfast nook to the right of the dining-room is equally convenient to the dish cabinets.

"A sturdy stepladder stool of a comfortable height to work at either sink or cabinet, and a porcelain-topped portable table with shelves below, are important accessories.

"Several such model kitchens, exemplifying the five steps in kitchen planning, may be seen on the mezzanine floor of the Architects' Building Material Exhibit, Fifth anxd Figueroa streets, where information on any type of kitchen equipment may be had."

HOME FINANCING EXPLAINED

Typical Routine of Loan Procedure Outlined, from Application to Disbursement

BY GEORGE A. SCHNEIDER
Prepared for the California Building Loan League
(Copyright, 1930, by George A. Schneider)

[This is the tenth of a series of articles designed primarily for the home owner of moderate means.]

No matter from what source the money is borrowed, the steps necessary to the completion of the loan are as follows:

(a) Application.
(b) Appraisal and investigation.
(c) Approval and execution of loan.
(d) Recording of instruments and disbursement of money.

The exact steps of the procedure in any case will depend upon whether the loan is procured directly from a private lender or through a broker, or from a lending institution, and whether the loan is to cover land with completed buildings, or to refinance an existing loan on such property, or to provide funds to construct a building or other improvement. The exact procedure will further depend upon the policies and practices of the particular lender or lending institution. The routine which is outlined in the following discussion is typical of general practices:

APPLICATION

The first step is the submitting of the application for the loan to the prospective lender or his agent. Banks, mortgage companies, and loan associations require all applications to be submitted on a printed form, which contains numerous questions with spaces in which the applicant is required to insert more or less detailed information regarding the amount and kind of loan required, the kind of property offered as security, and its location and legal description, the name of the record legal owner, the marital status of the applicant, the value of the land and improvements, each stated separately, the value of proposed improvements, if any, the amount and character of the present encumbrances against the property, the purpose for which the loan is wanted, together with personal information regarding the financial responsibility of the applicant and similar matters. There is usually included an agreement as to the payment of all charges incurred in the closing of the loan and of any office fee, commission, bonus, or other charges for making the loan.

There is no standard for statutory form of application for a loan. Each lending institution uses a form which best meets its particular requirements. Some forms used by lending institutions have been drawn with considerable care, and are the result of long years of experience and use. In every case the applicant should carefully read the application form and thoroughly understand its terms and the terms of the loan before signing it.

The application is first passed upon by the manager of the loan department, or some other person with authority to do this. If he deems it a good application, an appraisal of the property is called for, and the application, with the appraiser's report, goes before a loan committee which meets at frequent intervals for the approval or rejection of loan applications.

APPRAISAL INVESTIGATION

Following the application, the next step in the procedure is the appraisal of the property and the investigation of the financial responsibility of the applicant. An appraisal is the act of estimating the value of the property. From the lender's viewpoint it is, or at least should be, the most important step, since the safety, of the loan, if the loan is made, is largely dependent upon the merits of the appraisal. In arriving at the amount which may be safely lent, the lender must give consideration to the stability of value and marketability of the security. The loan should, in fact, be considered with a view to the adverse conditions which might later affect the value of the property.

Between the prospective borrower and the lender there is always more or less of a difference of opinion as to values, and on this account appraisers are frequently subjected to severe criticism for their methods of arriving at values which, to the prospective borrower, my seem unreasonably low. The owner usually bases his valuation upon the maximum asking price of similar properties in his neighborhood, and frequently attaches a sentimental or home value. His valuation is of today, whereas the actual valuation for the purpose of a loan must be governed by the probable value several years hence, when the loan becomes due and payable, and by the price the property is likely to bring if sold under a forced sale to satisfy the debt.

OFFICIAL'S ELECTION ANNOUNCED

Vice-President Assumes Duties With Savings-Loan Association

Election of Richard C. Willis to the office of vice-president of Fidelity Savings and Loan Association was announced yesterday by George L. Eastman, president. Mr. Willis has already assumed his duties with the association.

Since 1913 Willis has been actively identified with real estate development in Los Angeles. For ten years he was a member of the W. Ross Campbell Company staff, specializing in wholesale and industrial realty projects. In 1923 he became manager of leases and sales in the organization of Metcalf & Ryan, continuing with that company until he resigned to take over his work with Fidelity.

For the last ten years he also has been active in the affairs of the Los Angeles Realty Board, serving three consecutive terms as director and treasurer. He is now chairman of the appraising committee of the board. In addition he lectures on the subject of appraising and valuation of real estate for the extension division of the University of Southern California.

COLOR STAGES COMEBACK

Formerly Drab Household Utilities Now Lend Cheer to Home in Harmonizing Modern Hues

BY J. E. STANTON, A.I.A.
Chief of design, Gladding, McBean & Co., Los Angeles

America has become "color-conscious" in the last five years. In the brief period from 1925 to 1930, color has staged such a remarkable renaissance in the United States that the knowledge of it, its uses and trends, has become necessary to everyone connected with the business of home building or home making.

Color has been associated with the rise of culture in all nations, ancient and modern. In every civilization the use of color in home and the decorative arts has reached various heights of perfection. But with the rise of commercial power in the nineteenth and twentieth centuries, the cultural power of color and beauty were largely lost sight of.

DOLLAR VALUE

The revolution that began five years ago, however, has achieved tremendous impetus since industry discovered that beauty has a dollar as well as a cultural value. It would now be impossible to enumerate the list of colorful household utilities and furnishings which less than a decade ago were hopelessly drab and depressing, but which now lend tone and cheerfulness to the home in their varied modern hues.

For this happy state of affairs, the architect and the interior decorator are entitled to much credit. But without the artisan and the facilities controlled by great industrial organizations, their pioneering would have been frustrated. A striking illustration of this lies in the modern trend to colorful bathrooms and kitchens. For many years architects had been trying to incorporate color in these rooms, but without much success, for a suggestion that the bathtub be decorated in Nile green, or the kitchen sink in sky blue or Japanese orange, generally brought nothing but a laugh from the owner, builder or manufacturer of plumbing fixtures. White enamel was the mode and there was apparently no intention of changing.

COLOR IN BATHROOM

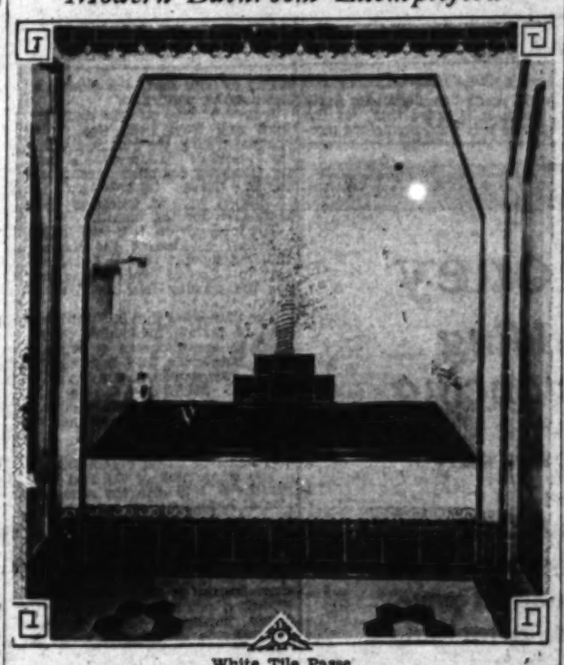
Early in 1925 our firm began to give support to the architect and designer by incorporating color in tile for bathroom walls and floors. To this beginning the present fashion of color in bathrooms can be traced and from Los Angeles it has spread all over the world. Very soon well-known architects were visiting the Glendale plant, bearing with them various types of plumbing fixtures to be colored to harmonize with the tile, but because of certain technical obstructions, the reglazing of the white enameled fixtures in colors was not a success.

That same year, the Washington Iron Works, Los Angeles, used color in plumbing fixtures for the first time on record. Thus, to Los Angeles belongs the distinction of producing colored enamelware at a price little above that of the standard white finish and the consequent introduction of color to the home on a large scale.

To such lengths has the demand for color gone that now white tile and white fixtures are utterly passe in any home whether they cost $5000 or $500,000. All fixtures, from tub to faucet handles in the bathroom, are enameled to harmonize with the tiles. The same is true to almost as great an extent in the kitchen, and there the mode of color has even extended to the range and the household utensils, all of which can be purchased to match the color scheme of the room.

(Next Sunday, on this page, Mr. Stanton will discuss the most popular motifs in color and design now being used by architects in the modern house.)

Modern Bathroom Exemplified



White Tile Passe

All bathroom fixtures, from tub to faucet handles, now are enameled to harmonize with color schemes in tiles. The above design, by Gladding, McBean & Co., is carried out in red and gold overglaze, with a decorative panel in natural colors.

FIRM SIGNS LEASES FOR STORE CHAIN

Expansion Anticipated in Other Communities of Southern California

The Great Atlantic and Pacific Tea Company, which opened its first stores on the Pacific Coast on Friday, has now completed forty-seven leases in Los Angeles and other Southern California cities, according to the announcement of George M. Mott of Coldwell, Cornwall & Banker. The total aggregate rental to be paid amounts to approximately $2,000,000.

Many more leases in Los Angeles and other Southern California cities are under negotiation and the company expects to have more than 100 stores operating in this vicinity before the end of the year.

The first group to be opened consists of nine stores, two in Los Angeles and seven in near-by cities. The two Los Angeles stores are at 5869 Franklin avenue, Hollywood; and at 6811 South Western avenue. The others are at 37 Fair Oaks avenue, Pasadena; 1515-17 Mission street, South Pasadena; 211-15 East Main street, Alhambra; 136 San Fernando Road, Burbank; 6265-7 Van Nuys Boulevard, Van Nuys; 31 Pier avenue, Hermosa Beach; 107 North Pacific avenue, Redondo Beach.

John A. Hartford, the son of the founder of the company and its present head, has come to Los Angeles for the opening with John M. Toolin, president of the Central Western Division. Operations on the Pacific Coast are in the hands of O. K. Gartman, vice-president of the Central Western Division.

By REX AVON

Question: I am ready to proceed with several improvements about our home and will probably try my hand at building the concrete drive, walks, porch steps, some stone, stones, etc. Do you know of some folder which will help me to do first-class job?

Answer: Making concrete improvements is interesting work and if the novice is careful to plan the work and complete it according to proper methods, satisfactory results will follow. A forty-six-page booklet, "Concrete Improvements Around the Home," is fully illustrated and contains general information for making good concrete and turning out useful decorative products. It is free to the interested.

Q: My attention has been called to a new vacuum cleaning system which is built into the home and is not operated by electricity. Can you give me further details?

A.: A hydraulic vacuum system may be permanently installed when your home is built or remodeled and as no motor is required the operation is economical, noiseless and efficient. Dirt and dust go down the sewer, so there is no bag to empty and no moving parts to get out of order. Other characteristics are described and illustrated in a printed folder.

Q.: Do you consider the service of an architect essential to the building of a new home or the remodeling of an old one?

A.: No owner, however gifted in other ways, and no contractor, however skilled, can design and build an ordinary house equal in beauty, utility and cost to one completed under the guidance of a trained architect. For modernizing, an architect's advice is necessary, as he will suggest ways to re-create the house in conformity to modern ideas and since he is impartial the entire job will be balanced to satisfy the requirements of beauty, comfort and stability.

Q.: I was surprised to learn that there is a big difference in common brick and its method of manufacture, and that some brands are more absorbent than others. Which brick should be specified?

A.: For best results brick should not exceed 11 per cent of absorption. Some kinds are porous and will absorb some of the water required to complete the hardening of the mortar joint. If this process is premature or incomplete the result will be disastrous. Also the porous brick will gather and hold moisture which is detrimental to plaster, attached woodwork, etc.

A similar competition was waged in San Joaquin and Sacramento counties, a total of 4642 filings giving San Joaquin county ninth place and 4486 filings in Sacramento county placing it in tenth place for the first quarter.

Stanislaus county was next in the survey with 4158 filings; Ventura county was next with 3872; and in Imperial county 3672 filings were recorded.

In the five remaining counties there were 3318 instruments filed in Santa Barbara, 2507 in Merced; 1982 in San Luis Obispo, 1739 in Madera and 1429 in Kings county.

MILLION FOR YEAR

With a total of 210,111 realty instruments filed during the first quarter, officials of the title company predict that for the entire year 1930 approximately 1,000,000 filings will be recorded in the eighteen most important counties of Central and Southern California.

It is estimated by officials of the title company that approximately a third of the instruments filed in each county involve realty transfers, and that an additional third concern realty financing operations. The filing figures, therefore, are regarded as an excellent basis for judging volume of real estate activity.

The following table shows the total of instruments filed in each of the eighteen counties during the first quarter of this year:

ADVERTISING CONTROLLED

Realty Board Recommends Use of Conservative Classified Copy on Part of Its Members

Definite recommendations on copy to be used in classified advertising by its members have been made by the subdividers' division of the Los Angeles Realty Board. These recommendations have also been approved by the board's directors.

Pointing out that advertising containing misleading statements breaks down public confidence in the real estate business and is an economic loss, whereas a stimulating of confidence should be the aim of the realty organizations, the division has asked that its members be most conservative in statements made, and also that all members of the board watch the classified sections of all publications, and call to the attention of the secretary any advertisements that are questionable.

These will be referred to a special committee which will investigate them, and in cases where misleading statements have been made, will cite the members using such copy to the board of directors for whatever action is deemed necessary.

Other recommendations are that all members of the board refrain from inserting in their classified ads the amounts of salaries and commissions to be paid salesmen, and that, as incorporated in the rules and regulations of the division, the name of the firm or corporation appear in all classified advertising.

A committee from the Realty Board has contacted with the advertising managers of the metropolitan papers and the Better Business Bureau of the Advertising Club and is assured of their full support in any effort to put classified real estate advertising on a higher plane.

STATE MINERAL OUTPUT VARIED

California Leads Nation in Kinds Produced

Annual Value Second Only to Pennsylvania's

Los Angeles County First, Due to Petroleum

California yields, commercially, a greater number and variety of mineral products than any State in the United States, and probably more than any other equal area elsewhere on the earth, according to Walter W. Bradley, State mineralogist. The total annual value of her output has been surpassed by not more than four or five others, and those usually the great coal States east of the Mississippi. More recently California has been placed second to Pennsylvania, the leader.

"California was for many years the sole domestic source of borax, chromite and magnesite, and in which we still lead," Bradley declares. "We lead all other States in the production of gold, quicksilver and platinum; and have alternated in the lead with Colorado in tungsten, and with Oklahoma in petroleum.

"Minerals of commercial value exist in every county, and some active production was reported to the State Division of Mines and Mining from all of the fifty-eight.

"Of the first ten counties, in point of total output for 1927, the first four, Los Angeles, Kern, Orange, Ventura, owe their position mainly to petroleum, as does also Fresno (sixth.) Los Angeles, due to its oil, leads all the others, being credited with 36 per cent of the entire State's total value for 1927, having passed Kern in 1923, which led for many years. San Bernardino (fifth) owes its place chiefly to cement, silver, potash, borax, mineral water and tungsten; Riverside (seventh) to cement, stone, brick and tile; Yuba (eighth) to gold; Santa Cruz (ninth) to cement; Plumas (tenth) to copper. Twenty-four counties had each a total in excess of $1,000,000 in 1927.

"Cement is an important item in nine of these counties, gold in four, and miscellaneous stone, granite and soda in one each. In the point of variety and diversity, San Bernardino county led all others in 1927 with a total of twenty-three different mineral products on its commercial list, followed by Los Angeles with twenty, San Diego with nineteen, Kern and Riverside with seventeen each, Inyo with thirteen, Butte with twelve, Calaveras, Monterey, Santa Barbara and Shasta with eleven each. The counties with their mineral resources, production for 1927, etc., are considered in detail in the following.

EXCHANGE PRESIDENT TO SPEAK

Operation of New York Securities Organization Will be Explained

Details of the working of the New York Real Estate Securities Exchange, which has been in successful operation for some six months, will be brought to members of the Los Angeles Realty Board the 20th inst. by Charles G. Edwards, exchange president and past president of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

For some time the possibility of the establishing of a similar exchange in Los Angeles has been contemplated and Edwards has accepted the invitation to tell of the plan under which the New York project was organized and operates.

According to Edwards, a real-estate securities exchange may not be large enough to handle all of the issues that have been sold to the public, but he believes that with the assistance of real-estate men throughout the United States much can be done to make liquid the class of security that real estate men must depend upon for financing many of the larger building enterprises.

Representatives of other groups, as well as individual business men, have been invited to attend the luncheon meeting of the board at which Edwards will speak.

Work Begins on Home for Screen Actor

Construction work began last week on a home for Mr. and Mrs. Antonio Moreno upon one of the most prominent knolls of Laughlin Park. The site for the home was sold by A. J. Dehner, realty broker.

The spot chosen by the Morenos bears historical interest as one of the group of knolls known as Mocohuenga, "Moco" meaning "post and council grounds," and "Cahuenga" being the name of the chief of the Indians of a tribe once living there. According to the historical records of the City Park Commission, the "Moco" is the mound located between Franklin avenue and Los Feliz Boulevard and between Western avenue and Harvard Boulevard. From these knolls is taken the name Mocohuenga Canyon, the Western avenue entrance to Griffith Park.

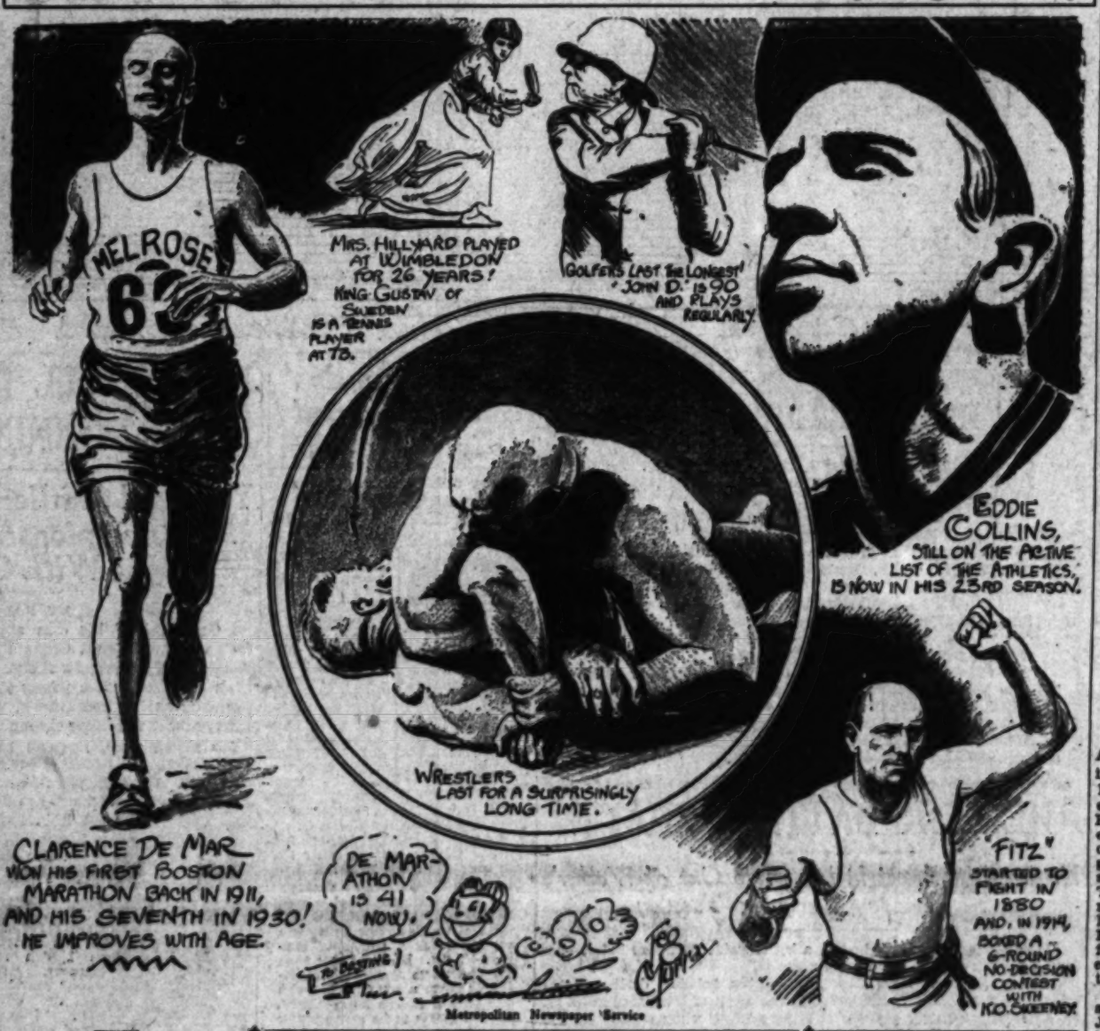
THE AGE LIMIT IN SPORTS - - - - By Feg Murray



Metropolitan Newspaper Service

THE recent victory in the annual Patriots' Day marathon in Boston of 41-year-old Clarence De Mar has given rise to much discussion as to just what is the age limit in sports, and for how long a span of years an athlete may go on winning. This span varies, of course, depending on the person and on the line of athletic endeavor in which he competes. Let us take a look at seven sports, and try to ascertain in which one man or woman may keep up the longest active participation.

BOXING. Some fighters enjoy great longevity in the ring. Others shoot up like a rocket, become champions and are forgotten in a few years. Paul Berlenbach, for instance. But thirty-four years elapsed between Bob Fitzsimmons's first ring victory in New Zealand and his last fight in a six-round no-decision bout with K. O. Sweeney in 1914.

BASEBALL. Cy Young pitched for twenty-two seasons in the majors. Ty Cobb played for twenty-four years (and batted over .300 in all but the first.) Pop Anson had twenty-seven years of service in pro baseball when he quit in 1897, twenty-two of them spent in the majors. Eddie Collins, still on the active list of the Athletics, is in his twenty-third major league season. There are at least five stars in the big leagues today who are past 40.

FOOTBALL. Jim Thorpe, 'way past his prime, may be expected to play a few games with some pro

EAST TO PLAY WEST

Intersectional Polo Series May be Part of Tryouts for Next American Big Four

BY FRANK ROCHE

West versus the East—that will be the way the United States Polo Association will decide the personnel of the next American Big Four which will defend the famous Westchester Cup against an invading British team this coming September. Such will be the arrangement, setting a new precedent in polo, when the international tryouts are staged next summer, according to a leading Coast official.

The western team will be made up of two Californians; Eric Pedley and Elmer Boeseke and two Texans, Cecil Smith and Rube Williams. The eastern team will have Capt. Tommy Hitchcock of the Big Four, E. A. S. Hopping, Winston Guest and Robert Strawbridge in the saddle, according to the dope. Averill Harriman and Stephen "Laddie" Sanford are also likely to play in the series, it was stated.

TOMMY HITCHCOCK

The announcement of the East vs. West series is expected to be made by Louis E. Stoddard, chairman of the United States Polo Association just before the candidates for the internationals gather on Long Island for the tryouts.

If the proposed arrangement goes through and there is strong indication that it will, the polo stock of the West again soars a notch nearer the top in the mallet market of the country. The Pacific Coast with Pedley and Boeseke as its representatives boasts two of the leading candidates for the big team. Only two players, Hitchcock and Guest, enjoy higher ratings than the two Coast stars. In inviting the Texans, Smith and Williams, to the tryouts, the national committee has discovered it has a complete western team. Hence the East and West series.

Eric Pedley was the first polo player from the West ever to crash the barrier which surrounded the international squad. The West was never considered in the past when it came to picking America's polo team. But in 1924 after the famous Midwick team, composed of Teddy Miller, Pedley, Arthur Perkins and Carleton Burke, had won both the junior and senior open championships in one month, defeating the cream of the East Coast, things began to change.

Pedley was named as an al-

UTHLAND CONFERENCE ADOPTS NEW SCHEDULE

Conference Coaches' and Managers' Association has adopted a four-year football schedule, covering the years 1931-34, inclusive, according to an announcement by Phil Ellsworth, secretary of the organization, and graduate manager of Occidental College.

This system has been adopted primarily of eliminating in schedules, due to allow each team to meet each other every year, although it is not compulsory, may cancel games ... not wish to meet all ... conference teams.

...has been worked on ... "round-robin" idea, ... of a "round-robin" ... traditional games, ... games rotating ... These fixed dates are ... Day, and the closing date of the season, either the Saturday before Thanksgiving, or Thanksgiving Day itself.

On Armistice Day, Occidental and Pomona will journey to Whittier on alternate years to meet the Poets in the traditional game in Ye Friendlie Citie, as has been the custom in the past. The other traditional Armistice Day game will be played in the Pasadena Rose Bowl, with the Caltech Engineers playing host to either Pomona or Occidental, whichever team is not meeting Whittier.

La Verne and Redlands will meet on Armistice Day in the third traditional game, this game to be played in alternate years on these two campuses. San Diego State will not be included in a conference Armistice Day game, as the southerners are developing a traditional game with the champions of the service teams in San Diego and they expect to make this an annual affair.

The traditional closing games of the season are Occidental vs. Pomona, Caltech vs. San Diego, and Redlands vs. Whittier. La Verne will probably arrange a traditional closing game with either Santa Barbara State or California Christian College.

Hollywood Loses First Tilt, 3-2; Nightcap Ends in Eleventh, 7-7

PORTLAND (Or.) May 3. (AP)—After taking the first game, 3 to 2, in a ninth-inning finish today, the Portland Beaver Ducks battled Hollywood to the eleventh inning of the second game with the score tied, 7-all. Trailing by four runs, the Ducks lit up Yde and Bum Weisel for four runs in the eighth to tie the count.

EMIL YDE

A rally was started by Bob Johnson, who lofted a home run into the center-field bleachers, scoring French ahead of him. Curt Fullerton started the second game, but was relieved by Chesterfield, who in turn gave way to a pinch-hitter. The latter was relieved for a pinch-hitter, and Cascarella stepped into the box in the ninth. Scores:

GLENDALE JAYSEE IN TRACK WIN

Six New Records Set in Meet Held in Driving Rain at Ontario

ONTARIO, May 3.—Carrying on in a drizzle that at times became torrential rain, Southern California junior college track-and-field stars went through the full program of events on Chaffey athletic field today, the Glendale team splashing to a close victory over Long Beach in the annual conference meet.

GEORGE JEFFERSON

Six conference records were broken and one tied, in spite of the wet condition o fthe field. Forbes of Long Beach was the star high-point man of the day, taking three first places in the shotput, the javelin and the discus, and incidentally set new records in each event.

The schools finished in the following order: Glendale, 36 3-4; Long Beach, 33 3-4; Fullerton, 27; Compton, 24 4-5; Los Angeles, 17 3-4; Riverside, 10; Pasadena, 6; Santa Ana, 5; San Bernardino, 3; Chaffey, 1; Citrus, 0; Santa Monica, 0.

The first event of the day, the mile run brought out a new record when Donahue of Santa Ana made it in 4m. 35 4-5s. The old conference mark was 4m. 28 1-2s.

Abersold of Pasadena paddled through the rain for a new record in the two-mile event, nego-

DOWNPOUR PLAYS HAVOC WITH SPORTING EVENTS

Old Man Weather played havoc with the local athletes yesterday. No less than five sporting events were postponed because of the downpour, and unless today turns out to be remarkably dry, numerous other contests are scheduled to be washed out. Yesterday's victims included:

1. The Angel-Oak game at Wrigley Field.

2. The prep track championships at L. A. High.

3. Carlo Curtis's outdoor boxing show at the White Sox Park.

4. The first game of the Trojan-Bruin baseball series.

5. The intercollegiate outboard motor races at Long Beach.

Some of today's events may be staged, but the possibilities are that they will not take place. They include:

1. Double-header at Wrigley Field.

2. Auto races at Legion speedway.

3. Polo game at Uplifters' Club.

4. Tennis tournament at L. A. Tennis Club.

5. Hollywood-Rover soccer game.

Stanford Weight Star Betters Accepted Mark

Card Hero Again Defeats Brix in Favorite Event; Hables Runs Century in 9.5 Seconds

BY RUSSELL J. NEWLAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. (AP)—Husky Harlow Rothert, Stanford University's contribution to the shot-putting ranks, achieved a long-cherished feat today when he heaved the sixteen-pound ball 52ft. 1½in. to better the recognized world's record in that event.

Competing in the Pacific Association's annual track and field meet, Rothert made his fine toss in an exhibition after winning the event in regular competition with a mark of 51ft. 10 3-4in. The recognized record is 52ft. 11-16 in. made by John Kuck of Kansas in the last Olympic Games. Rothert's mark probably will receive no official recognition as two better records have already been submitted to the International Amateur Athletic Federation.

HARLOW ROTHERT

BRIX SECOND

In winning, Rothert beat out Herman Brix of the Los Angeles Athletic Club, holder of the American record, for the fourth time this year. Brix, ineligible to compete in this meet for points as his club is not a member of the Pacific association, turned in a top mark of 50ft. 2in.

Henri Laborde, competing unattached, was next on the list with 46ft. 1 1-4in., while Robert Kleckner of St. Ignatius College gave the pellet a ride of 45ft. 3 3-4in.

Although the meet was of local character, other outstanding marks included the discus throw of 162ft. 10 1-2in. by Eric Krenz of Stanford, holder of the world's record. Krenz set the world mark of 183ft. 8 3-4in. last spring. While capable of better than 50ft. in the shot, he did not compete in that event.

The 100-yard dash produced

COLUMBUS (O.) May 3. (Exclusive)—Sixteen meet records were broken here today in the seventh Ohio State relays under the combined assault of 1200 college and track athletes. Seven were shattered on the first day's program, bringing the total of new records for the meet to twenty-three.

GEORGE SIMPSON

Tom Warne of Northwestern and George Simpson of Ohio State divided honors for the outstanding performances of the meet, Warne in the pole vault and Simpson in the 100-yard dash. Warne was believed to have cleared the bar at 14ft. in the vault, but when officials measured the poles, they were found to be untrue and his official jump was listed at 13ft. 11 1-8in.

PREP MEET POSTPONED

Committee to Pick Southland Representatives in State Meet if Rain Falls Tuesday

BY IRVING ECKHOFF

Just when everything was ready for the annual Southern California prep track-and-field meet finals yesterday afternoon at L. A. High, rain fell so hard that it washed away all chances of the meet being run off, as well as half drowning the assembled fans, competitors and officials.

The Class A meet will be held Tuesday afternoon, weather and field permitting, Seth Van Patten, director of athletics for the C. I. F., announced late last night.

The Class B and C finals will be run off next Saturday.

The A division is the one that has everybody guessing, as the finals should be run off early this week, in order to have a Southern California entry list in the State meet which is scheduled for next Saturday at Berkeley.

If the weather causes another postponement Tuesday, the meet may be staged Wednesday. However, Wednesday is the latest date, prep officials would sanction.

TO SELECT TEAM

If both Tuesday and Wednesday are washed out, a committee of three composed of Jim Reinhard, E. W. Oliver and Van Patten will select the squad to go north for the State meet.

And as the weather man is forecasting more rain, it appears as if Reinhard, Oliver and Van Patten are in for a tough time. Competition in every event is very close this year, and when it comes to selecting the four best men from each event, the best method would be to draw the names out of a hat.

No matter how you dope the meet out, the committee is in for a difficult time, if it rains.

Three Class A events were

TILDEN AND COEN WIN ITALIAN DOUBLES TITLE

MILAN, May 3. (AP)—Big Bill Tilden, the American veteran, defeated Daniel Prenn, German champion, 6-2, 6-2, 6-4, and Baron H. L. Demorpurgo of Italy won from Jacques Brugnon of France, 9-7, 6-1, 6-4, today in the semi-finals of the Italian tennis championships. Tilden and Demorpurgo meet tomorrow in the final.

BILL TILDEN

Tilden teamed with Junior Coen of Kansas City, to win the Italian doubles championship from Baron H. L. Demorpurgo and his partner, P. Gaslini, in the final match. The Americans won easily by scores of 6-0, 6-3, 6-3.

WARSAW (Poland) May 3. (AP)—Rumania gained an edge today in the Davis Cup series with Poland by winning the doubles match after splitting two singles matches yesterday. Mishu and Polleff of Rumania, teamed to beat Stolarov and Tloczkyniski of Poland, 116, 6-2, 6-3, 7-5. With a lead of two matches to one, Rumania needs to win only one of the two singles tomorrow to win the right to face Great Britain in the second round.

BOURNEMOUTH (Eng.) May 3. (AP)—Joan Fry won the hard-courts women's singles tennis championship of Great Britain today, defeating the Australian-born Mrs. W. D. List, 6-1, 2-6, 6-2.

H. W. Ahetin and J. S. Olliff teamed to win the men's doubles championship from C. C. Baines and I. H. Westcroft, 6-4, 6-2, 6-4.

L. G. H. Lee won the men's hard-court singles title, defeating E. C. Peters in four sets, 6-3, 2-6, 6-4, 6-4.

DUBLIN (Ireland) May 3. (AP)—C. Lyttleton Rogers, who flashed brilliant tennis to turn in a surprising victory over Henri Cochet of France, in the finals of the Biarritz France, in the finals, continued his fine play today as Ireland split the opening pair of singles matches with Monaco in the Davis series.

Rogers defeated V. Lundau of the tiny principality, in easy straight sets, 6-1, 6-4, 6-2. R. Galepe, of Monaco, took the other

PACHYDERMS COLLIDE IN OUTDOOR GIGANTIC HERE

Boxing Forced to Take Back Seat This Week; Wrigley Field Scene of Clash Tomorrow Night

BY PAUL LOWRY

Wrestling steals the play from boxing this week with Promoter Lou Daro's championship match between Dynamite Gus Sonnenberg and Everette Marshall at Wrigley Field tomorrow night.

It is the first outdoor mat soiree since the ten-round boxing and wrestling bill was passed over five years ago. Daro the Great has hinted, but this is the first time he has led the patrons of the great art as practiced by the pachyderms into the promised land.

Sonnenberg, the champion, has held the title since he took it from Ed (Strangler) Lewis in a Boston ring a year ago last January.

He literally butted Lewis out of the title, and has successfully defended it ever since—even at the hands of the redoubtable Lewis.

One of those defenses against the famous and terrible Lewis headlock was made in a Los Angeles ring, and on the card that night there appeared an obscure blond boy wrestling in a preliminary.

This was late last fall—October 23—and there wasn't much ado about a victory by the young blond over Don De Laun. All the hullabaloo was devoted to the terrific argument over whether or not Lewis regained his title when Sonnenberg was assisted back into the ring after he missed a tackle and dove into the press row.

But the young blond, unheeded and unsung, was to be heard from later.

He continued to win his matches, and culminated an unbroken string of wins in Los Angeles by tipping the old warhorse, Lewis, two weeks ago.

Daro had promised the winner a match with Sonnenberg for the title, and tomorrow Marshall gets his chance.

And by virtue of his splendid record the past few months the young blond is the favorite to wrest the crown from Sonnenberg, the former all-American football player.

If Marshall wins his rise to the throne will be unprecedented.

His case offers no parallel for rapid arrival in the ranks of the chosen.

He has bounded to the top from comparative obscurity in six months' time.

PREDICT RECORD GATE

Estimates of the "gate" run all the way from $75,000 to $150,000.

If it hits the latter figure all records in wrestling history will be broken.

Daro would like to see it reach the top sum for more than one reason. His biggest yen is to beat the best local fight "gate," the $150,000 one hung up by Mickey Walker and Ace Hudkins in their middleweight championship clash last fall.

The Walker-Hudkins "gate" established a new State record, although there were more people at the Godfrey-Usendun fight two years ago. The difference in prices helped the Walker affair. Tops of $15 prevailed, whereas $5 bought the best seats for the Godfrey-Usendun bout, when 40,000 paid $125,000 to see the big black and the upside-down guy step ten rounds.

SHADE FIGHTS HECTOR

Although the wrestling match figures to get all the play tomorrow night the Olympic follows a night later with a fight between Dave Shade and Mike Hector.

This is looked upon as a warm-up affair for Shade, who is to meet Ace Hudkins on the 20th inst.

Hector looked pretty good in beating Joe Cardosa in consecutive weeks, and the old war dog of the navy may give Shade more of a workout than he expects.

With the mat battle out of the way the Olympic management clears decks for the Wrigley all-heavyweight card the following Monday night.

There is more back of the two ten-round fights between Jim Maloney of Boston and Armand Emanuel of San Francisco in one half of the bill and Frankie Campbell and Les Kennedy in the other half than the p. a. has admitted to date.

If Maloney repeats his Boston knockout of Emanuel and Campbell cold-socks Kennedy with his devastating right the way is paved for another ball park show.

Irish Maloney and Eyetalian Campbell will be the parties of the first part.

Of course, both the Messrs. Emanuel and Kennedy have different ideas about the matter. Emanuel claims he will prove he was fouled at Boston, and Kennedy alleges he always did have the Indian sign on Campbell, and that was the reason Campbell ducked him so long.

Berkeley Cops Prep Honors

PALO ALTO, May 3. (AP)—Berkeley High School piled up 29 points and established a new record in the twelve-pound shot put today to win the annual north coast section, California Interscholastic Federation track and field championship from fifteen other teams in Stanford Stadium.

San Jose placed second with 19½ points, while Watsonville was third with 17½.

Another record was shattered when Dickinson of Sequoia High School, Redwood City, threw the javelin 185ft. The old mark was 183ft. 11in. Dickinson's best throw was 187ft. 3½in., but it was disallowed by the judges, who ruled a strong wind aided the Sequoia High School boy in the toss.

Varied Types to Tangle on Bout Program

Promoter Jack Doyle's heavyweight carnival at Wrigley Field represents four different types of fighters in the two ten-round bouts. They are also four different nationalities.

Jim Maloney is a club fighter, and Irish. Armand Emanuel is a great boxer, and Jewish. Frankie Campbell is a slugger, and Italian. Les Kennedy is a counter-puncher, and French-Canadian.

All have known what hard work is. Maloney roughed it in the middle west States between the ages of 14 and 20. He worked the cattle ranches, the wheat harvest and did farm-hand duty in general for six years.

Emanuel's father, Charley, was a contractor and builder. Armand used to work on the crew as a lather and plasterer. He is now a lawyer.

Campbell has done all sorts of hard work on ranches and otherwise around the San Francisco docks.

Kennedy has been a farmer, zinc miner, longshoreman and oil field worker.

Maloney has made the most money out of the prize ring with Emanuel running second. Neither Campbell nor Kennedy has any bank account to speak of yet.

In four years Maloney drew $500,000 in gates in Boston and New York. In eight fights alone at the Boston ball park he headlined before 295,000 people.

The Irishman's biggest purses were for the Jack Delaney and Jack Sharkey bouts in New York. He was paid $50,000 for one and $51,000 for the other.

Today Maloney is worth close to $200,000. He is married and has three children.

Emanuel has made close to $100,000 in the time he has been fighting. His largest purses were for the Mickey Walker and Tommy Loughran shots. But the Emanuels travel as a family and are good spenders.

Campbell came near being a baseball player instead of a fighter. He was offered a contract with the Missions in the Coast League in 1926, but passed it up to continue fighting. Frankie is married and has a baby boy only a few months old.

Campbell has his "pile of gold" to make yet. He has a splendid start. With twelve straight knockouts back of him he can step out and make over $100,000 in a year if he can maintain the knockout pace.

Kennedy, who has lost but one fight in California since he started about two years ago, has fought for small purses. He was handling pipe in the Long Beach oil field not so long ago.

Chronicle to Put on Shoot

SAN FRANCISCO, May 3. (Exclusive)—The ninth annual charity merchandise trap-shooting tournament of the San Francisco Chronicle, which is sponsored by the Golden Gate Gun Club, will be held Sunday, the 11th inst., at the West Alameda grounds. Because of the increased interest in shooting, it is expected that last year's entry record of 807 shooters will be broken.

The San Francisco Boys' Club will be the beneficiary of all the profits of the shoot. Donations have been solicited from sportsmen in general and there will be a merchandise order for each one who shoots.

In addition, there will be a free event for the boys and girls, with a high gun trophy in each class. There is no charge for this event and guns and ammunition will be furnished contestants.

HECTOR BATTLES SHADE

Veteran Middleweight Runs Into One of Walker's Two Leading Contenders Tuesday

Mike Hector—sweeping along at a better stride than ever before—has fought himself into a tough argument.

The argument is Dave Shade, rip-tearing, bobbing, devil-may-care middleweight contender. Shade was in the midst of a training grind for an Ace Hudkins indoor gigantic at Soper's ranch when offered another fight in between.

"Why not—sure—I'll fight anybody, any time, any place," spoke Shade's rushing voice over the telephone.

Dave Shade

That is typical of Shade. No dare is too great for him to take, no hurdle too hazardous.

To Shade the fight Tuesday night is a warm-up for Hudkins. But to Hector it is the most important fight he ever had.

Few know the real Hector. He is known to the fans as a tough, rough fellow who hits to hurt and bang.

The real Hector is a gentle-voiced man of 27, polished by hard knocks as they come and go. Mike has had his share. His fellow-fighters call Hector the "man who can't say no."

He will give away his money if somebody else needs it worse than he does. He will go out of his way to do anybody a favor.

The fighters, who really know Hector, are pleased that he is getting a "break" coming his way just now.

He won a great action fight from Joe Cordosa in a six two weeks ago. Last week he came back to give Cordosa terrific punishment in a ten-round main event in a rematch.

Mike was packing a grip for Nogales to fight Joe Peregrina today in the bull ring when Dutch Myers switched plans and booked him with Shade—the admitted bad man of the middles.

The Nogales date was canceled. They have no boxing commissions across the border. He'll probably go through with that one a week after he fights Shade.

Shade is taking a fair-sized gamble. Hector in his present stride may upset the Hudkins cards which is to lead to a title bout with Mickey Walker either for Ace or David.

There have been bigger upsets. Shade has won seven straight fights in California. They called the Joe Anderson bout a draw, but it was generally agreed Shade had an edge in a great fight.

HUSKIES COP HONORS IN RELAY CARNIVAL

Forty Rounds on Hollywood Fight Program

A new wrinkle for the Hollywood American Legion Stadium will be introduced Friday night when Manager Tom Gallery presents forty rounds of boxing for Film City fight fans. It will be the first time in the history of the Hollywood club that such a card has been staged. Two ten-rounders, an eight and three fours are scheduled by the stadium. Ernie Owens, a local heavyweight, meets Royal Dutch Elliott, former amateur champion on the Coast, in one of the tens while Eddie Roberts battles Joe Cordosa in the other feature over the same route.

Owens recently came through one of the toughest fights ever held at the Olympic. He dropped the nod to Max Baer by a close margin after a smashing ten-round fight. Right at this time the downtown arena is attempting to stage a rematch between the pair if it can be arranged. Owens seems to be going better now than ever before in his career.

In the other Legion ten Eddie Roberts, the boy who hung a kayo on Joe Dundee in a nontitle fight when the latter was welter champion, faces Joe Cordosa, the Wild Bull of Culver City who again seems to be on the upgrade in the fight racket.

In the eight-rounder arranged by Gallery, Tom Gardner fights Augie De Mille. De Mille, fresh from a victory over Tommy McGough, is ready to bounce into the main-event class in the bigger clubs, his handlers claim.

Three four-rounders bring the following boxers together; Stuts Houck faces Red Gardener, they are 162 pounders; Bobbie Flores meets Eddie Neal, an up and coming 122-pounder; Lucky Baldwin tackles Young Papke. The last named are lightweights.

MARSHALL IS CONFIDENT OF WINNING MAT CROWN

Youthful Challenger in Great Shape for Championship Tilt Tomorrow Night With Gus Sonnenberg

BY RALPH HUSTON

Confident of his own ability, but not underestimating foe's prowess, Everett Oldham Marshall will step into the Wrigley Field tomorrow night, on the threshhold of attaining life's ambition.. The young Colorado wrestler, who pays Glendale as his home town, will meet Gus Sonnenberg in heavyweight wrestling championship of the world.

For fifteen years, Marshall has looked forward to tomorrow night's encounter. For eight years he has done nothing but train himself for his best effort. He says he is ready—that he will win.

"I've been looking forward to this as long as I can remember, almost," Marshall said the other day. "I guess all of you know about me—there's been quite a bit written. And every word of it's true. Frank Gotch has been my idol ever since I was a youngster. I've tried to pattern myself after him. I want to be a great wrestling champion, just as he was. I think I can beat Sonnenberg tomorrow night. But if I don't—well, that won't stop me from coming back again, and again until I do win it. I've set my heart on winning the title, and I'll never stop until I have won it.

SAW CHAMPION

"I've only seen Sonnenberg wrestle once. He met Ed Lewis the same night I wrestled Don DeLaun at the Olympic. I threw DeLaun as quickly as I could, then dressed and hurried back to a ringside seat to watch the champion. I try to see every good wrestler there is. I had some good teachers in the seven years I wrestled as an amateur, but you know, there's always something new in this game. Every time I see a match, I learn something.

"For instance, I learned the backward body slam by watching Joe Malcewicz in action. I don't mean by that that I claim to be an expert with the body slam, such as Joe is. But I saw him use it here a couple of times. The next day I went to a gym, and tried it out on my trainers. I became fairly adept at the hold, and got to know when my opponent and I were in the proper positions for its use. While I rely on my airplane spin, and various arm holds, I try to be ready for anything, and to take advantage of any opportunity that presents itself.

"When I wrestled Ed Lewis, I couldn't use my spin. But I found an opening for the backward body slam, and because I had trained myself to be ready for anything, I promptly applied the hold and won.

"That's the way I feel about Sonnenberg. I've seen him once, and although I haven't tried to copy his famous flying tackle, I've had my trainers try it on me, and I've figured out a defense that I think will prove effective.

"I don't think Sonnenberg will rely on his tackle alone. He's too smart; and you've got to be smart in this business. But I'll have to be alert every minute, because I don't know exactly what to expect. A man as big, and heavy and as fast as he is, always dangerous, and the entire match may hinge on one false move.

"Personally, I think I'm in perfect condition. You know, I never break training, and I'm always ready to take on twelve hours notice. But I have trained hard for this match. I think I'll weigh about 212 pounds, which is more than Sonnenberg will come in at. My muscles are hard now, but when I tighten them, but last, they're soft and flabby. It gives me speed, and power as much as strength, if not more in wrestling.

"I've had my trainers by me, both with their heads specially constructed bottoms. I've managed to dodge them, else to take them on by my of course, they can't overpower Sonnenberg's speed or ability.

"I think I'll win tonight. And if I do, I'm going to a kind of champion that Gus Sonnenberg have been. I'll every challenger, and I'll do till somebody beats me. But I'll try to come back. But you one thing, if Sonnenberg me tomorrow night, he will in a rematch, if I can get because if I do get beat, I'll reason why, and I'll Tuesday correcting enabled him to win, and I'll pared for something next time."

Marshall wound up his yesterday. Both his mother are here to see his first bid for the title. berg intends to take a out today, and expects to the arena at about

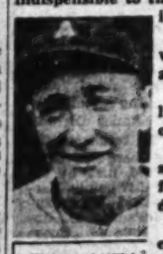
RABBIT PUNCHES

By Paul Lowry

PINS ARE EVERYTHING

DRAW up a chair and get an earful on legs by Fred Haney of our Angels. Not the kind of limbs that go twinkling down the street and cause those of the sterner sex to rubber and scratch their chins in meditation.

But the legs that make and break an athlete, legs that are indispensible to those who devote their lives to baseball and boxing in particular.



FRED HANEY

"Why do some baseball players' legs give way so much more quickly than others?" we asked Mr. Haney the other day.

"Assuming that the player leads a temperate life," he replied, "it's because he lets down in the off season.

"Take the big leaguer, for example. For six months he uses his legs to the extreme. And for six more months he is left to his own devices.

"The smart player will continue daily exercise and keep his legs in trim. The chap who doesn't use his noodle takes a soft job—perhaps an office position—and rides to work.

"Many a man has dropped to the minors because his speed slowed up after only a few seasons in the big loop. Legs did it.

"Some of the boys wonder why Ty Cobb stayed on top for over twenty years and held his speed. Ty was smart. In the off season he tramped the Georgia woods on hunting excursions. His legs were always in fine shape.

"Of course, Ty couldn't have retained his tremendous pace so long had he been an infielder. In the outfield Ty wasn't subject to spike thrusts around the bases, and the best of 'em get it at some time or other. That's a chance you have to take. Let a base runner bluff you away from the bag once, and you're done for.

"Those spike wounds lay you up and slow you up. Ty didn't have to worry about that in the outfield. He was the hazard to the other fellow.

THE DEMPSEY LEGS

"THE same theory applies to fighters.

"Dempsey at 35 wouldn't be shot if it wasn't that his legs are gone.

"The Dempsey who fought Carpentier would have annihilated Tunney.

"Dempsey has always been my idol as a fighter, but he was a sorry substitution for the old Dempsey at Chicago.

"I saw both those bouts, and the comparison was appalling.

"Why should Cobb stay in the big time till 40 and Dempsey shoot his wad at 30?

"Just legs and their proper care.

"Prizefighters are worse than ball players in this respect.

"They lay off between fights and don't do a thing to keep themselves in shape, but frequently do much to tear down their constitutions.

"When they sign for another fight, they have to start in rebuilding waste tissues.

"You can do that just so many years, and then you're through."

LEAN SET-DOWN RECORD

HANEY is a scrappy, aggressive player, and no cry baby.

But recently there appeared a story in the public prints which he considered unfair.

No resentment in his heart toward the writer, you understand, but rather a deep sting that he had been unjustly accused.

He was hailed as a trouble maker on the Angel club, a dissenter, a brewer of discord.

"They can rap my playing, knock my batting, kick about my fielding, but the other I can't down.

"I never had that kind of a record in the big leagues, and I hope never to live up to one in the home town where I got my start.

"As a matter of fact when I was put out of the game the other day for protesting a decision at the plate it was the first time in eight years.

"The last time I was set down it was in a game between Detroit and St. Louis.

"The regular umpires had missed train connections, so the managers agreed on two coaches from the respective clubs.

"That was a bum deal for me. I kicked on a decision at the plate similar to the one against Oakland the other day. I was run from the game and Ban Johnson set me down ten days and fined me $100. Also Ty Cobb, who joined in the protest. Johnson said the decision was unusually severe because the regular umpires weren't on duty.

DENIES CAPTAINCY

"BUT the point I'm getting at is this:

"How can you say a man is a troublemaker who sticks with a club six years? I was with Detroit for that period. Or that he is a chronic kicker, hard to get along with, when his record is two set-downs in eight years.

"Anyway I am not captain of the Los Angeles baseball club. That's another misrepresentation.

"None has ever been appointed. One day when Lelivelt was 'run' from the sidelines he asked me to handle the club in his absence.

"In his absence that day, mind you. The period was two and one-half innings. I have never been captain any other time.

"It's hardly fair to accuse me of bossing the fellows on the field when I'm not the captain. That's Lelivelt's job, and he's handling it to everybody's satisfaction."

LOCAL PRODUCT

HANEY is a real dyed-in-the-wool product of local high-school baseball. He and his brothers all were crack Poly athletes.

Fred starred there until the war broke out. Then he entered the Navy.

In 1919 he needed the $3.50 per day the Los Angeles club was paying its rookies. He took a flyer at spring training, and made good.

He caught on with the Angels for a season, but was shipped to Omaha in 1920.

From there he hopped to the big leagues, and was with Detroit six years, Boston two and one-half, the Cubs half a season and Indianapolis last year.

He came home to the Angels about the middle of the 1929 season, asking to be sent here.

And he says he expects to stay here until his playing days are over. Haney is 31, and he figures he has four or five more good years in his system.

Then to the insurance game, which he already handles on the side.

WORKS MAGIC AS MANAGER

Introducing Carl Zamloch, the versatile skipper of the Oakland Acorns, who has his club making a bid for the pennant in this, his first season as manager in the Coast League. Zamloch has divided up his career as a pitcher, utility man, first baseman, college baseball and soccer coach, semipro manager, magician, showman and bond salesman and believes that he now has the qualifications to make a successful manager. Baseball is a show, claims Zamloch, and that's why he has outfitted his Oaks in those loud uniforms of theirs.

CARL ZAMLOCH, NEW PILOT OF OAKS, ONCE MAGICIAN, AND STILL IS SHOWMAN

BY BOB RAY

"The baseball diamond is just a stage and you have to put on a show to please the fans."

That's the way Carl Zamloch, popular new manager of the league-leading Oakland Acorns, sums up this baseball business, with which he has been associated for the past twenty years, more or less.

"You know my dad used to be quite a magician, and I used to travel around with him and learned a little about showmanship. I claim that you must amuse the fans as well as give them baseball, and that's just what the Oaks are trying to do. That's one reason why they're outfitted in those loud uniforms. They catch the eye and the fans like it."

Zamloch picked up a lot of tricks of legerdemain from his father and Coast League followers are wondering if he has used some of the magic to lift the Oaks up into the league leadership. Before the race started the Acorns weren't given a tumble by the experts, but now they're leading the procession and looking for all the world as though they'll stay there.

The Oakland pilot has been in a lot of different rackets since he first broke into organized baseball back in 1911, and he believes that he learned something from each occupation that will help him in his managerial duties. Zamroch has been a pitcher, utility man, first baseman and manager in professional ball, has bossed semipro teams, coached baseball and soccer at the University of California, was a bond salesman and has been a magician and showman. He's toured all over the country, been in all the leagues from the majors to Class D and even played ball in Japan.

And speaking of Japan, Zamloch once made a tour of Nippon with professional barnstormers led by Gene Doyle, now the publicity purveyor of the Hollywood Legion Stadium, and twice took the University of California nine over to the land of cherry blossoms.

"There's a mint of money to be made out of baseball in Japan," says Zamloch. "Why, they draw crowds of 90,000 to high school games over there. Just think how they'd go for professional ball. Say a six-club league with teams in the largest cities, which have populations of over 1,000,000. Nothing but short jumps. Yes, sir, somebody is going to develop big-league baseball in Japan and get rich."

Zamloch started his professional baseball career with Sacramento in 1911. From there he went to the Seals and later drifted to Missoula in the old Union Association. Zamloch and Joe Bush were both pitchers on the Missoula club and the two of them worked in two-thirds of the team's games. Zamloch won thirty-six games and lost twelve and was purchased by the Detroit Tigers. The Detroit scout that bought Zamloch also looked over Bush and decided he'd never amount to much. Bush went to the Athletics and enjoyed a lengthy career in the majors while Zamloch lasted two seasons with Detroit.

The strain on his arm during that big year at Missoula began to tell and Zamloch began to lose his effectiveness as a hurler. From Detroit he went to Providence in the International League, then to Denver in the western circuit and finally wound up at Spokane in 1916. In 1915 Zamloch began playing the utility role but he gradually developed into a first-sacker.

After a stretch in the Army during the war, Zamloch joined the Seals, but in 1920 he was traded to Seattle. The year 1921 found him with Calgary, which was his last as an active player. He did manage the Twin Falls club in 1926, his team losing the pennant by a half-game.

Zamloch also has piloted semi-pro outfits and teams in the old Outlaw San Joaquin Valley League. Never has a team managed by him finished lower than second place, which is some record in itself.

During his long stay as California coach, Zamloch's ball teams won eleven out of fourteen series from Stanford and had won their last nine straight games from the Cards when he quit to take over the job of managing the Oaks.

Zamloch started coaching the California baseball teams in 1916, but it wasn't until 1922 that he was hired as a full-time coach. Before that Carl used to coach the baseballers, get himself in shape, and then go off and join the ball club he was to play with that season. As a year-round coach Zamloch also used to guide the Bear soccer teams.

team again next fall. His gridiron career started in 1908.

GOLF. John Ball of England, finished sixth in the British open championship when he was 18 years of age, and won the amateur title for the eighth time thirty-four years later! Mrs. Caleb Fox, "The Grand Old Lady of Golf," was a prominent figure at every important women's golf match in America for thirty-four years. She qualified for the national championship twenty-three times, but never won the title. Men in the eighties play golf frequently, and there is no reason why Bobby Jones, who could shoot in the 60's when he was 13, should not continue to win major championships for forty years.

TENNIS. "Ma" Bundy and Mrs. Wightman have been winning tournaments in this country for around twenty-five years, but an English girl, Miss Bingley, who later became Mrs. Hillyard, first won at Wimbledon in 1886 and was still playing in the championship in 1912, twenty-six years later. King Gustav of Sweden plays regularly on the Riviera and he is 72. So Tilden may look forward to thirty-five years more!

WRESTLING. "Grandpa" Zybsko won the heavyweight title when he was past 50. He and Poddubney met in a terrific mat encounter in 1906, and again twenty years later.

TRACK AND FIELD. Some runners improve with age. De Mar's seventh Boston marathon victory was his fastest. Pat McDonald and Matt McGrath, famous New York "Whales," are both over 54, and still win weight-throwing championships for the New York, A. C.

It would seem that the life of an athlete is longest in golf.

LENGTHY INTERVAL

"Rabbit" Maranville, veteran major-league shortstop, boasts the unusual distinction of playing in two world series fourteen years apart.

BUCS BATTERED

PITTSBURGH, May 3. (AP)—Boston made it two out of three for the series from Pittsburgh today, winning the odd game, 12 to 7. Burleigh Grimes, veteran spitball pitcher who went to Boston from Pittsburgh just before the season opened, started for the Braves but was driven from the mound in the first inning when the Bugs scored four runs without a man retired. It all happened after Boston had given Grimes a five-run lead. Cunningham, who succeeded Burleigh, pitched good ball. Score:

More Than 49,000 Youngsters Registered for Junior Olympic Games in South

ENROLLMENT FAR AHEAD OF LAST YEAR'S TOTAL

Increase of 15,000 Youngsters Over 1929 Shows How Coaches Value Athletic Program

BY BRAVEN DYER

Apparently there's no stopping the growth of the Junior Olympic Games in Southern California! Figures just compiled by Miss Helen Regan, efficient secretary of the executive committee, reveal that more than 49,000 boys are entered in the 1930 program.

This tremendous increase is phenomenal when it is considered that the program is only in its third year in this section and that absolutely no concerted effort has been made to enroll youngsters in the juvenile pentathlon.

BRAVEN DYER.

In 1928 the entries numbered 25,000. Last year, the total jumped to 34,000. This season's increase of approximately 15,000 indicates what a hold the program has taken on the youngsters of Southern California. It also shows to what extent coaches of athletic teams value the Junior Olympic Games.

Undoubtedly increased interest in track and field athletics, due to the running of the Olympic Games in Los Angeles in 1932, has helped to generate enthusiasm for the Junior Olympics.

Also the fact that three of last year's champions were ineligible for this season's competition impressed upon all youngsters the fact that they had an even chance of winning the championship and thereby gaining that final reward—the twenty-eight-day ocean voyage from New York to Latin America and Los Angeles.

Southern California has made a wonderful showing nationally in the games thus far and it is to be hoped that this year's crop of youngsters will be able to keep up the good work. In 1926 Johnny Falcon of Azusa won the senior championship, while Mushy Pollock of San Diego was victorious among the juniors.

Last year Robert San Jose of San Pedro copped the senior title, closely followed by Fernando Ramos of Los Angeles. Vane Baker of Huntington Park was crowned king of 'em all in the junior division and following him was Jerry Deal of Los Angeles.

Following are the figures by sections showing the great increase in enrollment:

San Bernardino county	2,200
Santa Barbara county	1,150

JUNIOR OLYMPIC GAMES Training Tips

BY BOYD COMSTOCK

BOYS competing in the Southern California Junior Olympic Games probably find themselves facing the question: "What will the Junior Olympic Games do for me?" Undoubtedly this query pops into their minds from time to time. Aside from building the contestants into better physical specimens the Junior Olympic Games train America's youngsters in the art of self-control, the practice of good sportsmanship and the ability to come through in a pinch.

The games also offer boys an opportunity to better their knowledge of the world, in that exceptionally attractive trips are the reward going to the winners. This year, The Times is sending the four leading Southern California boys to Latin America. Last season Vane Baker, Jerry Deal, Bob San Jose and Fernando Ramos had a month's vacation ocean voyage to the Hawaiian Islands. When the journey was over all four declared they wouldn't trade the experience for any amount of money.

Ramos is making a name for himself as a high-school athlete in track this year. Deal is playing baseball and making good at it. San Jose is helping Arthur Dietz train Junior Olympic Games contestants at Anderson Memorial Playground in San Pedro. In addition he is president of his school student body.

Then there is the case of Tony Galasso. Tony was a raw youngster, "just a playground boy," when, in 1927, he became interested in the Junior Olympic Games. He had a good physique but it was not developed. He started in the contest merely for sport and recreation. Then he took it more seriously. He did some light training, paid some attention to diet and hours, began more intensive practice in each of the five events.

The result is obvious: Tony won the 1927 senior championship, then returned home to San Diego, where he speedily became one of the best second-basemen at his high school; went in for varsity basketball with success; gave local exhibitions of strength and skill; became an assistant on the local playgrounds and now plans to take up professional baseball.

And it is to the Junior Olympic Games that he gives all credit for his record.

Here are the actual figures on what the games did for him physically, the figures on the left showing his measurements before the time he entered the games and those at the right denominating his present measurements:

113	Weight	128
5 2½	Height	5 5
11	Biceps	12½
32	Chest	36
17	Thigh	19½
13	Calf	15

And then, there is Johnny Falcon of Los Angeles, 1928 national champion. Johnny was sent to Europe by The Times for six weeks to the International Olympic Games, as a spectator, of course, for his victory.

And he says:

"It would be impossible for me to express how much the Junior Olympics have meant to me. Travel, training, education, pleasure, honor—all these have been given me by the games. I shall never be able to repay the debt of gratitude I owe this splendid institution.

"Before I visited six foreign countries I had never traveled except from my home town of Azusa to Los Angeles. Even now, it seems so good that it might have been a pleasant dream.

"Another great benefit the games gave me is that of social training. Coming from a humble home you can imagine that I knew little of etiquette. But it was not long before I was able to meet people of world renown with proper decorum.

"Besides helping me socially and mentally, the Junior Olympic Games have aided me physically. Although I have always been athletically inclined I certainly would never have developed my physique to the point had I not entered the games. This benefit can be gained by every contestant, whether he wins or loses.

"The last thing I might mention which the Junior Olympics have given me is something to which every normal person aspires—honor. Yet the fact that I am a national champion and am looked up to by my schoolmates does not give me reason to boast. Boasting is something I have tried to avoid. I believe that a winner should, above all, try to be a good sport—and a good sport does not brag about his good luck. He tries to take it gracefully."

Every boy in Southern California has the same chance as had both Galasso and Falcon, through the Junior Olympic Games.

IRONS, McKEE WIN SCHOOL CHAMPIONSHIP

Billy Irons and Frank McKee earned the distinction of being the Junior Olympic champions of the Monrovia - Arcadia - Duarte High School, as a result of their victories in the senior and junior division of the school finals held last week. Bryce Hayes and Harry Birk were the runners-up.

WINNERS ANNOUNCED IN TERMINAL ISLAND FINALS

Henry High won first honors in the senior division last week in the Terminal Island district finals, according to a report sent in by Coach Beatrice S. Hodgson. Robert Hodgson placed second to high. First honors in the junior section went to Jewell Legaspi. His brother Stanley Legaspi finished second. Roy O'Hara, Teso Koda and Mike Bonella were the other high placers.

PAROCHIAL SCHOOLS IN UNIT MEETS THIS WEEK

Under the direction of Miss A. McNamara, physical-education director, parochial schools of Los Angeles have been busy preparing for unit meets which are to be staged in the Junior Olympic Games competition this week. First of these matches is slated for Wednesday.

Among the schools entered are St. Aloysius, St. Vincent's, St. Columbkill, St. John's and St. Matthias.

SHOWERS HALT MEETS ON PLAYGROUNDS

Yesterday's showers halted practically all Junior Olympic Games meets scheduled. Programs billed for yesterday have been put over until next Saturday. At Downey Playground R. Villalovas of Yale Field won the senior title with 367 points. Coseido, McIntire, Doyle and Peters followed and will take part in the playground finals a week from Saturday. Among the juniors Kenneth Washington was first with 342 points, followed by Maddux, Bernardino, Mazzari and J. Maddux.

City school youngsters, competing on the same field, moved into the school finals, also slated for a week from Saturday. Bowers and Reimer of Sierra Park won the senior and junior titles with 340 and 270 points respectively.

SANTA BARBARA CITY MEET NEXT WEDNESDAY

JOHN WALLIS MAKES GOOD MARKS IN SCHOOL FINALS

One of the best scores turned in this year is that of Coach Oakely Morris's protege John Wallis. Wallis chalked up 566 points last week in the South Pasadena Junior High School finals. Morris reports that his brilliant young athlete chinned himself 32 times and tossed the baseball 246ft. in winning the meet. Both of these marks are exceptionally good for seniors. John Alexander, Wilburn Anderson and Eddie Connoly all scored better than 400 points in the senior division.

Mat O'Conner won the junior division with 367 points. Leo Feder, Robert Noble, Wayland Avery and Peter Di Gesu followed close behind the winner.

Eddie Connoly, student executive, writes that the district finals will be held on the 17th inst., at the South Pasadena Junior High School, the first event getting under way at 9:30.

LOCKWOOD, FRABASILI WIN HONORS IN MEET

First place in the senior division of the junior Olympic district finals held at the Woodrow Wilson School in Glendale last week, was won by Ralph Lockwood. Mike Frabasilio took first honors in the junior division, according to word received from Coach R. DeMandel yesterday.

CISSELL, SIMMONS SET PACE

Pair Tied for American Loop Batting Lead With .432 Averages

CHICAGO, May 3. (AP)—Hitting at a .432 pace, Al Simmons of the Philadelphia Athletics and Bill (Spider) Cissell, lead-off man for the White Sox, have taken a joint lead in the race for batting honors in the American League.

BILL CISSELL

Unofficial averages, including games of Wednesday, reveal that the two swatsmiths have been at bat officially forty-four times and each has rapped out nineteen safe blows. Simmons's performance excels that of the White Sox second baseman, however, as he has hit for a total of thirty-five bases, scored ten runs and batted in eighteen. Cissell has accounted for twenty-five bases with his hits, but drove in only five runs.

Charlie Jamieson, Cleveland outfielder, who led the race at the end of last week, dropped from a .533 average to .385, good for second place, the unofficial averages disclosed.

Most of the other ten leaders were veterans. After Simmons, Cissell and Jamieson they were: McManus, Detroit, .380; Myer, Washington, .380; Rice, Washington, .380; Seeds, Cleveland, .375; Cochrane, Philadelphia, .364; Fonseca, Cleveland, .355, and Oliver, Boston, .350.

Women Qualify Tomorrow for Southern California Championship

MRS. PRESSLER DEFENDS CROWN AT SAN GABRIEL

Hopes to Annex Third Crown in as Many Years; Fine Field Enters Annual Match Play Event

BY EDWARD LAWRENCE

It will take a heart as stout as the oaks that guard San Gabriel's fairways to keep Mrs. Leona Pressler from winning the Southern California women's championship for the third year in a row.

Mrs. George M. Midgley, chairman of the women's auxiliary, reports a very sad state of affairs as Mrs. Pressler prepares to defend her title in the eighteen-hole qualifying round tomorrow. Mrs. Midgley played with Mrs. Pressler the other day, and it seems that the Southern California champion had to be content with a 72. Tough, isn't it.

HELEN LAWSON

MISS LAWSON ENTERS

A field fully as fine as that which played in the California State championship last month at Wilshire is expected with the entry likely to be well over the 100 mark.

Miss Helen Lawson of Wilshire, who went to the finals of the State tournament, is entered and should give a good account of herself. She lacks both Mrs. Pressler's finished game and experience, but has courage in abundance. Time should make her a really great golfer.

Mrs. George M. Lewis of the Los Angeles Country Club scored a brilliant victory to win her club championship a short time ago. She has entered along with Miss Margaret Cameron of Flintridge, another fine match player.

Other noted women golfers who will play are Mrs. Mark Steele of San Gabriel, Mrs. Roy Green of California, Mrs. C. J. Woerner of Los Angeles, Mrs. E. S. Browne of Lakeside, Miss Beatrice Gottlieb of Los Angeles, Mrs. Chris Rayser of Fox Hills and Mrs. F. M. Slade of California.

San Gabriel is conveniently located for women golfers in the eastern division, which will be well represented.

Reports that Mrs. Gregg Lifur of Riviera may not play in the Southern California tournament appear to be a bit premature, as the brilliant former champion has yet to officially make a statement to that effect. Unless she is ill it is a good bet that Mrs. Lifur will be on the first tee.

MIXED FOURSOMES

Mrs. George Midgley complimented San Gabriel officials on the courtesies extended the women golfers. Everything has been done to make the tournament a success and the Mission Club once more adds to its reputation for hospitality.

Trophies for the mixed foursomes, which will be played a week from today following the tournament, were presented by San Gabriel and there will be no entry fee.

No postponement is expected on account of rain, as the weather man has promised fair weather tomorrow. The qualifying round will go on as scheduled even if it should shower, however, providing the course is playable.

Mrs. Pressler will be the first to leave the tee tomorrow in company with Mrs. Brown.

Following are the pairings:

9:30—Mrs. Leona Pressler and Mrs. E. S. Brown.
9:35—Miss Beatrice Gottlieb and Miss Helen Lamont.

MIDWICK OFFICIALS PREPARE FOR SCOTCH FOURSOME EVENT

FAY COLEMAN

Officials of the Midwick Country Club are busily engaged these days preparing to take care of a large entry for the annual Scotch foursome tournament, scheduled for the week-end of the 15th to 18th inst. It was announced yesterday that the course will be open for practice rounds on Monday and Tuesday, the 12th and 13th inst. A Midwick team has not won the championship since 1927 when W. D. Campbell and Norbert Murray copped the silverware. Interest is keen this year, according to reports, and several strong Midwick teams are entered. Fay and Lester Coleman of the California Country Club, 1928 and 1929 champions, will defend the title. The tournament is open to golfers of all clubs in the Southern California Golf Association who have handicaps of eight and under. Clubs are urged to make entries as soon as possible by calling either ANgelus 1166, or Terrace 2161.

SANTA MONICA REVAMPED

Municipal Course Being Severely Trapped for Professional Golf Championship

SANTA MONICA, May 3. (Exclusive)—With old traps deepened and many new ones placed where they will have a devastating effect on shots that stray from the straight-and-narrow, and with some of the tees set back so far that only long hitters will have an even break with Old Man Par, Santa Monica's municipal golf course at Clover Field is rapidly rounding into shape to be a real test for the annual tournament of the Pacific Southwest Professional Golf Association, starting on the 12th inst. A small army of workmen under "Pop" Merritt, who built the course, has been carrying out the changes. The lengthened fairways are now being put in shape with a fine crop of grass.

WILLIE I. HUNTER.

Forty pros are expected to tee off in the qualifying rounds a week from Monday, according to Pat Patterson, secretary of the association. They include such greats of the game as Willie Hunter, Olin and Mortie Dutra, Louis Scott, Vic D'Alberto, Tom Stephens and others of the Pacific Southwest. Great glory and considerable cash goes to the victor.

The thirty-two low qualifiers will make up the championship flight and match play will go on daily, with the exception of Saturday, until the finals on Sunday, the 18th inst. Because of the exceptionally fine layout at Clover Field for spectators, George Basil, manager, has made special arrangements to accommodate large crowds throughout the tournament. Scoring and ticket sales have been taken over by the ladies' organization at the course.

Tickets will be sold at $3 for the entire week, or $1 admission for a single day. The course will not be closed to public play during the tournament save at starting time for the pros.

FINE ENTRY IN CATALINA PLAY

Three-Day Tournament Next for Women Golfers

AVALON (Catalina Island) May 3. (Exclusive)—Mrs. Leona Pressler, California and Southern California woman golf champion, is picked as the favorite to win the annual Catalina invitation tournament for women the 25th to 27th inst. There are, however, many who favor the chances of the young Wilshire player, Miss Helen Lawson.

MRS. ROY GREEN

In the recent State championship Miss Lawson met Mrs. Pressler in the finals. The latter, through her marvelous iron play, was able to defeat Miss Lawson. At Catalina the premium is placed on the short game and it is in this that Miss Lawson excels. Mrs. Gregg Lifur and Mrs. Roy Green are also favorites for the woman's event.

The Wilshire Country Club will be represented in the Catalina tournament by Miss Lawson, Mrs. Ted Haas, Mrs. R. C. Noble, Miss Jane Lawson, Mrs. Don Forker and Mrs. H. W. Lawson.

The tournament is scheduled for three days, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday. So far more than 200 players are already signed up. It is estimated that there may be as many as 300 women players in the Catalina event, which will be played over the new eighteen-hole course.

Sunday will be given over to mixed doubles with the woman's tournament starting on Monday, when high-handicap golfers will play their round. Tuesday the low-handicap players will go eighteen holes, finishing in plenty of time for the afternoon steamer.

Resident golfers of Southern California, as well as visiting golfers, will participate in the event, which will be held under the auspices of the women's auxiliary of the Southern California Golf Association. Mrs. G. M. Midgely will preside at the first tee during the tournament play. A worthy array of prizes have been posted by William Wrigley, Jr.

PROFESSIONAL GOLFERS SEEK LARGE ENTRY FOR OPEN QUALIFYING PLAY

Seeking to give Southern California a large representation in the 1930 United States open championship at Interlachen on July 10, 11 and 12, local professionals are urging amateurs to enter the thirty-six-hole sectional qualifying round which will be played at the Wilshire Country Club on Monday June 16.

FRED MORRISON.

OLIN DUTRA

Of the local professionals, Willie L. Hunter of Montebello Park and Leo Diegel of Agua Caliente will not be required to qualify as they finished among the low thirty at Winged Foot last year.

Among the Southern California pros who would like to make the trip, and should be sent if they qualify, are Fred Morrison of the Midwick Country Club, Olin Dutra of Brentwood, Mortie Dutra of Virginia, and Chet Beer of Bakersfield.

In order to qualify five or six players for the open, Southern California amateurs will have to enter in large numbers as only 150 golfers throughout the nation are permitted to play in the championship proper.

In order to play in the qualifying round, which is thirty-six holes, it is necessary to have an entry, accompanied by a fee of $5, in the hands of the United States Golf Association, 110 East Forty-second street, New York, by Tuesday, the 27th inst.

All low handicap amateurs who can possibly play in the qualifying round are urged to do so whether or not they plan to actually make the trip east.

Of the thirty exemptions, only two, Robert Tyre Jones, Jr., the defending champion, and George "Jix" Von Elm of Rancho are amateurs.

Professionals who are exempt include Al Espinosa, Gene Sarazen, Denny Shute, Tommy Armour, Henry Cluci, Peter O'Hara, Horton Smith, J. E. Rogers, Whiffy Cox, Charles Hilgendorf, P. O. Hart, Billy Burke, Louis Chiappett, George B. Smith, Craig Wood, Joe Kirkwood, Walter Hagen, Jim Barnes, Massie B. Miller, Jack Forrester, Ted Longworth, Macdonald Smith, Willie Macfarlane, Leonard B. Schmutte, Jack Burke, Emerick Kocsis and Tom Boyd.

Stockton Cops Jaysee Crown

Gail Stockton of the San Bernardino Junior College yesterday won the annual Jaysee golf championship at Pasadena municipal golf course with brilliant rounds of 67-69—136. Stockton is also a member of the San Bernardino Country Club. George Moss of Mountain Meadows, a student at the Pomona Junior College, was second with 76-76—143. Third place went to Don Mackey of Long Beach, 76-77—143.

Ed Warren and M. Lippman tied for low gross in the qualifying round, both scoring 73 for the thirty-six holes.

Golf Better for All but Pro---Sarazen

CHICAGO, May 3. (AP)—Gene Sarazen, former national open golf champion, believes golf conditions have become better in the last ten years for everyone except professionals. "One of the principal money-making mediums for the pro is his shop," said Sarazen, who is in Chicago playing in a vaudeville act with Johnny Farrell, another former open title-holder, "but you'd be surprised at the number of golfers who know somebody who is able to get them a price on equipment."

Championship in Semifinals at La Cumbre

SANTA BARBARA, May 3. (Exclusive)—Semifinal and final rounds of the annual La Cumbre Country Club invitation tournament will be played tomorrow with George Shaw of the California Country Club, the medalist, a favorite.

J. Garland Hunter, four-handicap golfer of the Flintridge Country Club, furnished an upset today when he defeated Johnny Arnelll of the Los Angeles Country Club, 2 and 1, in a quarter-final match.

Shaw, who has played brilliantly from the start, won from Lou Messing of Ojai this morning, 5 and 4, and eliminated Alex Euston in the afternoon, 5 and 3. Euston scored an upset in the morning round when he eliminated Jack Douglas of California, 2 and 1.

There was a slight trace of rain this morning, but none in the afternoon.

BOBBY NOT OPTIMISTIC OVER WALKER CUP PLAY

ABOARD S.S. MAURETANIA, May 3. (AP)—Capt. Bobby Jones, called his seven mates on the Walker Cup team into conference for the first time today, but he was no Spartacus exhorting the gladiators.

"I want to break the news to you," he said, "that we have no engagements whatsoever until the international matches with the British May 15 and 16. I have taken the liberty of declining all invitations to play golf other than our little practice rounds. I believe we can get rid of our sea legs better just among ourselves.

"We have a very tough battle before us and I don't mind saying I'm not very optimistic about the results."

The octet appeared to be in fine condition and excellent spirits. Roland Mackenzie had a touch of seasickness, but it was nothing unpleasant. The Mauretania rolled a good deal today and the inhabitants of "D" deck saw a lot of blue water over the portholes.

Part of the team is scheduled to leave the boat at Plymouth, but Jones and his party will go to Southampton.

"Three more free meals," Bobby explained.

BOURN WINS NATIVE GOLF TOURNAMENT

BURNHAM (Somerset, Eng.) May 3. (AP)—T. A. Bourn, Sunningdale, won the English native golf championship today, defeating C. E. Hardman, Manchester, 3 up and 2 to play, in a 36-hole final match.

PUTVIER GETS "ACE" ON WESTWOOD LINKS

Dick Putvier scored a hole-in-one on the 145-yard eleventh hole at Westwood on Friday, and is now a full-fledged member of the "ace" club. He used a mashie to perform the deed.

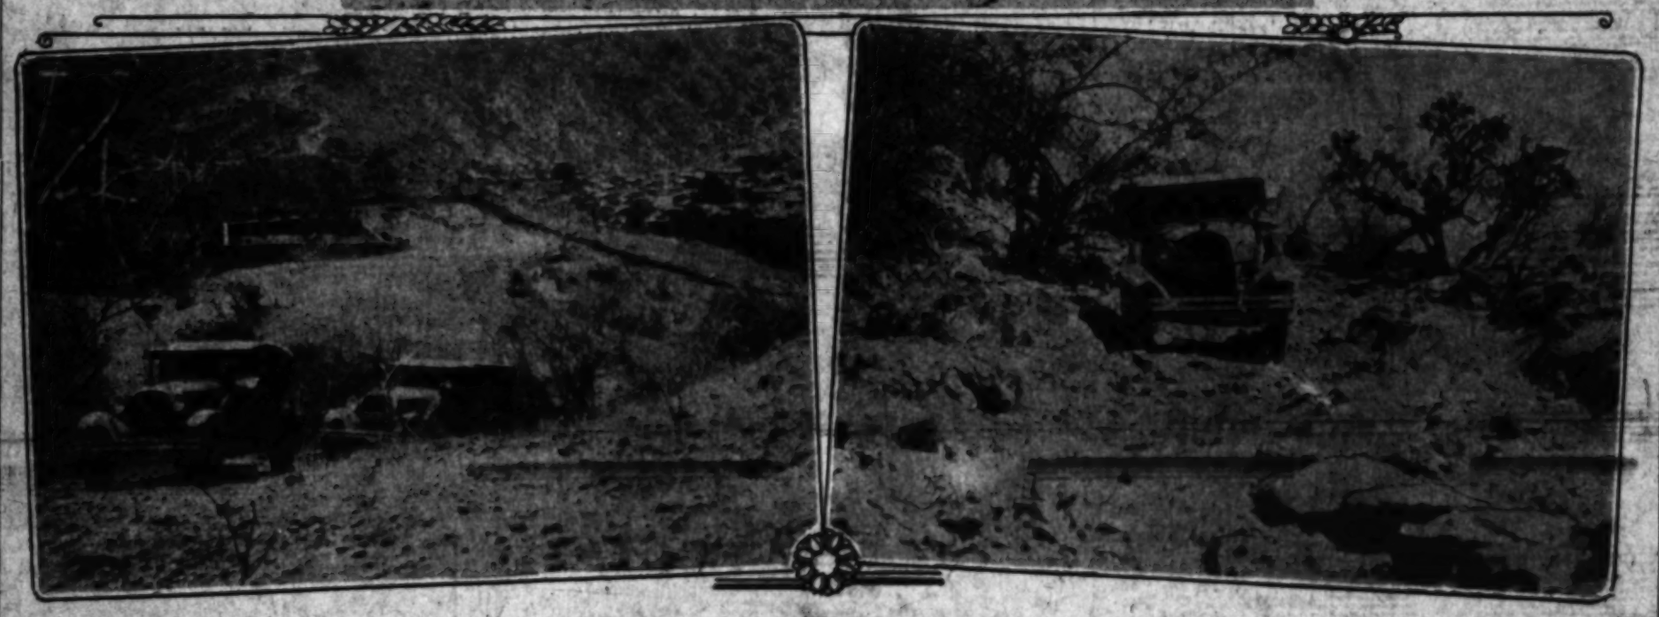
Tire Output at High Mark

An encouraging note for the automobile trade has been sounded from the Detroit factory of a large rubber company. The plant is operating at full capacity and running seven days a week on three eight-hour shifts each day. The daily output of tires is said to be at the highest point for many years. Schedules call for the present rate to be maintained until well into the summer.

According to a recent survey of the Department of Commerce, the outlook for the tire trade throughout the country is favored by the fact that stocks in the hands of dealers are lower than at this time last year.

With Better Roads Tourists Will Change Quaint Scenery



With Pathfinding Expedition of Automobile Club of Southern California in Mexico

The rear view of the Mexican in top photo gives the impression of a Chinaman with his funny hat and nonfitting trousers, if they can be called such. This view is taken on the way down the West Coast of Mexico, en route to Mexico City from which point Harry Carr writes this week. No word but sleepy would describe the town whose roofs show in the lower left photo. The roads that now block tourist progress far into the southern republic. Nothing but formidable.

CITY SECOND ONLY TO AKRON IN PRODUCTION

Economic Factors Responsible for Location of Tire Factories in Metropolis of Southwest

Ten years ago very few people realized that within a short time Los Angeles would rival Akron as the greatest rubber-goods producing center of the world. In 1918 the Samson Tire and Rubber Corporation established its plant here and since then three other American tire manufacturers—Goodyear, Goodrich and Firestone—have located branches of their main plants here, and announcement that three other well-known rubber companies will construct factories in the Los Angeles area is rumored.

...rumored.

The concentration upon Los Angeles as a tire-manufacturing center presents several economic factors.

AKRON BY CHANCE

Akron "became" the hub of the United States rubber industry by mere chance, simply because it was the domicile of Dr. B. F. Goodrich, who established his small rubber factory there in 1870. Within a little more than fifty years, Akron materialized into the world's greatest rubber-producing center, second to none in the universe. Fortunately, Akron was blessed with certain essential elements necessary for the center of a large industry. It was near the extensive coal fields of Ohio and Pennsylvania and offered excellent facilities for the development of rail and water transportation to the consuming areas of the country. On the other hand it was quite a distance from the base of the supply of crude rubber, which at that day came almost wholly from South America. Within a decade the base of supply has shifted radically. Now, only a minor quantity arrives from the Amazon Valley and other parts of South America, while the bulk is received from the great rubber-producing plantations of the Middle East. With this change in the source of supply, Akron is placed at a further distance from the producing countries of the East.

LOS ANGELES BY CHOICE

Los Angeles, unlike Akron, did not become a rubber-manufacturing center through peculiar circumstances, but because of well-founded economic factors. First, it is much nearer the base of supply of the raw product than is Akron. Second, it can supply the demand for tires of the western States to a greater advantage than Akron. Third, it can send its surplus to Asiatic, Oceanic and western South American consuming areas in less time and expense than the factories of the eastern United States. And, fourth, it can secure labor at a lower price and besides can offer more inducements to the workmen in the matter of recreation, environment, and living conditions.

The pioneer tire manufacturer in the Los Angeles area was the Samson Tire and Rubber Corporation, which established factories at Los Angeles and San Diego in 1918. The second tire manufacturer to

Ford Changes Dealer Prices

The Ford company this week increased discounts on automobiles to the dealers.

Simultaneously with a cut in list prices several months ago Ford cut his dealers' discounts from 20 to 17½ per cent. This raised a protest all along the line.

The new discount rates, effective this week, are: All 1 to 50 cars a year dealers, 17½ per cent; 51 to 100 yearly, 18 per cent; 101 to 150 yearly, 19 per cent; 151 to 300 yearly, 20 per cent, and all 301 yearly and upward, 21 per cent.

STREAMS PATRONIZED TROUT SEASON OPENS

Virginia Lakes district in the high Sierras declaring that Virginia Creek and other streams were clear, with plenty of trout in them and quite a crowd of anglers there. From H. B. Heaton of Fairview on the Kern, it was learned that trout fishing conditions were excellent for the opening, not only in the Kern River, but in Salmon, South, Dome, Peppermint, Rattlesnake, Trout and Manter creeks as well. He further declared that the conditions were the best in years and laid it to early spring weather this year.

The Azusa branch of the Rainbow Angling Fisheries is open to inspection by the public today. The branch club will be closed tomorrow and starting Tuesday will be open to members and guests only.

WORD FROM OREGON

Earl Wilcox of the Western Auto Supply Company returned from his semiannual survey of Southern Oregon fishing conditions in time to be among the many to open the trout season here. While up north he found salmon fishing conditions good in the Rogue River and trout fishing excellent at other streams. On his return, he made a study of hunting, fishing and camping conditions of the coast country and Southwestern Oregon.

Saltwater fishing during the last couple of weeks has been only fair because of unusual swells. In Santa Monica several large halibut have been caught and quite a number of barracuda, sheephead and white sea bass, the latter weighing as much as fifteen pounds. John Whitehouse landed a forty-two-pound halibut from the Ameco, fishing off Santa Monica Canyon.

Craft are now running on regular summer schedule.

Large ocean swells prevailed also during the last week off Hermosa. Mackerel have lead the daily catches, with quite a number of halibut, perch, sculpin and sole being taken on the barges.

SPEED AT CROSSINGS DANGEROUS

Campaign Seeks to Bring Motorists Realization of Hazard

Full speed ahead is an invitation to death, if carried out by a motorist at grade crossings, according to an announcement received recently from the safety conference of the California State Chamber of Commerce.

Failure to restrict speed at grade crossings and the disregard for railroad warning signals were responsible for the majority of the 2929 grade-crossing accidents which occurred last year, it is stated.

Section 113 of the California Vehicle Act, which restricts the speed of a motor vehicle to fifteen miles an hour in traversing a grade crossing of any steam, electric or street railway, where the driver's view is obstructed, states that "A driver's view shall be deemed to be obstructed when at any time during the last 100 feet of his approach to such crossing, he does not have a clear and uninterrupted view of such railway crossing and of any traffic on such railway for a distance of 400 feet in both directions from such crossing."

According to Section 114 of the Vehicle Act: "Whenever any person driving a vehicle approaches a highway and interurban electric or steam railway grade crossing and a human flagman or a clearly visible electrical or mechanical signal gives warning of the immediate approach of a railway train or car, it shall be unlawful for the driver of the vehicle to fail to bring the vehicle to a complete stop within fifty feet but not less than ten feet of the nearest railway tracks before traversing such grade crossing."

Spring Flower Appeal Strong

Spring flowers of the Colorado Desert have brought larger numbers of tourists to see them this year than ever before, it is reported. Hotels are still being taxed to capacity by the streams of motorists driving here from all parts of the State. Judging from the numbers of out-of-State visitors, it is said that the charm of the place has attracted a greater quantity of new-comers this year than during any previous season.

ROAD POLICIES CHANGE

Future Needs Carefully Studied in Improvement of Highways; Speed in Driving Permitted

"Meet the immediate need and prepare for future expansion without wasting initial costs" is the new watchword of the California division of highway engineers in building highways.

Decided new phases have entered into highway construction during the past few years, the most outstanding being in relation to curves on mountain grades, the new width minimums of pavement and grade, wider rights of way, heavier pavement, traffic lines on main highways, grade crossing elimination, protection of natural scenic beauty and visibility in mountains.

New roads and major improvements of existing roads, in keeping with this policy, are located as nearly as can be foreseen on permanent alignment and grades, which will require the very minimum of future alteration or correction, and so preserve the initial outlay, but which at the same time is capable of being widened to take care of the increase of traffic. Even in the case of temporary roads every effort is made to make it possible to salvage the maximum of labor and costs so expended.

CURVES FOR SPEED

Even in the mountain regions provision is now made for cars operating at the maximum speed and 300-foot minimum curve radiuses are used, instead of the 100-foot ones common a few years back. All new grades are getting the new curves and many of the old ones are being widened, so that forty miles or faster can easily be maintained on these roads with safety.

To make all American roads highgear highways the 5 per cent minimum grade is rapidly replacing the 6 per cent grades, and the 7 per cent grade is used only in rare cases where great distances would be necessary to make 5 per cent grades. The old practice of rolling grades heavily to reduce cut and fill costs is practically obsolete. On all new work effort is made to secure straight, even grades as an aid to safety, visibility and appearance.

The new road design requires that at summits on straight roads objects five feet above the road surface shall be mutually visible to each other for a distance not less than 600 feet. On main highways the tendency is to increase this to 800 feet, which is quite a contrast to the 300 or 400 feet considered ample but a short time back.

INCREASE ROAD WIDTHS

A twenty-foot pavement with eight-foot parking shoulders on each side is the new minimum for all permanent and most temporary

AUSTIN CAR TO BE SEEN DURING JUNE

Last Week of Month to See Bantam Car on Display Throughout Nation

The week of June 23 is the time set by the American Austin Car Company of Butler, Pa., for displaying the new bantam car throughout the United States, according to a report received here.

Good progress is being made in the installation of machinery in the plant and President Brandt believes that the first cars will leave the assembly line about May 20.

It is the plant that was used by the Standard Steel Car Company about fifteen years ago in the production of the Standard eight-cylinder automobile, which failed to be successful.

Puncture Vines to Be Killed

Drastic treatment will be administered to puncture vines in Riverside county. It is the intention to spray them with crude oil, thereby killing the weed before it arrives at the germination stage. This vine causes a great deal of trouble to motorists. It is pointed out that if other counties will follow the example of Riverside and kill off the young vines, not only motorists but cattle will be grateful. The Automobile Club of Southern California will be glad to receive reports from motorists of the location of any vines encountered in this section.

CLEVELAND PARKING BAN STIRS FIGHT

Street Railway Contenders With Merchants Over Plan to Clear Highways

CLEVELAND, May 4. (Exclusive) A new fight for "No Parking" signs on all the main downtown streets of Cleveland and if not that, a ban on parking on these downtown streets where street cars crawl along, is being launched in the City Council.

A fight on such a ban was had some months ago, only to fall afoul of opposition from downtown merchants and no small number of motorists.

New agitation for the experiment is inspired by the Cleveland Railway Company, under fire in the Council for what are described as "reckless expenditures." The attack on the railway is occasioned by its demands for increased fares or zoning which will increase its revenues. The dominant fare now is 8 cents, with penny transfer. The lines are operated under a Council grant that guarantees the company a fixed dividend, the fares to be fixed accordingly and the Council privileged to supervise operating costs.

Chicago merchants opposed such a step before it was taken there but they now indorse the plan.

Mules Killed in Auto Wreck

LINDSAY, May 3. (Exclusive)—Two mules of a band of nine, running loose on the highway between Lindsay and Tulare, were recently killed, when struck by a small car driven by Miss May Stevens of Lindsay early in the morning. Miss Stevens was injured and her car badly damaged in the crash. The mules were strays that had wandered off a ranch north of the highway. Miss Stevens, driving toward home, was unable to avoid the animals, which had the highway practically blocked.

Automotive Output at Rate of 5,000,000 Annually With Week's Increase in Produ

GAIN IN SALES NOW APPARENT

Unfilled Orders Appearing on Factory Books

New Models Have Served to Strengthen Status

Sixteen-Cylinder Car Coming Out in Fall

DETROIT, May 3. (Exclusive.) For the first time since the early days of last fall the production of automobiles and trucks is exceeding 100,000 units weekly. The volume at the present time is running at a production rate of 5,000,000 for the year. This figure is made despite closely guarded production that prevents an unhealthy gain.

Opinions vary considerably among leaders in the industry as to the probable trend of production throughout the remainder of the year. The increase over the first of January is considered [illegible] strides. [illegible]'s output reached only 273,170; February, 324,013, and March, 401,376.

GAIN IN APRIL

While the April total, not yet available, is sure to show a healthy gain over March, there is as yet no indication that May schedules will be materially increased from the present rate of operations. Improvement in car sales is definitely apparent. Trade prediction still holds steady, with only the only important gains being noted in the light delivery division. Sales continue to be classified as fair, with little change in demand apparent.

One of the outstanding features in the automobile industry is the replacement demand, and while the annual increase in registrations has shown a tendency to slow down since 1925, the increase in replacement sales has been rapid and at the same time exports have shown remarkable and steady increase.

According to leading opinion in retail circles, conservation has caused considerable curtailment of dealer buying customary at this time of year. Prone to underestimate demand rather than duplicate what they have been led to believe were errors of a year ago, many dealers are ordering for customers' immediate needs. Many instances of delay in deliveries are developing, and more than one factory entered the present month behind on orders booked. The industry since the first of the year has attracted to its retail divisions outstanding business men in cities and towns throughout the entire country. These facts were cited this week in a conference attended by sales managers and production executives of all Detroit plants.

QUARTER OUTPUT

It was shown that the total production and sale of cars for the first four months of the current year will total approximately 1,500,000 cars.

In former years spring buying has meant buying for spring delivery and had to do with dealers' orders, not customers, and was based on careful if sometimes optimistic estimates of what the territory would stand.

Introduction of new models since the first of the year has as usual strengthened sales. A few newcomers, it is said, will be ready for introduction before many weeks and among them will without doubt be found a sixteen-cylinder job that one manufacturer outside the Michigan area has in preparation and will be ready in the early fall, and the list of front-wheel drive cars will be added to one in a Detroit plant, the other in Cleveland. Of course, the sixes and eights will be out with new lines during the year.

Willys-Overland came out today with a new eight-cylinder line, which will be found in the medium-price field. The newcomer is available in four body styles—de luxe sedan, standard sedan, de luxe coupe and a standard coupe. The price range is from $1245 to $1395.

Deer Protected From Drowning by Flume Bell

The advantage of the machine age is being made apparent to even the wild life of California, according to the statement of the Division of Fish and Game of the Department of Natural Resources. Deer in the high Sierras are ringing bells to attract rescuers when they fall into the flumes of the hydroelectric companies.

During the semiannual migrations of the deer, first in the spring when they follow the melting snow into their summer grazing areas, and again when they seek the protection of the lower elevations, many animals fall into the flumes of the various electric companies operating in that area. In El Dorado county, the Pacific Gas and Electric Company has stationed men along the flumes to rescue any deer that may get into difficulties with the fast water.

In order to make the work of rescue doubly safe, the power company has installed a system of electric bells along the flume. Any deer falling into the water comes in contact with the bell system, and the nearest flume tender is called to the spot. In this way the animal is saved and any chance of a deer drowning by not being discovered by the flume tender is averted.

Other protective measures have been taken to prevent any injury to deer from this source, and this bell system is only depended upon to attract the attention of attendants should the other efforts fail.

Of 33,500 new automobiles registered in Spain last year fully 20,000 were from America.

ESSAY WINNERS NAMED

Winners of the Students' Chevrolet Essay Contest, which closed April 15, after thousands of essays had been submitted by grammar, high school and college students throughout Southern California, are announced today by the Chevrolet Motor Company's zone office here. Three students are enjoying a great "thrill," for they are the winners of the Chevrolet six collegiate sport roadsters, fully equipped, offers as first prizes in each of the three divisions. Thirty cash awards of $50 and $25 each, are also included in the list of prizes.

All essays, of 200 words or less, were on the subject of the Chevrolet Six.

Gerard Laub, 11 years of age, residing at 342 West Fifty-first street, and a student at the Main-street school, won the first prize in the grammar-school division, and will receive his new Chevrolet roadster.

Everett Smith, 14 years of age, residing at 4371 East Sixty-first street in Maywood, and in grade 9-A in the Jacob A. Riis High School, won first prize in the high-school division.

Bernard N. Moore, of 1026 West Twentieth street, Los Angeles, a student in the California Institute of Technology, was named the prize winner in the college division.

The winners of the three first prizes were notified of their success by Coulter Jones, sales promotion manager of the local Chevrolet zone office. Going to their respective schools, Jones had the winners called from class and in the presence of the school officials, told them of the new sport roadsters they will receive.

Perhaps, the most interesting of the first-prize winners is little Gerard Laub. With his parents, Gerard left Los Angeles six years ago and went to Borneo, in the Dutch East Indies, and lived there for five years. Returning here last year, Gerard entered the Main-street school and was placed in the adjustment class. Not having attended school while in Borneo, Gerard could not read, and could write only his name, when he entered the adjustment class in September. His progress since that time, as reflected in the originality and quality of his winning essay, is a tribute to his own application as well as to the schooling he has received. Notified of his accomplishment in the contest, Gerard was speechless grinning boyishly in his unexpected happiness.

Everett Smith, winner of the first prize in the high-school division, is best described as being an average boy. Everett does well in his studies, according to his principal, and is one of the star soccer players on his high-school team.

The winner of the college division, Bernard Moore, has a scholastic record of distinction. While a student in Polytechnic High School here, Moore won a scholarship in a contest given by the American Chemists' Society, and the following year entered California Institute of Technology. His father, M. S. Moore, is head of the chemistry department at Polytechnic, and his uncle, Dr. E. C. Moore, is director of the University of California at Los Angeles.

THE DUKE
By Julius D'Orio

That handsome man, whom all Riverside players know as "The Duke," was in the playground last Thursday. I said "Duke, show me how you draw that 'slip' in the event I refused to follow" and after the second try, to my suprise, he drew. "I am a big player" (he weighs over two hundred pounds) said the Duke, "any time you want to know something just ask me about it." So I set up that problem that won first prize in the March issue of the Checkergram.

Black—2, 3, 17, 19, 22.
White—8, 23, 27, 30, 31.
White to play and win.

This was also said to correct Encyclopedia.

"Now Duke, you are supposed to be a big player, so show your stuff. Before you start I will tell you that the Encyclopedia play goes 30-26, 3-7, 8-3, 7-10, etc., drawn. The great play now is 8-3 to win, so go ahead." 8-3, 17-21, 3-1, 22-25, 1-5, 2-7—(this corrects the solution given) then 15-10, 7-14, 5-9, 19-23, 27-18, 14-22, 9-14, 25-29, 14-18, 29-25, 18-27, 25-22, 27-23. I now kidded him about being a "big player" and told him he could not win because I had the move. Play continued: 3-8, 30-26, 22-17, 23-18, 17-13, 18-22, 13-9, 26-23, 8-11, 23-19, 9-14, 31-27, 14-19, 27-23, 10-14. Now I told him to look out and not squeeze, but he played 22-17, 14-10, 23-18, and to prove that the Duke is a real player I have this to his credit when now he said, "Lucky for you the piece on 10 is a king, otherwise I would peel you with Byers problem. I did not think the problem could come up in actual play, but here it is except the piece on 10 is a king instead of a man." Of course I would not play 21-25, but asked him if he could win if I did? After looking at the position a few minutes he said, "sure enough the win is there just the same."

And so it was the end of a perfect day. By the originator of the triangle concentration and author of the mysteries advocating the superior method of enjoying the pastime.

Julius D'Orio.

With apology to the greatest American checker exponent and authority, that Bronx Comet and publisher of hot stuff.

In glancing over the last Times column I was reminded of some play crossboard games, and I append the following Kelso wherein the win was guided by the Mysteries of Dama and Variation I was the result of some analysis trying to discover an undisputed Black win.

The white side may yet put up a long fight, but correct play will win for the Black side no matter if the world's champion takes in a hand.

a—I will develop the game further by cramping to close quarters, but it will be seen that attempt is dangerous unless the play is known. 11-16 is by far the best and secures many strategic plays with white playing uphill even in the event of the 22-18 reply.

Keep your car Young with 12000 mile McBryde Service

"Oil and grease is your car's life blood" . . . a statement from one of America's greatest automobile producers.

For instance, take two automobiles of exactly the same make and model. Let two different owners drive them for a year, and approximately the same distance. Then give each car a thorough mechanical inspection. Their conditions will probably be as different as day and night. The explanation? . . . one car was lubricated thoroughly and consistently; the other wasn't.

McBryde Lubricating Service is unique. It is a carefully thought out system to keep a car young. McBryde, after years of experience, has created a routine which will keep a car running in firstclass condition. He has schooled his attendants to follow this system without variation in the least. The result is the famous McBryde 12,000 Mile Service.

Come in to the nearest McBryde station and investigate the details of this fine service. We know how successfully it works. We bank on it so much that we guarantee to replace free of charge any part of your car that fails (due to faulty lubrication) while we are under contract to care for your car.

Pedestrians' Right to Travel on California's Highways With Safety Recognized by Law

Sledges End Danger of Faulty Cars on Road

They'll Burn No More Gasoline

the motorist must yield to a pedestrian who is crossing, or has started to cross, on a "go" signal.

Thus the common law is modified, but it still holds that pedestrians and motorists are at all times required to exercise proper care, and a motorist has no right to run down a pedestrian, even though the latter fails to obey all of the regulations.

Citizens Seek Bus Routing

Citizens residing in the southwest section of Los Angeles are planning to initiate a vigorous campaign to obtain a direct motor bus line to Hollywood Boulevard, according to letters just received by Col. Harry M. Baine, president of the Hollywood Boulevard Association.

Proposed establishment by a transportation group of a new line by way of Vernon avenue, Mesa Drive, Adams street and La Brea avenue to Wilshire to connect with other busses to Hollywood has spurred the agitation for direct service to the boulevard, according to the letters.

The proponents of the direct line urge a route by Mesa Drive, Crenshaw Boulevard, Wilshire, Rossmore and Vine with its terminus at Hollywood Boulevard, pointing out that this route is much shorter than any now being used or proposed.

HAMMERS END USE OF THIRTY CARS

Destruction of Machines Part of National Plan to Remove Inefficient Autos

Inaugurating a policy of removing from the highways permanently those cars whose continued operation might be a detriment to public safety, the Cadillac Motor Car Company, co-operating with Don Lee, California distributor, the other day wrecked thirty motor cars which were found to have served their usefulness.

This was the first consignment of cars to find its way to the junk heap. Others will follow as cars come in and are condemned. Condemning these cars to removal from the highways results in their being completely dismantled.

Every vital part of the car is smashed with sledge hammers, so that none of these parts will again find their way back into some other car, and help prolong the life of a car ten or fifteen years old which should not be permitted on the streets.

The loss entailed through junking these cars is borne jointly by the Don Lee organization and the Cadillac factory. The first lot condemned in Los Angeles embraced twenty-four different makes, and two of the cars were orphans, whose makers had gone out of business. Cars junked have major defects, mechanical trouble which would be too costly to remedy, and cars which do not represent true value, in the face of today's market when cars with so many modern advantages can be secured for little less money in the used-car departments of the new car dealers.

SOUTH GATE SEES AUTO PILE BURNED

Scores of automobiles were piled five high on a large vacant lot on Tweedy Boulevard, between Long Beach Boulevard and Alameda street, in the western part of South Gate last Saturday, and shortly after 8 o'clock, a Ford car, saturated with gasoline, was "touched off" and started toward the pile of "crippled and disabled" machines.

The flaming torch struck a small obstacle in the pathway and turned from the pile, scattering a large number of people who were in the path of the oncoming machine. However, a number of men soon had it again headed in the right direction and as it struck the aged machines, there was a great flame, caused by these cars also being saturated with gasoline and oil. The spectacle, largely advertised for two weeks before, brought hundreds to the scene.

The machines were destroyed as a part of a nation-wide movement to rid highways of old cars so that these roads may be made safer for the thousands of automobilists.

Rough Grading Now Going On

It is expected that the first contract for grading 2.6 miles of roadbed on the La Canada-Mt. Wilson highway will be completed in July, according to reports to the Automobile Club of Southern California. Rough grading is in progress on one and one-half miles. The second contract for grading 1.5 miles of highway on this route awarded early this year will require more than a year to complete.

Marmon Gives Profit Report; Tainsh Visits

Coincidental with the visit to Los Angeles of John Tainsh, assistant general sales director of the Marmon Motor Car Company, George S. Pelton, distributor for Marmon in Southern California, received a telegraphic report from G. M. Williams, president, summarizing the Marmon annual financial statement.

The report shows that for the fiscal year ending February 28, net earnings were $936,250.61, after depreciation and all other charges except Federal income were deducted. The Federal income tax amounted to $103,361.40, and preferred stock dividends to $70,000, leaving earnings equivalent to $2.93 per share on the 260,000 shares of outstanding common stock.

President Williams explained that during the year some exceptional expenses were written off and allowances made incidental to the economic conditions that existed last fall. He stated that for the final quarter, including end of the year adjustments, net earnings before Federal taxes were paid amounted to $119,384.98, which indicated a favorable trend in Marmon operations.

Tainsh, who has been making an extensive business tour of the country, was accompanied to Los Angeles by J. W. Hawk, factory supervisor for the Pacific area. The two came south from the Pacific Northwest and report that business conditions on this coast compare favorabey with those in other parts of the country.

FIRESTONE'S ANNIVERSARY

Thirtieth Milestone in Rubber Industry Passed by Giant Organization Developed From Tiny Factory

Tracing its history from a small tire shop in Akron of literally box-like proportions to one of the world's greatest industrial giants, the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company is now celebrating its thirtieth anniversary. It has been frequently said that in all the industrial history of America no more brilliant chapter is to be found than that written by Harvey S. Firestone.

In the original Firestone tire shop the daily productive capacity was a dozen tires a day, and Mr. Firestone personally helped turn out this production. Today, with the great expansion programs just completed at Akron and at the Western Firestone factory in Los Angeles, and increased facilities at the plants in Canada and England, the company has a productive capacity of 90,000 tires and tubes a day.

ALLIED LINES

In addition to the actual tire manufacturing plants, the thirtieth anniversary sees the company operating its own cord fabric mills at Fall River, New Bedford and Newburyport, Mass., with a total of 301,900 spindles and the tremendous yearly capacity of 45,000,000 pounds. Another notable achievement is the development in Liberia on the west coast of Africa, where rubber trees are now bearing on the first cultivated acreage of a huge 1,000,000-acre plantation. Reaching to another part of the world, Firestone is extending its activities in the East Indies where it maintains its own buying offices and a big plant in Singapore.

Mr. Firestone has been directly associated with transportation virtually all of his business life, first selling buggies and then entering into the production of rubber tires for carriages. Mr. Firestone's first business of his own was in a small shop he purchased for $1500 in Chicago. The Firestone Tire and Rubber Company was organized by him in Akron in 1900.

EARLIEST DAYS

With a small working capital, a book-keeper and a stenographer, the young company began to make its impress upon the industry it was destined to serve. In 1902 the company issued additional capital stock and purchased a small factory, the forerunner of the present mammoth group of plants.

In 1905 when Henry Ford decided to build a car to be sold at a very low price, he gave Firestone an order for 2000 sets of straight-side tires, which was the largest order for tires ever placed up to that time. This Ford order presented real problems, first, to produce tires in this large quantity, and second, to find a concern that could build the special straight-side rims which were required in such large quantity, since the production of this type of rim had heretofore been very limited. These difficulties were overcome, however, and the order was delivered and proved a most satisfactory and serviceable equipment.

Virtually all writers who have analyzed the remarkable success of the company have laid great stress on the organization spirit to be found in the Firestone company. The fact that every employee of the company is a stockholder is declared to be a powerful factor making for unusually high productive efficiency.

MANY ACCOMPLISHMENTS

Mr. Firestone has played a leading part in advancing motor transportation, being credited with producing the first straight-side tire, the first rubber nonskid tread, the first commercial demountable rim, the first patented gum-dipping process and the first balloon tire, according to R. C. Tucker, vice-president and general sales manager of the Western Firestone organization.

FIRE WARNING ISSUED TO PLANE PASSENGERS

The dropping of lighted cigars or cigarettes from airplanes is a violation of Air Commerce regulations. Attention of pilots was called to this regulation as the result of a letter written by Acting Secretary of Agriculture R. W. Dunlap, which called attention to the hazard to which forests, grain fields, grass lands and property are exposed through lighted cigarettes dropped from airplanes. Tests made by the aerial forest patrol in Idaho, during 1929, showed that lighted cigars or cigarettes dropped from planes at high altitudes continued to burn after reaching the ground. In fact, it has been fairly well established that a fire which occurred near the Coeur d'Alene Forest in Idaho last summer was started by a passenger-carrying plane.

VERNON ORDERS PAVING

The contract for the improvement in Vernon of East Twenty-sixth street between Minerva and Soto street, has been awarded.

PAVEMENT ORDERED

The Santa Monica City Council has awarded contract for the improvement of Clover Field Boulevard with asphalt pavement.

Huge Girder Used in Work on Crossing

The underpass being constructed at Wineville eliminating a grade crossing on the highway between Riverside and Ontario is nearing completion.

One of the largest single pieces of steel used in any railway bridge in America, a 101-ton girder, was recently set in place on the structure being built jointly by the Union Pacific Railway and the State Highway Commission. The girder was transported from Gary, Ind., on three flat cars. It is also one of the longest steel pieces in the country, measuring 113 feet, 6 inches, in length, and 12 feet in height. It is the main support of the railroad overhead crossing. Two giant cranes were required to put it in place.

This grade-crossing project will cost more than $100,000, it is stated, and includes the building of a quarter of a mile of new highway under the rail crossing.

Plans for International Highway Along Entire Pacific Americas Gaining Hea

CANADA-ALASKA ROUTE VISIONED

Portland Conference States Activity Begun

British Columbia Highway to Go Northward

Link Would Connect With Southern Road

Attention is being focused upon both extremes of the projected International Pacific Highway with the start of preliminary work in both the countries adjoining the United States on the north and south. Reports from Canadian representatives at a conference held in Portland, Or., state that activity has begun toward the establishment of a route from Vancouver through British Columbia to Alaska, where it may meet another road in Uncle Sam's Alaskan territory reaching to Fairbanks.

CHART ROUTE

Preparations are under way in Vancouver, B. C., to dispatch a motor pathfinding caravan north toward Alaska to chart an international highway route. It is understood that the Canadian government will lend its assistance to that part of the International Pacific Highway that will pass through Canada and already the United States government has indicated its willingness to construct its part of the road in Alaska, so that it does not require a great deal of imagination to picture an auto road of the future stretching from Fairbanks, Alaska, to Mexico City, a distance of approximately 6000 miles, of which a large share already is traversable and 1600 miles of which already is the longest stretch of paved highway in the world.

Arrangements for future permanence of the International Pacific Highway organization to promote the proposed travel thoroughfare through the western sections of North and South America were perfected at a recent meeting in Portland which had a large attendance of delegates from all the Coast States, Alaska and Canadian provinces.

PLANS FORMULATED

Plans were formulated for holding meetings at an early date in all of the States, Canadian Provinces, Alaska and South American countries of all parties and organizations interested in highway matters for the purpose of selecting three representatives from each district who will meet later in the summer and perfect the permanent organization.

Standish L. Mitchell, secretary of the Automobile Club of Southern California, was selected as the California representative to bring this about. Mr. Mitchell will have charge of all details concerning selection of the date and place of meeting.

CITY GAINS AS RUBBER CENTER

locate in Los Angeles was the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Company, which, in 1919, erected a branch of its Akron organization.

Samson and Goodyear remained the only important tire manufacturers until 1928, when the International B. F. Goodrich Corporation, and the Firestone Tire and Rubber Company, both established branches to relieve the growing pressure of their central plants.

Crude rubber can be shipped from Singapore, the center of the rubber production in the Near West direct to Los Angeles within a period of about six weeks, whereas rubber destined for Akron must travel through the Panama Canal to the east coast to the port of New York and thence by rail to Akron—taking about twice as long.

The greatly increased imports of crude rubber into Los Angeles are perhaps the best indication of its growing importance as a manufacturing center. In 1920, the year in which the first large tire company was operated, crude rubber in the amount of 3,290,290 pounds was received through the port of Los Angeles valued at $1,732,283. In 1925, during the abnormally high prices, crude rubber was cleared through the port to the value of $11,230,792. In 1927 imports registered 19,580,450 pounds, valued at $6,152,726—an increase of 101 per cent in volume within a year. Imports during 1929, however, established a record for both volume and value—being 63,044,100 pounds, valued at $13,101,432. Los Angeles now ranks next to New York and Boston as the principal entrepot for crude rubber.

The tire factories of Los Angeles are not only able to serve the three Pacific Coast States with their more than 2,453,000 automobiles in less time and expense than the factories of Akron, but they can more conveniently supply the mountain States of Montana, Idaho, Nevada, Wyoming, Colorado, Arizona and New Mexico with an aggregate registration of 765,600 motor vehicles. Portions of the States of Texas and Oklahoma with 1,745,000 automobiles can be supplied in less time and cost.

TRADE IN PACIFIC

The countries of the Far and Middle East and the west coast of Central and South America are rapidly becoming more profitable markets for United States tire manufacturers. And in this case tires from the Pacific ports can be shipped at a greater saving of time and money to these markets than from the ports of Eastern United States.

Tires from the United States shipped to the five countries of the west coast of South America increased from 43,763 casings in 1924 to 106,458 in 1929, an advance of 143 per cent in five years. Besides the improved economic conditions which are anticipated in the future on the west coast of Mexico as well as the Central American ports of the Pacific, the Los Angeles factories can export tires to this consuming area at a greater advantage than New York or New Orleans. At the completion of the proposed Nicaraguan Canal the important ports of Central America on the Atlantic coast will also be much nearer the port of Los Angeles than that of New York.

OTHER MARKETS

The increase in United States tire exports to the East has been more marked than that to the western coast of America. To the six principal markets—British India, British Malaya, China, Netherland East Indies, Japan and the Philippine Islands—United States exports increased from 180,627 units in 1924 to 891,700 in 1929, or by 445 per cent.

Alaska, Guam and Hawaii can best be supplied from the west coast.

Asia, Oceania and the east coast of Africa can be served easier.

The rubber-goods exports from the port of Los Angeles are undoubtedly the best indication of the importance of the local factories as supplying foreign markets. In 1924 rubber-goods exports were cleared through the port of Los Angeles to the value of $37,490. By 1926 exports had increased to a value of $1,520,876. During 1927 exports from Los Angeles were curtailed for several reasons, one of which was the large increased demand of the domestic market, preventing exports. In consequence, exports cleared through Los Angeles were valued at only $1,370,777, or 3.3 per cent of the total United States rubber-goods exports for that year. In 1928 exports were valued at $1,972,777, only a slight increase over the previous year. Although statistics are not available at present for 1930, it is believed that the value of exports established a record, despite the decline in the market price of nearly all rubber goods.

INDUCEMENT TO LABOR

Los Angeles has the advantage of a mild all-the-year-round climate, thus offering many advantages to laboring conditions. The worker is not required to expend large yearly sums each winter for high-priced fuel nor is he required to invest in the more expensive clothing which is necessary during cold weather. The outdoors offer greater inducements to recreation which ultimately produces a healthier and happier mental state for the laborer.

Furthermore, it is an acknowledged fact that the living conditions in general are much less in the West than the East, especially in housing and food, but clothing being away for the most part from the centers of production is higher, but the housing and food offset this item by a wide margain.

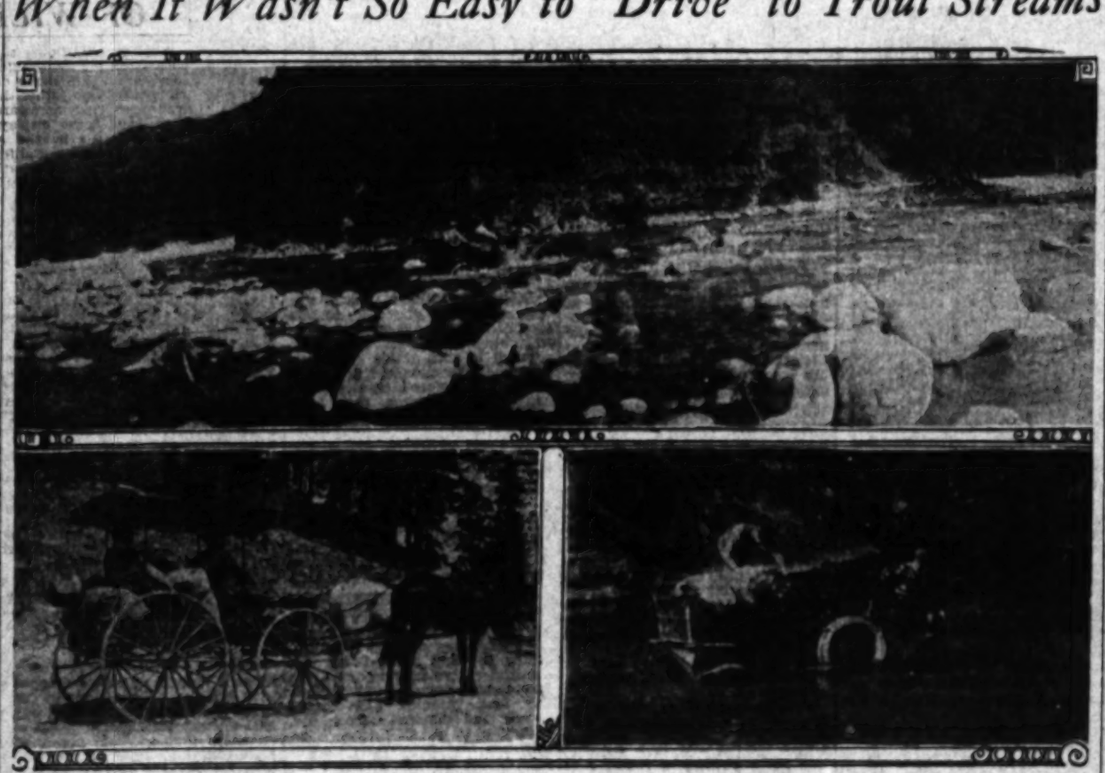
AVENUE NOW OPEN

Mansfield avenue is now open from Jefferson Boulevard south through the heart of the Baldwin Hills to the junction of Meynier Lane and Eucalyptus street.

DEVONSHIRE AVENUE OPEN

Devonshire avenue, just west of San Fernando, is again open for travel, advises the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California.

When It Wasn't So Easy to "Drive" to Trout Streams



Opening Season in Early Days of Motor Car

Twenty years ago these pictures were taken. At top is first car to go up San Gabriel Canyon to Follows Camp. Bottom left is a team en route up Arrowhead grade in the horse-and-buggy days just prior to the first automobile trip up this route to what is now Lake Arrowhead. The other view is another taken on the first trip up the San Gabriel.

DIFFICULT EARLY DAYS OF AUTO TROUT TRIP RETOLD

Few who travel the switchbacks of the Arrowhead grade, up San Gabriel Canyon, or twist and turn up City Creek to be ready for the opening of the trout season, realize that these roads were not always open to automobile traffic nor as easy to negotiate as now. There was much pioneering done in the days of fewer fishermen and more fish.

Among those living in Southern California who remember not only the first automobiles that carried fishermen into the San Bernardino Mountains but who also recall toiling up mountain roads with horse-drawn vehicles are Municipal Judges Henry M. Willis and William Frederickson. These two men in 1906 opened the season at Deep Creek after spending eight hours on the steep City Creek grade, part of the time riding in the spring wagon that carried their supplies and the rest of the time helping the horses get the wagon up the steep parts of the road. This road, they assert, was narrow, in many places much steeper than it is now, and only the real lovers of trout fishing took the trip.

FIFTY THE LIMIT

"Of course," says Judge Willis in recalling the trip, "the rewards were greater than they are today. The limit was fifty, which we could get without any difficulty and the number of fishermen was small as compared with the present. We could not run up and get the limit and return the same day, as we had to wait to rest our horses before taking the hard trip home."

William C. Vaughn, Boy Scout executive of the Whittier Huntington Park district, piloted the party which took the first "hazardous" automobile trip up the sinuous Arrowhead grade. In the two cars of the party were Mrs. Vaughn, Mr. and Mrs. Allen Craig and Judge and Mrs. William Frederickson, who formed the party that went up the grade and to Little Bear Lake, now Arrowhead, for the opening of the 1906 season.

EASY TRIP NOW

"Four, six and eight-cylinder cars will make the trip easily this week, going most or all of the way in high, but our two-cylinder cars in 1906 literally chugged their way to the top, making it in the 'surprising' time of three and a half hours. We were warned that it would be little short of suicide to attempt to make the grade and many timid friends tried to dissuade us; but we had planned to fish for trout on May 1 in the several streams that then drained into Little Bear, and we could not be talked out of it. Some cheerful souls predicted that we would probably go over the side of the grade and wind up in the canyon below, but we turned a deaf ear to them all, and continued several days of preparation. Judge Willis expected to go but was unable to leave at the last minute. He, however, was responsible for the pioneering trip, for it was his influence as a State Senator that secured the necessary permit from the San Bernardino County Supervisors for us to 'endanger' our lives, as one paper expressed it. As there was much teaming on the road fear was expressed as to how the horses would welcome the advent of machines.

START AT NIGHT

"We left San Bernardino at night in order to go when few horses were on the road and when we reached the foot of the grade gritted our teeth, made sure the acetylene lamps were in good condition, looked into the darkness ahead and started. While some of the grades and turns were pretty steep, we made the top with little difficulty, found a stream, rolled up in blankets around a campfire and went to sleep. We were awakened before daylight by the exclamations of other fishermen who could not believe their eyes when they saw the cars. All caught plenty of fish for dinner and moved camp to the shores of Little Bear Lake. We had intended going farther, but struck a grade so steep that the gasoline would not flow. Snow that fell late in the afternoon did not add to comfort though it did to the picture of trees, lake, mountains and stream. The cold cracked radiators so that they had to be fed cornmeal in order to make the return trip. We arrived home without accident, sure we had enjoyed the most thrilling trip of our lives and realizing something of the joys of pioneering that our ancestors had experienced.

"On the way home, we picked up the San Bernardino papers to find the headlines screaming,

"'Drastic Ruling to Result from Dash up Grade.'

"'No Man of Common Sense Would Take the Trip.'

"'Almost Attempted Murder.'"

WARNING EXPECTED

"Supervisor West of San Bernardino county, who gave the permit for the trip, declared under the headlines that he allowed us to go 'only for the purpose of convincing automobilists that it would be extremely dangerous for cars to use the road. When they return,' he said, 'I expect them to report to the Automobile Club that the grade is not practical for machines.'" Mr. Vaughn reported quite to the contrary and that is one of the reasons that trout fishermen are not still using horses and spring wagons.

Mr. Vaughn and Judge Frederickson also drove the first car that went up the San Gabriel Canyon to Follows Camp. They report that this pioneering was much more difficult as they literally had to make their own road, removing huge boulders and fording streams that many times ran above the running boards. Mr. Vaughn has always been an out-of-door pioneer and was the first man to ride a bicycle up Mt. Fujiama in Japan.

HALDEMAN DEALER IN HOLLYWOOD AREA

The Nash-Breyer Motor Company, Nash distributors for Southern California and Southern Nevada, announces the appointment of H. F. Haldeman as Nash dealer in Hollywood, with sales and service quarters at 6455 Sunset Boulevard, where Haldeman previously represented another make of car. Haldeman is one of the most prominent motor car merchants in the Los Angeles metropolitan area and is well known in Hollywood, where he has confined his activities for several years. At one time, for a period of a year, he was a Nash dealer in this territory.

SAFETY MAY BE TAUGHT IN SCHOOL

Governor Urged to Put New Educational Plan in Effect

Gov. Young and the State Department of Public Instruction are urged to inaugurate safety teaching in the public schools of California at the next fall term by the California Committee on Public Safety. This request came in the form of a formal resolution adopted at the annual convention of the committee held in Oakland. The resolution called attention to the fact that a bill providing for "compulsory safety education in the public schools of California" was advocated and inaugurated by the California Committee on Public Safety and was enacted into a law by the last State Legislature, but so far the provisions of the law have not been met.

In a discussion in the convention it developed that although the law had been in effect since last August, the delay was occasioned chiefly by lack of funds to prepare the new curriculum for the schools. It is believed, however, that the necessary money can be obtained from the general fund when it is shown that the need is urgent for the safety curriculum to be included in the public schools of the State at the earliest possible moment.

Reports submitted at the convention indicated that in spite of the vast amount of educational work that had been done by the committee during the last year, casualties and fatalities in traffic have continued to increase. But few cities show any improvement in the situation, although much has been done toward making uniform ordinances, installation of signals and safety devices, and appealing to motorists to accept individual responsibility in the matter of safety on the public highways.

One report submitted showed that traffic accidents had cost California nearly $70,000,000 last year. The suggestion was made that if only a portion of this large sum could be utilized in systematic and scientific accident prevention, a saving of at least half of the $70,000,000 annual bill now paid by motorists of California and the public could be made.

'STEPPING ON GAS' L OF CRIME NOW A

WASHINGTON, May 3. (AP)—Improved automobiles and highways are sounding the knell of State speed limits.

Few statutes now carry echoes of the chattering horseless carriage, which was considered a menace at any speed, as new legislation marks an upward trend in speed standards.

Of the twelve States which have taken the most recent action, ten raised their limits, while two, Indiana and Vermont, eliminated fixed standards entirely.

There are now nine States that have no speed laws, Connecticut, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Michigan, Montana, Vermont, Virginia and Wisconsin.

Massachusetts has the lowest standard, twenty miles an hour, while Nevada has a minimum, fifty [illegible] pavements. This permits ten feet as the traffic lane minimum, and, again, is contrasted to the sixteen-foot pavements with two-foot shoulders that were constructed over the State on all regular arterial highways a few years ago. A few eighteen-foot surfaces of gravel or crushed rock are permitted, but only on secondary roads in mountainous country where the travel is very light.

To care for this increase in paved width the new highway rights of way are required to be 80 to 100 feet, depending on the importance and position of the road.

Roadside tree planting along these new widened rights of way is being encouraged, and natural beauty is being conserved. Every effort is being put forth to prevent injury to trees, streams, parking sites, and all types of scenery, natural or cultivated.

ELIMINATION OF NOISE STUDIED

Plane Engineers Seek to Do Away With Sounds

Makers Not Responsible for Every Discord

Silent Ships Believed to Be Future Feature

BY FRANK J. CARMODY

One of the best stories going the rounds with regard to noise and its elimination in connection with aircraft is that of a designer of an engine who heard his successful motor child running for the first time with a muffler on it. The engine had a remarkable reputation for reliability. For hour after hour it would run perfectly under the most trying of conditions.

Yet when he heard it run with a muffler attached the designer declared that he had better leave the room for his own safety. The elimination of the exhaust and propeller noise had revealed so many other noises that the designer contended hardly that the engine was going to fly to pieces.

The engineers say, lies one of the greatest of the complications confronting efforts to eliminate or diminish the raucous roar of the airplane; namely, when one noise is silenced it reveals a host of others just as bad, if not quite so loud, which were hidden by the noise eliminated.

NOISES MULTIPLY

In the case of the engine in the airplane, the chief noise—that of the exhaust—was sumfied. Those that took its place on so alarming a scale—to the designer—were the products of the clearances allowed for valves, pistons and other interior parts of the motor. Therein lies one of the enviable superiorities of the automobile engine over that which propels the aircraft. Vibration has been eliminated from the former and clearances between reciprocating parts held to very low limits.

Some comparative knowledge on the subject can be gained by the layman if he will listen the next time he hears an airplane coming in for a landing with the engine throttled down. The main sound he will hear will be the clanking noise of the propeller, but under it he can detect a considerable rattle and clatter. He would not tolerate it for an instant in his automobile.

It is not to be inferred, engineers say, that no progress has been made in silencing airplanes. Numerous basically important steps, however, remain to be taken. That point they generally concede.

Many things basically desirable from the standpoint of noise reduction are pointed out as undesirable from other perspectives. For instance, some who think there is no question between the all-metal ship and the composite construction from the viewpoint of durability, safety and safety, admit that the latter is better wherebilience is the consideration. As between the larger enclosed transports in widest use, very problem to find a marked difference between the various fuselage constructions.

SHIP MAY BE SILENT

In connection a single-motored ship of unusual construction would make its appearance with an official fuselage of the identical type it has had in its construction period. Many are waiting to see what the difference will be in the degree of noise. Among smaller aircraft this ship has been tested in its present form, it is pointed out.

With respect to giving ear comfort to passengers, some think that placing the engine behind the wing has its advantages. This practice is employed with good effect in the case of one large amphibian. Yet the "pusher" principle is not popular for various reasons other than noise. Some question its effect on the planing asymmetrical lines of the plane and its departure from the conventional standard of plane construction.

The noise situation is to be found in regard to locating the engines on the wings of the plane. In addition the engines are designed to be notably more silent in use so far as the passenger is concerned. This is because the noise is carried away from the cabin or cockpit. Again, the question of approach and the effect upon personnel is raised.

Various forms of insulation of engine mounts are employed and with varying results. New insulation methods are the subject of considerable experimentation. From all of this research not only with regard to noise abatement but also improvement of those currently used, silence is expected to be greatly enhanced.

Willys New Eight Cylinder Line Arrives Here

Sedan model of the new line is seen at top, having wire-wheel equipment. Below is a head-on view of the car.

SCHOOL OFFICE OPENED

The road between Las Cruces and Lompoc, via the San Julian Road, is under construction and while passable, motorists should use care.

NEW STRAIGHT EIGHT HERE

Willys-Overland Enters Field With Companion Car to Six Introduced Recently

Entering the field of straight-eight automobiles, Willys-Overland, Inc., has just introduced the new Willys 8-80 which is being shown here for the first time by J. W. Leavitt & Co., California distributor.

With a wheelbase of 120 inches and long, low lines, four body styles are being produced at present—the DeLuxe sedan, Standard sedan, DeLuxe coupe and Standard coupe. Factory prices range from $1245 to $1395.

COMPANION CAR

The new Willys 8-80 is a senior companion car to the Willys six brought out this year. It is powered with a straight eight-cylinder L-head engine developing eighty horsepower and speed in excess of seventy-five miles per hour in high and more than forty-eight miles in second gear.

The engine is mounted on rubber at four points, resulting in smoothness, absence of rumble and minor vibrations. The compression ratio is 5.4 to one. Much of the engine's smoothness is due to the heavy crankshaft being statically and dynamically balanced and fitted with a vibration dampener.

Bodies have graceful, sweeping lines and are beautifully finished. Interiors are very roomy, seats are wide and comfortable. With its balance, low center of gravity and cam and lever steering gear of the semi-irreversible type with ratio of 18-to-1, the car handles with practically no effort.

In the sedan bodies flexible padded arm rests at each side of the rear seat, smart toggle straps and foot rail are noticeable features for comfortable riding. The front seat of the sedan and driver's seat in the coupe are adjustable by means of a handy turn screw. Steering posts also are adjustable. Very long chrome vanadium springs fitted with Tryon shackles and governed by hydraulic shock eliminators give unusual riding ease.

The car accelerates from 5 to 25 miles in 7.9 seconds and from 5 to 50 miles per hour in 19 seconds. Its hill-climbing qualities have been proven by testing engineers on some of the steepest grades of Pennsylvania, Tennessee and West Virginia.

Bendix Duo-Servo internal expanding two shoe four-wheel brakes are used. The total braking area is 197 square inches. The hand brake located at the extreme left of the driver operates on all four wheels.

Like other Willys-Overland products the new eight has fingertip control consisting of a button in the center of the steering wheel which starts the engine, blows the horn and operates the lights. Mono control permits opening and closing of the windshield with ease and safety while driving.

SUSTAINED HIGH SPEED

Because of its efficient oiling and cooling systems the new car is capable of long sustained high speed. Full pressure oiling is used. The lubricant is carried by pressure to crankshaft, camshaft and connecting rod bearings and to the timing chain while other parts of the engine are oiled by spray. An automatic oil control valve regulates pressure to prevent overlubrication at high speeds.

The frame is built of alloy steel with heavy channels of 9-44th inch stock, 2¾-inch flanges and 6 inches in depth. Seven strong cross members, two of them tubular, make the frame exceptionally rigid.

Heat control which is manually operated from the instrument board provides minimum gas temperatures for maximum work and high temperatures for the warming up period.

PLEA FOR PRESERVATION OF WILD FLOWERS MADE

When the wild-flower time in California the blossoms suffer tremendous losses at the hands of thoughtless pickers who gather them by the armloads. That more care be taken of the wild-flower displays is urged upon motorists by the Automobile Club of Southern California and numerous other organizations.

"Preserve the Wild Flowers" is no sentimental plea, says the motoring organization. The situation is becoming more serious annually, for the findings of many investigators show that the flowers are facing virtual extermination as a result of thoughtless picking.

The economic value of the glorious annual floral pageants is partially represented in tens of thousands of automobile miles covered by tourists and travelers visiting communities along the flower trails. The question is asked, "Where will the traveling public go when the wild flowers have disappeared?"

Ordinances are found in nearly all Southern California counties protecting the wild flowers. "Los Angeles county protects nearly all species and provides severe penalties for violation.

Riverside, San Bernardino and Imperial counties also protect nearly all wild flowers growing within their territories.

San Diego county protects all native plants including yucca and cactus; any native tree, fern, shrub or wild flower.

Tulare, Orange and Fresno counties protect all species of yucca, while Tulare and Fresno counties protect the red-bud, slippery elm and white lupine. Inyo county protects desert holly.

Ventura county recently passed an ordinance protecting all flowering or berry-bearing shrubs, ferns and wild flowers growing within 30 feet of the centers of the highways and county roads.

SALES OF MOTOR TRUCKS GROWING

Production of heavy-duty motor trucks for the first quarter of this year shows a steady, normal increase over 1928 and 1927, although the figures are somewhat below the abnormal peak reached in the corresponding period last year, so reported by the ten leading manufacturers in this class at the meeting of commercial-vehicle manufacturers at the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.

Highway Information

The following highway information was issued by the touring bureau of the Automobile Club of Southern California under date of April 29, 1930. Motorists desiring any further information may obtain it by communicating directly with the club.

MT. BALDY AND VICINITY.

Just fifty-one miles from Los Angeles and within easy reach of practically all Southern California points, Camp Baldy is the center of a delightful mountain and recreational area. Here the camper, picnicker or hiker may enjoy his favorite sports under ideal conditions combined with the life and gayety of the various resorts.

Turning north from the Foothill Boulevard near Upland excellent paved highway is traversed either via Euclid avenue or Mountain avenue, to the junction of the Stoddard Canyon Road. From this point the highway follows San Antonio Creek between towering canyon walls past Eleven Oaks Camp, Bear Canyon Camp and Camp Baldy to Ice House Canyon Resort. The highway, being oiled gravel, is dustless, the grades very easy and the scenery beautiful.

From a point just west of Ice House Canyon resort an excellent graded natural gravel mountain highway winds up several switchbacks past Manker flats and Snow Crest Camp to the end of the road at San Antonio Falls, where San Antonio Creek dashes over sheer rock cliffs a hundred feet high.

The road from here on is now in course of construction and when completed will surmount the Devil's Backbone, which is the crest of the range, and drop down into the valley of the North Fork of Lytle Creek. This will provide a beautiful loop trip replete with startling mountain scenery, secluded camping spots and cozy resorts.

San Antonio Canyon presents an appeal to a wide range of tastes. To those requiring overnight accommodations the various resorts provide airy and cool cabins and tent cabins bordering the roaring torrent of San Antonio Creek. Congenial crowds participate in the dancing, tennis, bowling and other sports, while the swimming pool at Camp Baldy is a favorite rendezvous on a warm day.

Many well-maintained trails radiate from the canyon and lure the energetic hiker or rider to the airy summits of Sugar Loaf Peak, Ontario Peak, Lookout Mountain and Mt. San Antonio, more familiarly known as "Old Baldy." This notable peak with its bald and barren dome snow covered in winter, is the outstanding and highest peak of the San Gabriel Range, and is the object of many enthusiastic hikers. A trail of approximately nine miles in length climbs its steep slopes from Bear Canyon Camp, while a shorter trail may be taken from the end of the road above Manker Flats. Both of these are quite safe for the average hiker and the views from the upper portions are well worth the effort involved.

Here are the secluded mountain meadows rich with deep, verdant grass and surrounded by tall and stately pines. Higher up near the timber line are the gnarled and twisted scrub pines. Surmounting all, Old Baldy's bare, windswept dome rears its stark crest 10,080 feet in the air. From this point the spectator may view vast areas of the Southland spread out below, like a huge relief map. His gaze may wander on clear days to the shining Pacific or is lost in the distances of the broad Mojave Desert. It has been said that one has not seen California until he has viewed it from the summit of Old Baldy.

AUTO HISTORY REVIEWED

DETROIT, May 3. (AP)—A "cellular" glass that appears destined for general adoption by the automobile industry.

Popular opinion concerning the glass has been that it was a material capable of resisting a blow to break it. This belief is erroneous. The safety glass is not unbreakable but precisely what its name implies—shatterproof. Recent tests have shown that virtually all of the damage done by broken windshields and windows in an automobile is caused by flying fragments and splinters.

In an effort to overcome this danger and to make the shatterproof safety glass unbreakable, it was evolved. The new glass will break but not scatter. Long splinters with a cracked surface and lacking, however, the immediate replacement with a thin film of patching up the break with adhesive tape.

The principle of the same idea is employed in the construction of shatterproof glass for automobile windshields and windows, but instead of using two layers of high-grade celluloid with a sheet of plate glass between, two sheets of celluloid sandwiched between are subjected to pressure at high temperature. During this process the celluloid is softened on both sheets of glass, the latter being a windshield or window that will break but will not shatter or scatter.

Most present-day motorcars have rubber-cushioned mountings anchoring the engine to the frame to obtain smoothness and quiet operation. Many manufacturers are going even further to forestall the damage and discomfort occasioned by road shock. Conceding that there is some horizontal movement at the forward end of the power plant, one producer of eight-cylinder cars has brought out what is called a "synchronizer." It is, in effect, a tie rod bolted tightly to the right side of the car frame and extending through an opening in the crankcase to a vertical rocker arm. It permits the almost microscopic movement at the front of the power plant, at the same time restraining any excessive movement.

Another objective long sought by automotive engineers has made its appearance in several makes of motorcars. This is the "silent second" speed. Shifting of gears regardless of speed, without clashing, is claimed as one of the possibilities as the result of recent improvements in transmission construction. Herringbone or V-shaped gear teeth provide the silence sought for second speed. An ingenious toothed clutch device is another factor contributing to the clashless feature in one of the higher-priced models.

ARIZONA HEARS FROM SENATOR ABOUT ROAD

TUCSON, May 3. (Exclusive) Senator H. F. Ashurst has advised the Tucson Chamber of Commerce that there has been only conditional national acceptance in the 7 per cent system of the highway from Ehrenberg to Wickenburg, on the so-called Central route. Final approval, the Senator wires, is to depend upon what California does for the Mecca-Blythe road and what Arizona and California will do toward purchase of the bridge at Blythe across the Colorado River.

AVIATION

AMPHIBIAN AIR LINER PLANNED

Development on Quantity Production Basis

Steel Hull Divided Into Compartment Units

Sailing Estimated More Than Three Miles

Particulars concerning the recently announced model Q-10 amphibian air liner, to be manufactured by the General Western Aero Corporation, Ltd., a California corporation with an authorized capital of $1,000,000, with offices in the Roosevelt Building, have just been made public.

The model Q-10 has been developed along quantity production lines though nothing of a radical nature is planned. Standard aeronautical procedure has been followed in the engineering.

The plane will have an all-steel hull. This hull, and the stub wings that form an integral part of it, are to be made from German nonrusting steel. The hull itself will be divided into numerous water and air-tight compartments, each a separate unit in itself. It is maintained by the engineers that two-thirds of these compartments might be damaged and the plane would still float in a rough sea.

Complete specifications are as follows: Type, semicantilever amphibian monoplane; ten passengers and two pilots; dual control with exceptional visibility provided due to the fact that two-bladed propellers will be used, set on each side of the pilots' cabin; span will be sixty feet, length over all forty-six feet with the tail right on land set at 14 feet. The wing curve is a special A.A.C. with a special wing area, including aileroms and stub wings or floats of 712 square feet. Estimated weight, empty, is 7750 pounds, loaded, 9500 pounds. Power plants will consist of two 300-horsepower radial motors, each of which will be built into the leading edge of the wings and will be specially cowled for reduction in head resistance. It is expected this special cowling will add nine ten miles per hour to the speed of the ship. This speed has now been estimated at a high of 130 miles per hour and a cruising speed of 110 miles per hour. A ceiling of 17,500 feet or more than three miles is estimated for the amphibian air liner.

The Great Western Aero Corporation, Ltd., is operating under an exclusive manufacturing franchise granted them by the Amphibian Aircraft Corporation, developers of the model Q-10. Officers and directors include Louis P. Vremsak, president; Stuart L. Klingelsmith, vice-president and secretary; L. M. Sherman, vice-president and treasurer; William J. Waterhouse, Llett Whittier, Leo La Gasse, Floyd Hamm and Edward Stuets, directors.

BOY HASLETT WILL WORK AS GUIDE

Roy Haslett, old-time Polytechnic high football coach and in recent years part owner in Glacier lodge in the High Sierras, will work out as a guide from Boulder Lodge, June 15, this coming trout season. Haslett is one of the most ardent trout fishermen in the State and knows the High Sierras.

GERMAN POWERED GLIDER TO BE TRIED

Test of Small Craft to be Conducted Here Today

Capt. N. Merle Nelson and Powered Glider

WITH sufficient power only to get it into the air and to assist in case adverse air conditions are encountered, a "powered glider" of German design and equipped with a French motor has arrived in California and will perform today at Metropolitan Airport.

Capt. W. Merle Nelson, attached to the aviation division of the Texas Company, will be at the controls and he proposes to climb to about two miles altitude over either Saugus, Glendale or San Fernando, depending on prevailing winds, shut off his motor and land with a "dead stick" after twelve to fifteen minutes of gliding.

The craft is an Aeromarine-Klemm with a forty-foot wing spread and is equipped with a forty-horsepower Salmson motor. It has a stalling speed of twenty-eight miles an hour and can fly normally, therefore, at thirty miles, it was pointed out. Its gliding angle is 15 to 1, meaning that it can glide without wind assistance for fifteen miles if power is shut off one mile up. The Texan glider Eaglet used by Capt. Frank Hawks in his transcontinental flight had a gliding angle of twenty-two-to-one, Nelson explained, while the gliding angles of airplanes range from five to eleven to one.

"We are only seeking to continue and to elaborate on experiments made by Hawks with gliders," Nelson said yesterday. "We feel that a powered glider is the logical step from a glider in the training of airplane pilots. The machine I will use today cannot tailspin, weighs only 934 pounds including 260-pound motor and to date has a perfect safety record."

The Aeromarine-Klemm craft was flown from New York City by Capt. O. G. LeBoutillier, famed sky-writing pilot, who made the trip here in forty-five hours and twenty minutes flying time, according to his records. The route, reversed, used by Hawks in his transcontinental glider flight, was followed by LeBoutillier.

A dozen players from the Beverly Hills district met Tuesday night at the home of Richard Schayer, M.-G.-M. scenarist, 239 South Peck Drive. Another open meeting will be held Tuesday night, the 13th, at the same place, when a Beverly Hills Chess Club will be organized. All players in between West Los Angeles and Santa Monica are invited. Bring the ladies.

The Glendale Chess Club is meeting now at the Glendale Hotel, Broadway and Glendale Boulevard, on Tuesday and Friday nights, through the courtesy of the hotel management. The club's secretary, Dr. E. H. Sawyer, 111 East Broadway, would like to hear from all players in the Glendale district.

The annual match between San Francisco and Los Angeles will this year probably be a crossboard affair at San Luis Obispo on Sunday, June 1.

In the minor tourney of the local club in the Union League Building, first prize was won by Carl Pauly, 8-0. Second prize was won by L. N. Shore, 6-2. Next came Bradstreet, 5½-2½, and Tom Sawyer, 4½-3½. Other participants were Matthay, Freedman, Victor, Quinones and Pascal. Carl Pauly, retired realty broker, never misses an afternoon at the local club, being an ardent devotee of "social chess."

A simultaneous exhibition at the Mechanics' Institute, San Francisco, Saturday night, April 27, by Herman Steiner, New York State champion, recently of Los Angeles, resulted in his winning 14, losing 2 and drawing one.

The demise on April 7 of Paul Dana, aged 57, former editor of the New York Sun, and a son of the famous Charles A. Dana, deprived the chess coterie at the University Club in New York of one of its staunch devotees.

Dr. Arthur Twining Hadley, president emeritus of Yale University, passed away March 6 at Kobe, Japan. He was very fond of chess and enjoyed taking part in matches between the faculty and students.

A big time is planned for the Arroyo Seco Club on Friday night, the 23rd inst. Miss LaVieve Hines of Pasadena, Pacific Coast woman's champion, will head a team of four or five experts and oppose allcomers in a progressive simultaneous. Watch this column for further details and keep that night open.

The Sierra Madre Chamber of Commerce is inviting, through the Associated Chambers of Comerce of the San Gabriel Valley, all chess players in the twenty-two towns of that district, to meet in Sierra Madre on Saturday, June 21, to commemorate the birthday (June 22) of the famous champion of champions, Paul Morphy. Keep that date open and watch this column for further particulars.

In the Pasadena championship tourney Prof. Bateman still leads with a perfect score. Heath is second with three losses, and Tazier third. Broughton and Monahan are also in the finals. Simpson qualified for the finals but has withdrawn.

The recent London-Washington cable match will likely be adjudicated in London's favor. Board 1 was a draw. On Board 2 Whitaker lost to Thomas. The other four boards were unfinished and left for adjudication by the International Federation. Three of them are sure draws, while one shows Miotkowski a pawn ahead of Winter of London but in a position which can hardly be proved a win. When Whitaker filed his fourth move a gasp was distinctly audible on both sides of the ocean. The game quickly turned into a hectic affair, white sacrificing a piece for three pawns with an apparent winning attack but missed the correct continuation.

FIRST OVER TWO POLES

BYRD'S SOUTH POLE FLIGHT IN PHOTOS

ON THIS and following pages of this "Special Byrd Antarctic Expedition Rotogravure Section" are reproduced actual photographs made during Rear-Admiral Richard E. Byrd's epoch-making flight to and from the South Pole. They record spectacular high spots in the work of an expedition whose sojourn below the Antarctic Circle has widened the knowledge of Antarctica by an estimated thirty-four times, in addition to making available a mass of meteorological, aeronautical, and radio data of inestimable value. A map on Page 4 shows the Byrd South Pole flight in complete detail, together with the estimated extent of the land seen. This provides, with photographs now released here for the first time, a closeup of the work which carried the intrepid Richard E. Byrd to a place in the hall of fame as first over two poles.

—All Byrd expedition photographs in this section copyright by New York Times Co., and St. Louis Post Dispatch. All rights for publication reserved throughout the world.

Ashley McKinley, who made the flight photographs reproduced on this and other pages.

THE FOLLY OF FA...
PROVED FOR 22 YEARS—AND TO MA...

CONSIDER the fact that countless people, for many years, have been fighting fat in the modern way. No abnormal exercise or diet to bring harm.

Note the results you see everywhere. Slender figures now prevail. Excess fat is the exception. New youth and beauty, new health and vigor, have come to multitudes in the easy, pleasant, right way.

One great reason is a discovery that science made some years ago. It was found that most fat people had an underactive gland. That gland largely controls nutrition, and its weakness leads to fat.

Modern physicians, since that discovery, have applied a new treatment to obesity. They have fed the lacking substance.

Marmola prescription tablets, prepared by a famous laboratory, contain the factors they employ. So this effective and right method is at ... one's command.

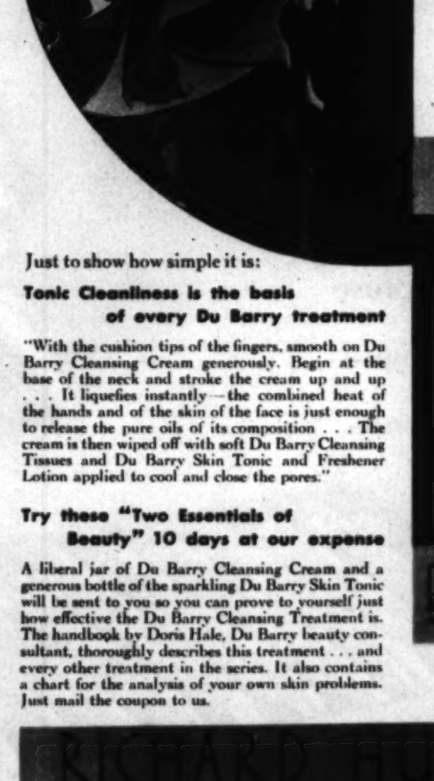
The Pleasant Way to Reduce

IT'S SUCH FUN TO SEE YOUR SKIN TAKE ON NEW LOVELINESS



These new Du Barry Beauty Preparations and the new Du Barry Hand Principle bring the Beauty Salon to your own home.

One of the pleasant things, women tell us, about the Du Barry home method is the way it invites regular day-by-day care. That's one of the most important factors in any beauty treatment.

All these fascinating jars and bottles on your dressing table—the soft, velvety creams, the fragrant oils, the sparkling tonic lotions! What fun it is, every night, to see how quickly the skin responds to the treatments—those ugly little frown lines—or lines around the eyes and mouth—being gradually smoothed away; sagging chin and cheek muscles becoming firmer and firmer; the sallowness of your complexion disappearing; and your skin taking on the youthful glow of soft, fine-textured loveliness.

For every mark that age leaves on your skin there is a special, easily grasped treatment. The preparations themselves have all been scientifically designed for just this home use—many of them containing ingredients never before used in beauty aids to make them safe, pure, unusually effective—none of them requiring special massage skill or mechanical devices.

Each treatment is described in detail in a little handbook you receive with each Du Barry purchase. And it's all so economical.

Just to show how simple it is:

Tonic Cleanliness is the basis of every Du Barry treatment

"With the cushion tips of the fingers, smooth on Du Barry Cleansing Cream generously. Begin at the base of the neck and stroke the cream up and up . . . It liquefies instantly—the combined heat of the hands and of the skin of the face is just enough to release the pure oils of its composition . . . The cream is then wiped off with soft Du Barry Cleansing Tissues and Du Barry Skin Tonic and Freshener Lotion applied to cool and close the pores."

Try these "Two Essentials of Beauty" 10 days at our expense

A liberal jar of Du Barry Cleansing Cream and a generous bottle of the sparkling Du Barry Skin Tonic will be sent to you so you can prove to yourself just how effective the Du Barry Cleansing Treatment is. PRESTO! Mexico becomes the West Indies! And a new prospect of scenic charm is revealed!

"The Sea Bat," a story of the tropic trade of sponge-fishing, comes to the screen with the background of Mazatlan. And a highly pictorial background it is, as the accompanying views from this Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer feature reveal.

The picture bears a family resemblance, perhaps, to "White Shadows of the South Seas," "Rain" and other themes of the torrid climes. It presents, however, a highly romantic theme.

"The Sea Bat" was directed by Wesley Ruggles and leading roles are played by Raquel Torres, Charles Bickford, Nils Asther and others.

Coming UP!

Irene Rich and Will Rogers appear together again as wife and husband in "So This Is London."

What ho, call the guards, Daphne Pollard enters into difficulty while attempting to "crash" the country in "America or Bust." Jimmy Aubrey as the dentist.

Right—George (Red) Corcoran and Inez Courtney stage an old-fashioned love scene in "The Solid Gold Article."

The screen's new desperado, "Billy the Kid." Otherwise, Johnny Mack Brown, who will be seen in the title role of this melodrama.

For the first time in his screen career William Powell, in "The City of Silent Men" shaves off his mustache.

Cliff Edwards plays the part of the ever-singing football coach in "Good News."

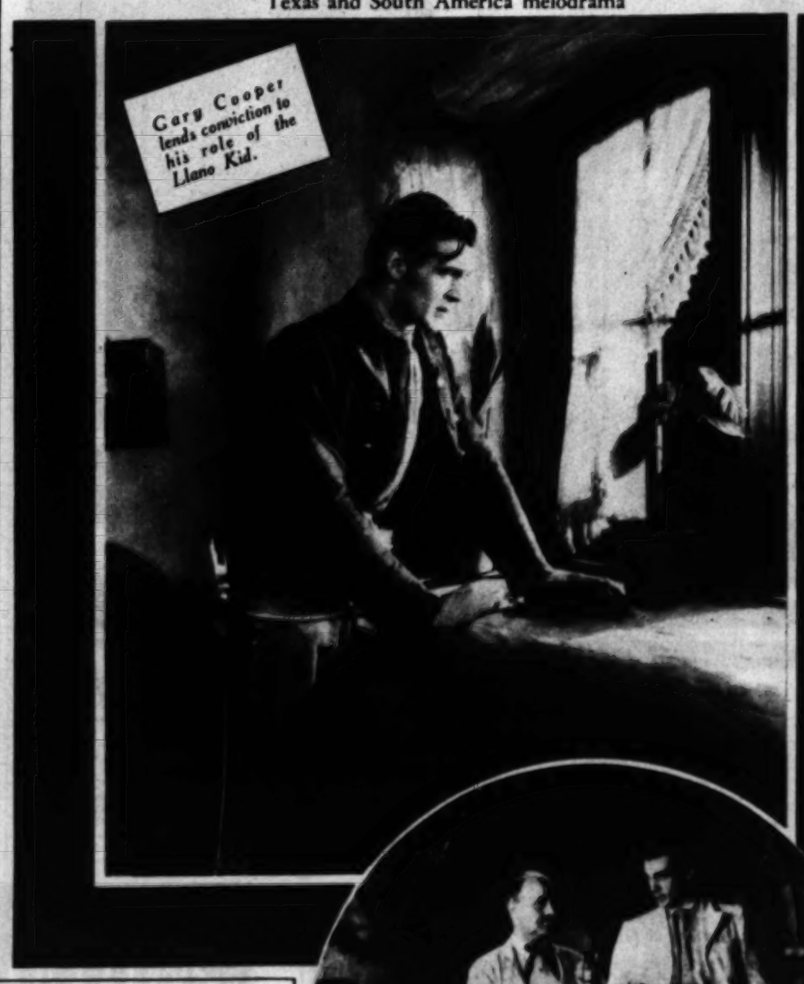
ACTION EMPHASIZED IN "THE TEXAN"

Gary Cooper ably supported by Fay Wray, Emma Dunn and others in Texas and South America melodrama



Oscar Apfel, as the agent, receives the reward offered for the discovery of the long-lost son, while Fay Wray and Emma Dunn look on.

By WHITNEY WILLIAMS

ENERGETICALLY enacted, though slow moving at times, "The Texan" is one of those melodramas destined for popular success. Gary Cooper is starred, and in prominent support Fay Wray, Emma Dunn and Oscar Apfel distinguish themselves in difficult roles. The film rates as the most entertaining turned out by the Paramount organization in several months.

Opening with a stirring bit of action—five aces are dealt in a poker game—the scene of activity shifts rapidly to South America, where a mother is awaiting the return of a long lost son. An agent of this senora has been searching for the son in the United States, and when he meets Cooper, in flight after a shooting episode, induces him to journey to the southern continent with him and pose as the subject of the years-old quest. The senora is wealthy and the two will have much money to divide.

So Cooper, known in Texas as the Llano Kid, with a price on his head, dead or alive, is accepted in the senora's household. He finds, too, a most attractive cousin, Fay Wray. The mother believes implicitly that the stranger is her son, and on his first day in her home she delivers to him the keys of her gold chest.

The plan to rob the senora of her gold soon grows distasteful to Cooper, though as the Llano Kid he was a notorious bandit along the Rio Grande. He is touched by the old mother's unquestioning faith in him—and there is Fay Wray. The day before the boat sails for the north—the day set for the robbery—he discovers that the real son is the crooked gambler he shot in Texas.

From the moment in which Cooper tells the agent that their deal is off, the action attains a tempestuous speed. The agent organizes a gang of desperadoes to steal the gold and kill Cooper—and when Cooper rides into the courtyard of the hacienda, after delivering his ultimatum, he is met by a Texas sheriff, come to take him back to the United States.

"The Texan" is endowed with qualities that are sure-fire from a box-office standpoint. Cooper is excellently cast as the Llano Kid and plays the part with the reserve that undoubtedly would go hand in hand with the character. The nature of the role naturally leads to a comparison with that he portrayed in "The Virginian."

Fay Wray is particularly appealing as Consuelo, the niece of the old senora, and acquits the part with finesse. Her foreign accent is splendid, as is, too, Emma Dunn's, who figures as the senora. Miss Dunn will find immediate favor. Oscar Apfel as the agent is convincing in a heavy role and James Marcus adds a note of very human humor to the sheriff he depicts. Soledad Jimenez and Donald Reed are outstanding in bits.

"The Texan" is from O. Henry's story, "A Double-Dyed Deceiver," found in the volume entitled, "Roads of Destiny." Oliver H. P. Garrett and Daniel N. Rubin wrote the adaptation and screen play, respectively, and John Cromwell directed.

STELLA HITHER and THITHER

By GRACE KINGSLEY

"OH, THERE'S to be an all-Eaton party, and we're invited!" exclaimed Stella, delightedly. "Reginald Sharland, who has just finished as Lenore Ulric's leading man in 'East of Sues' and gone into pictures, is taking us. It's sure to be peppy and awfully nice."

The Eaton children, Mary, Pearl, Doris and Charlie, had given their mother a beautiful home in Beverly Hills, and it was there that the house-warming was to be held.

We found Millard Webb, the director, husband of Mary, aiding in receiving, entirely surrounded by Eatons, all of whom proved most charming.

"Pearl is one of the loveliest hostesses I have ever met," Stella confided. "She makes everybody feel so warmly and happily at home."

SUE CAROL and Nick Stuart came in as we were chatting, bringing with them Sue's old school chum, Virginia Cherrill, Charlie Chaplin's leading lady. Virginia was moaning a bit because Charlie doesn't want her to play in any other pictures before "City Lights" is released, and she, being like a young race-horse, new in the business, naturally is anxious to be off. But she thoroughly appreciates the break Charlie is giving her, all the same.

Sue was indirectly responsible for Virginia's getting into pictures, as it was while Virginia was in the west visiting Sue that she met Charlie. But sometimes I suspect Sue of stage-managing the whole thing. She's clever enough to have done it.

We noticed that Virginia was wearing a very short bob, and she said it was all Charlie's fault.

"He asked me one day why I didn't have my hair cut—said it was getting too long," Virginia explained. "I said I didn't have time. Whereupon he grabbed the prop man and brought him over, making him cut my hair. I was scared to death about how it would look; but it seems that in the dear dead past said prop man had been a barber, and he hadn't forgotten his art, as it turned out."

THAT handsome Hugh Trevor was there, and we also met Richard Enderley, W. L. Wallace, Lillian and Paul Sloan, Kenneth Harlan, who had just lately returned from vaudeville; Bert Wheeler and his sweet wife, Betty Recklaw, the dancer; Harry Ruby, composer, Minnie Sawyer, who assists Pearl Eaton as dancing teacher at RKO; Rex Bailey and a lot of others.

Hugh Trevor, we noted, was paying a lot of attention to Doris Eaton, but Reginald Sharland kept up a heavy interference, so I don't know whether poor Hugh scored very heavily or not.

BETTY chided Harry Ruby for not having bought a new hat, but wearing the old one to the party. She pounced on it at the moment he was handing it to the butler, reminding Harry scornfully about his promise, but Harry meekly replied, "What's a hat among friends?" However, all the boys went into a huddle over it, and I believe ended by taking Harry's old hat away from him.

"Well," Pearl Eaton poured oil on the troubled waters, "I think it's very geniusy to wear an old hat, and Harry's so clever it doesn't matter at all."

Whereupon Betty scolded her for not standing by a pal who was trying to make a Hollywood sheik out of Ruby.

Rex Bailey is so handsome that we thought surely he must be a new Hollywood actor, but we found out that he is a business man.

"But he's likely to turn into an actor any minute," confided Stella.

WE HEARD that Jack Oakie had arrived in the middle of the afternoon, demanding to know, "Where is that Eaton house-warming I've been hearing so much about?" And had gone away, promising to return.

We had to leave early for another party, so we missed seeing him and Gwen Lee, who was to come with him.

It was awfully hard to tear ourselves away from the charming Eatons, and we were very late at our next party as a result; but we all decided, as we reluctantly left, that the Eatons give just the nicest parties ever.

"WHY, it looks just like the Follies! Look at the limousines!"

Stella and I had gone over to the Assistance League Gift Shop and Lunch Room—which is sponsored by Mrs. Hancock Banning and presided over by Mrs. Abraham Lehr —near the Fox studio.

"Of course," I retorted, "those are the waitresses' cars! Don't you know that a lot of the stars, when they aren't busy, and all the directors' wives, come over here to wait on table at least one day a week?"

INSIDE, we found pretty little Kathryn Perry, Owen Moore's wife, presiding as cashier. She said she wasn't waiting table that day, but that she had done so, and so far hadn't spilled a drop of anything. But Ann Lehr told on her—said she had dropped a tray the day before.

Up dashed Mary Ford, Jack Ford's wife, just then, and said that she would never again, as long as she lived, tell a waitress to hurry! She had had her husband and some other directors to wait on that day, and she said she got awfully fussed trying to be professional in her work.

She was wearing a beautiful coat, but said she couldn't take it off because she was wearing only a silk slip, having just dashed down to the market, and not expecting to have to wait on table that day!

MRS. GEORGE FITZMAURICE, who used to be Diana Kane, you remember, was there, and came and sat at table with us. She always wore tennis shoes when she waited on table, she declared, to keep from skidding. She told us that she had taken in $17 in tips the day before from John McCormack and his party, which was a record.

"Don't you ever think we don't take tips," she stated. "Of course, they are all turned over to the Assistance League, which aids a lot of worthy poor."

THE lunch room is very attractive and the food we found to be wonderful. A lot of it is donated by the wives of directors, and is cooked by their chefs.

Mrs. Fitzmaurice said that the poor husbands who came to eat here, therefore, had to pay for the food twice!

The League is trying to buy some extra linen, as poor Ann Lehr has to take the supply home every night and wash it herself!

Mrs. W. H. Howard said that her husband told her he was glad she was waiting on somebody!

DORIS ARBUCKLE arrived just then, and declared that she didn't really think the volunteer waitresses should be too good at their job just at first, or somebody would suspect their professional past!

Alice Glaser asserted that, as for her, when she got through here, she was going to Patton to hunt up a job.

BLANCHE SWEET came in, and said that she was delighted to meet her waitress socially, but that she hadn't much time to talk to her, as she had an engagement.

She was with Dorothy Dalton; and Becky Gardiner, scenario writer, also was among the guests; While Mrs. Hunt Stromberg, Mrs. Tod Browning and Mrs. Harry Beaumont helped wait on table.

AS A MATTER of fact, despite all the kidding, the picture actresses and directors' wives are faithfully coming, on their particular days, to wait on table, and it is no easy job. But that they are doing their job well is evidenced by the fact that business is steadily building up.

We were to have had some hash that day made by George Fitzmaurice's chef, only Diana forgot to tell him in the morning, but there would be hash next day, she promised us. In the meantime, there was some wonderful Irish stew donated by Mrs. Harry Beaumont.

Doris Arbuckle came over and showed her dimples in a grin as she exclaimed, slipping into a chair beside us—

"Well, I'm sure of one thing—the outcome of this thing will be, we're going to establish a home for broken-down waitresses!"

BUILDING NICK ROSE BOMBER

CHASSIS AND PROPELLER NOW NEXT IN AIRCRAFT LEAGUE WORK

BY ELWOOD V. CHANDLEE
Los Angeles Playground and Recreation Department

(Last week we gave preliminary details, in the course of the Los Angeles Times-Playground Aircraft League, on the building of the Nick Rose bomber, designed by a former playground boy who is now a league instructor. The lesson this week describes the chassis and propeller of this bomber.—ED.)

In the first article we described the fuselage and we hope you have finished it so you can proceed with the chassis.

The chassis struts are made from spruce 3-16x5-8x7 inches long. There are four required.

Each strut is first planed and then sanded to a streamline shape. It is suggested that you use coarse sandpaper to start with and finish up with fine sandpaper. It will be rather slow work at first to bring the struts down to a streamline as you are working with spruce and not balsa. Just have a little patience as the finish strut is well worth the effort.

These struts are held to the fuselage by first inserting a brad through the longeron down into the end of the strut and then glueing. The lower end of the struts are cut as shown in Fig. 3 on Page 4.

The axle strut which passes from wheel to wheel is also spruce and is planed and sanded just as the other struts are.

The lower end of each strut is wrapped and glued together. This is a simple job and does not require much detail. The main thing to look out for is to see that your axle is at right angles to the center line of the fuselage. If it isn't your model will travel sideways down the field when taking off.

The wheels are three inches in diameter. They can be made from solid wood and they can have rubber tires. Some of the large tire manufacturers make sample tires of this size which you can purchase for a few cents.

The hub should be made from 3-16 I.D., brass tubing pressed into the center of the wheel.

The axle is a 3-16 O.D. aluminum tube which runs from one wheel to the other. The axle hole is drilled through the glued wrapping and then pressed into place and reglued.

Streamline covers were placed over the wheels on the original model, but it is not necessary for you to do so. These covers add greatly to the appearance of the model, but, if you are not careful, they will cause you serious trouble if they are not mounted correctly.

If you wish to make them you will need a piece of balsa seven inches long. Of course, the thickness and width will be determined by the size and shape of tire you use.

The covers (or pants as they are often called) should be so placed that the lower part of the tire shows completely. This enables the tire to flex and give in landing without rubbing against the walls of the pants.

The wheel should run freely and not touch any part of the covers. You will find that if you have a good fit on your axles it will be much easier to rise off the ground.

The streamline covers are held to the chassis by cement. Use plenty of glue so that you can build up a good joint.

The propeller is made from a piece of hard balsa 1 by 2 by 15 inches long. The propeller is of rather novel design. It is fan shaped and has no taper as you can easily see in Figs. 1 and 2.

The first thing to do is to lay out the blank. Mark off the center. Then place your rule at the outer corner and make a line to within one-fourth inch of the shaft hole. Repeat this operation until you have the complete propeller marked out. Now make a mark one inch out from the hub. Do this on each side of the hub. This will indicate where the spinner cap will go, so do not

Today our Snoopy revels in strange and thrilling experiences. Strive as he will he seems destined to fall, not only into the briar patch, but into overwhelming trouble. His character, you note, has changed; he is growing up, acquiring longer whiskers, and a ferocious amount of curiosity. Just where it leads remains to be seen, but when he finds himself on the shores of the Do-Do-Land, things begin to happen. So, follow this story closely, the illustrations are by Hardie Gramatky, Times Junior Club pioneer, who now is smashing out oils at fancy prices.

Once, ever so long ago, before cabbages had leaves, and fish swam in the sea, two silver-haired rabbits discussed many things. They spoke of a hateful queen by the name of Saga, who had mischiefed them in the Opal Forest; they spoke of the weather, spring weeds, and where they should make their home. For they were extremely happy, these silver-haired rabbits, having found each other in the Garden of Moon-Trees, which is ever so far from the center of the earth.

"Let us forget unpleasant adventures," advised Twink, the larger of the two, "tell me my Snoop, where shall we live?" And the tiny gray rabbit who was her son, laid his head on her paws, and remarked:

"Look at my ears, I beg you. They have saved my life countless times. I can fly with these homely things, therefore, let me do the searching." But Twink, being a mother, flounced about in great fear; they had been through such sorrow these two, she could not bear Snoop out of her sight. So they argued and planned, and the longer they argued, the less they knew. Finally, the smaller rabbit folded up his ears determinedly.

"We shall strike a bargain," he announced, "let us start for the Kingdom of Elephants, and if it does not please you, we shall travel farther. But I know you will like this country—which lies close to the Moon Trees." And Snoop sighed delightedly, as he thought of certain things which were in store for them.

"Is it wisdom to visit these creatures?" asked Twink, a bit fearfully.

"Wisdom?" her son was beside himself with laughter. "When you meet Hadja you will understand."

"And who is he?" asked Snoop's mother, refusing to be put off.

"Hadja is man; he is the friend of Boola, the largest elephant in their kingdom. We will be welcomed and asked to visit their jungle."

"If Hadja is man," said Twink slowly, "why is he living here? Something is wrong."

"On the contrary," defended Snoop, "when the elephants called me spy, because I accidentally flew over their walls, this brown-skinned child defended me, and pleaded for my life. Surely we may call him friend."

Twink moved her ears slowly, and slicked her whiskers one by one. Then she remarked, "Despite your great travels, you are still young and have much to learn. While I do not distrust Man, it is well to watch him."

"Here is your opportunity," chuckled the rabbit, as the narrow road they had followed came to a sudden end. "This is the Kingdom of Elephants," he announced. "Help me rap on the door, will you? It's thick as an oak tree."

"Certainly," Twink struck the stone slab before her a resounding whack. "I hope some one's about," she said, but no sooner had the words left her lips, than an opening appeared in the wall. A massive creature stepping within it, her small eyes taking stock of the travelers before her.

"Boola," cried Snoop, delightedly, "surely you remember me," but the elephant wagged her head dolefully.

"I do not," she said, "rabbits should not bother us, you belong with the rats and mice."

"Indeed," Snoop's ears flew upward in wrath, "if that's how you feel, call Hadja. Man does not forget."

MORE POINTS FOR BETTER ART WORK

ORIGINALITY COUNTS IN MOVE TO HELP YOU AND ALSO AID OUR "JUNIOR"

BY AUNT DOLLY

Last week over 350 pieces of art work were taken out of the "A" group and returned! A bombshell? Slightly; a drastic movement on our part, and yet a necessary one, as we are selling quality, not quantity.

The Junior Times has grown and strengthened on the principles of helpful criticism. Merely pretty drawings, lacking in spice, are not wanted. The usual ballyhoo concerning club spirit, membership, the goodness and greatness of our organization is sickeningly syrupy. Let's step in line and turn out striking, original drawings, mazes, puzzles, cut-outs, etc. Half-baked humor and used jokes are not wanted.

And yet, you say, how can a person be sure of what is wanted? The answer is, study the best junior magazines and don't be a copy cat, guilty of plagiarism in any degree. It is quite permissible to run through other peridodicals, match ideas, build up a morgue or clipping box, then work your individual material from that, but never at any time be influenced by another's style or type of work!

Now, to make the game doubly interesting, we are not using strips for a while. We are concentrating on a better type of front-page drawing; all types of puzzles, mazes, cut-outs, etc., anything that will appeal to the younger group. Some of these "what's wrong" pictures are mighty good pullers, only they must be carefully and accurately drawn, and the mistakes hard to detect should be listed on a separate piece of paper, attached to the picture, so that we have all necessary information close at hand.

To whet interest, we are cutting down on the number of pictures used in the Junior, but are offering almost double the number of points for usable material, so go to it, artists!

COLOR-CHART CONTEST WINNERS

Dorothy Brown's color chart, gay with reds, yellows and greens, won her first place in our Gypsy color-chart contest. Ten points will be placed on her card this morning, and congratulations extended. It is no small trick defeating hundreds of other chart fans, so let's give three cheers for Dorothy Brown of Glendale!

Other names on the Junior honor roll follow:

Bernice Owens, La Reeta Clairette, Cozymine Fergoda, Juanita Booth, David Drew, June Hafner, Irene Pierce, Helen Brooks, Sheila Lloyd-Butler, Gladys Ludlam, Suzanne Stephenson, Elizabeth Moon, Genevieve Newman, Lowla Andrade, Virginia Brown, Barbara Busher, Frank E. The spinner is notched out to receive the propeller and then glued.

The propeller shaft is a bicycle spoke inserted into the propeller and cemented.

In the concluding article you will be given the drawing and description of the wing and tail surfaces.

OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS, OR KNOW OUR CALIFORNIA BIRDS

(Learn about our California birds by coloring the above chart, following the suggestions on colors given in the story, or using your natural history books as a guide. Then send your colored chart to Aunt Dolly, care of The Junior Times, who will award special credits for the best ones. Remember when you get thirty credits a $1.50 cash prize will be sent you, or you may have your choice of a large number of useful articles of equal value.)

THE SORA

The sora is sometimes known as the Carolina rail, sora rail, crake and rail-bird. Living almost exclusively among lagoons, and salt marshes, he exists happily upon small crustaceans, insects, seeds of wild grasses and worms. Bold, inquisitive in nature, he will come close to man, look at him with twinkling eyes, then fly off, as unconcerned as though they had never met.

The sora is a favorite game bird with many, and was formerly slaughtered in large numbers, especially throughout New England, where they have an abundance of these harmless little birds.

In size, he matches the Towhee, has an upper coag of olive brown, varied by black and white in spots, and stripes on back. His cheeks, behind sides of throat and breast, are bluish ash; his under feathers are olive brown, barred with white. The young sora is ridiculous as a clown, resembling a ball of inky down, decorated by orange chin whiskers, with a scarlet cap on his perky little head.

The nest is woven from grasses and weeds, located in or near marshes. From six to sixteen eggs are laid, buff colored, spotted with reddish brown.

SNOOPY IN DO-DO LAND

"As though we do!" trumpeted Boola, "are we not wise, strong, cunning, at times even cruel? Who is it that traps tigers in the land of man?—not he who carries the gun, but my sisters and brothers who form a circle and charge through death-stricken grass—and you—you insignificant, lop-eared ball of fuzz, dare to criticise us."

"Give me half your weight, and I'd prove my words," cried Snoop, flushing beneath his fur. "I don't suppose you remember the night I flew over your walls, and you ordered me to be trampled to death, if I failed to prove my words."

Instantly Boola's attitude changed. Her head wagged apologetically, and her beady eyes took on a more kindly expression.

"Sorry," she said, in a raspy voice, "my mistake entirely, Snoop, won't you come in?" Twink, however, hesitated on the threshold.

"I do not like her," she whisper—"let's look farther," but Snoop was so greatly excited, he dashed helter-skelter into the opening before him.

"Snoopy Was Carried Into Unknown Regions—"

"Hadja," he called, "Hadja, I have found my Mummy—Frisky Rat saved her from the trap, and here we are."

Boola watched them curiously, as the rabbits, shoulder to shoulder, waited for the appearance of the brown boy. He came slowly, from a clearing beyond the first ring of jungle trees—walking with great care as he adjusted his turban. At sight of the long-eared rabbit with acorn buttons sewn on his shoulders, he gave a cry of delight.

"My friend," he declared, running warm fingers through Snoopy's fur, "I knew you would return, giving me a chance to apologise. But who is that?" He turned politely toward Twink.

"My Mummy," explained Snoop, "you remember how Saga mischiefed her. Now we are free, and anxious to settle down, but undecided as to where we should live."

Hadja was delighted, and bowed, not once, but many times, before Twink, as he led them toward the forest.

"On that small hill," he explained, "is an ideal spot for you to rest, and build a fortification of your own. You will not be disturbed, as I am in charge of such affairs."

tention to my words. This rushing and roaring is not of our kingdom—therefore, let us stay banded together."

But the elephants were restless and did not obey. Many of them slunk into the jungles, the very young rubbing close to their mothers. Hadja shook his head in dismay.

"It is always this way—when one needs them, they must separate," he said.

Snoop did not answer. His fur was bristling with fear, and Twink, standing beside him, trembled so violently, he held her close to him.

"Have no fear," he said, in a very deep voice, "I have lived through worse than this." Then he caught Hadja's eye, and the terror written within it, caused his heart to beat unevenly. The heat had become intense, and the roaring increased to such a degree they could not make themselves heard above it. Twink lay close to the ground, her pink nose moist with fear.

"I shall protect you," cried Snoop, in her silver tipped ear, but even as his words reached her, the sky darkened, flames bit into the jungle about them, and a huge puff of smoke circling beneath them, carried Twink and his mother into unknown regions . . .

BIOGRAPHY OF BETTY ROSS

By Helen Angs, Santa Monica

Betsy Ross was born in Philadelphia in 1752. She was the daughter of Samuel Griscom, who aided in building the Independence Hall. In 1773, she married the nephew of George Ross, who was one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence.

On June 14, 1777, the Continental Congress decided upon the design for a flag. A committee was organized and George Washington, Robert Morris and George Ross requested Mrs. Ross to make the flag. She accepted, and she suggested that five-pointed stars, instead of six-pointed stars, be used. Her design was adopted.

She was awarded a contract to make all government flags. She died in 1836, and the business was continued by her daughter, Mrs. Wilson, until 1857.

In 1908, the Betsy Ross Memorial Association opened to the public the home of Betsy Ross on Arch street, Philadelphia, as the American Flag's Home.

Why does such a large proportion of the population of Paris spend its leisure hours along the quays that border the Seine? People wander among the book-stalls looking for old prints and rare volumes; they stand leaning over the parapet to watch the indefatigable fishermen who never catch anything; they look on at any construction work going on, and see the barges of great wine casks being unloaded opposite the wine market. The Seine is indeed the center of Paris, and visitors are wise when they follow the Parisians in enjoying its varied sights.

LITTLE JOURNEYS TO THE HOMES OF FAMOUS "JUNIORS"

Hardie Gramatky and His Studio at Wilmar

Coming: A genuine heart throb, a check-up on our famous "juniors," where they have gone, what they are doing, a who's who of these who have made good. You'll be surprised to find how many of our old-timers are drawing for big publications or have broken into the magazine field, or are up and coming business men and women.

The name of Hardie Gramtky, pioneer cartoonist of our Junior Times Club, now is becoming known in the art world. In addition to doing murals and decorations, Hardie, at the age of 22 years, has had dozens of paintings hung in exhibits throughout Southern California. His work has been on display at Santa Cruz, where he received honorable mention; the Shell Club, and our own Los Angeles Museum, to say nothing of Carmelita Gardens, Pasadena, and a number of county fair shows, also, it is rumored a well-known author has given him a book to illustrate.

One thing is sure, Hardie has the assignment to illustrate "Snoopy in Do-Do-Land," sequel to "Snoopy Long-Ears," our latest clean-up in fairyland stories. Guy Alden, who achieved quick popularity, was to have handled sequel No. 2, but due to an injured arm, cannot accept the work on hand, so Hardie Gramatky, famous trouper of '23, has taken up the cudgels for "Snoopy's" sake!

His illustrations will be a treat! So watch for them; watch for the work of this now famous artist, who first achieved recognition through the pages of our Junior.

The photos give a glimpse of Hardie's studio, which stands in a thicket of trees and flowers. One entire side is screened, and looks out upon snow-capped mountains. As for typical atmosphere, rolls of canvas, dusty frames, fish hooks, red apples, and what have you transports one to the land of Bohemia. There also is an intriguing odor of "turps" and varnish.

Aunt Dolly's Letter Box

Dear Aunt Dolly:

Do you know, Aunt Dolly, that today so many wonderful things have happened, and I am wild with delight! If I hadn't been curled up in bed when I found my name on the honor roll in the Junior, I would have danced a jig, and then I read that wonderful new story of yours. I just can't imagine how you think of such perfectly marvelous things to write about. I know I am going to like it, even better than dear Squirmy, but I guess that is because we have Squirmy in pictures and don't really have to give him up. I hope Snoopy Long-Ears is twice as long as Squirmy.

Oceans of love,
[Signed] BETTY BLAIR,
Alta Loma.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

Where other people have brains, ordinary brains, which must resemble for the most part, masses of grey matter, you have the sort of thinking apparatus which sheds thrilling, dancing rainbows in all direction. No one but you, could have so many lovely ideas in such rapid succession.

Those articles on China with the beautiful accompanying illustrations by Laura Broek! I am sure all the readers would most sincerely appreciate it, if you continued the series indefinitely, and wrote about all the countries in the world.

Doesn't it thrill the depths of your soul to realize how you inspire people? Phil De Lara for example—a cartoonist, wasn't he? One of many; you set his imagination on fire, and look what he's doing now! Squirmy in the comic strip, and verse, even more enthralling than ever!

The little girl next door comes over bright and early each Sunday morning with her Junior Times. "Read me about the fish!" is her command. "Rosemary, real about Squirmy!" You couldn't have a more sincere tribute. To interest a 7-year-old like that, you've got to be good! And you certainly are!

Lovingly,
[Signed]
ROSEMARY WIEBE.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I just have to explode about "Snoopy"—I love that story, simply adore every line in it. It's so very different from anything I've ever read. There's a real plot, just one thing after another, every moment thrills just like we do in real life. How do you manage to think up such thrilling, exciting books? And, please, Aunt Dolly, tell me when it will end. I hope not for another year, but I'm very anxious, and so is my baby sister. She says she doesn't like that mean old "tat," Saga is the one she's referring to, but she never can say her C's.

I surely do want to congratulate you on this story. My heart, however, is still divided 50-50, Snoopy and "The Magic City" rule supreme.

Yours for glorious success in the future,
[Signed]
GLADYS K. BROWN,
Long Beach.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

In case you don't know it, I think every senior writer and everyone whoever hopes to be a scribbler had better follow "Snoppy Long-Ears." The construction of plot is so perfect it makes my eyes pop, and I marvel and wonder as to how many literary courses you took at the age of 17. Each chapter is just another surprise, with perfectly sustained interest, and yet not a farfetched situation. It's all so supremely natural, and even though I'm 18 years of age, I get a heart throb out of Snoopy and everything he does. Of course, an old person sees the allegorical value of the story, and enjoys every word of it. It's the old battle of hate and love, and the desire to conquer other nations. Wonder how Saga will come out with her carefully laid plans. I suppose you won't crash a hint until the last chapter; it's just like you! I like Guy Alden's work, too. He's so original, and I can imagine the color schemes are beautiful. Too bad they could not be reproduced as is.

Well, back to "trig" and dry history. I'd so much rather gallivant with Snoopy through the Opal Forest. Give him my regards when you start weaving more adventures, and accept my thanks for printing an excellent pattern for stories in the Junior. I only hope some of our writers have sense enough to study the literary points it carries so well.

With heaps of love,
[Signed]
ELOYSA,
Los Angeles.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

I have been a constant reader of The Junior Times and have thought about being a member, but after meeting you I was sure I would be one. Please send me the information needed to be a member. I think the story of "The Magic City" is wonderful and little Squirmy is so cute. I know that your next story "Snoopy Long-Ears" is appreciated every bit as much. Here's hoping to read it soon.

Your true friend,
[Signed]
DOROTHY PHYLLIS ROSELL,
Van Nuys.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

As I write this letter, I've been wondering if you would send me a photograph of yourself. I have been reading "The Magic City" and every turn that Squirmy makes, makes you laugh. "The Cracked Mirror" gets better every week. I sure hope I will be able to get these books in the library or at book stores later on.

Your niece,
[Signed]
MARGARET NASCHKE,
San Bernardino.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

This serial is soon drawing to a close I fear, much to my sorrow. Really it would be just too much fun for words if you could fix up another one. For instance, one on India or Arabia. I am watching the mail closely for a blue envelope.

Oodles of love,
[Signed]
LOUISE KRAUSE
Los Angeles.

Dear Aunt Dolly:

Snoopy packs a wallop in his hind legs. It's a great story, and I like it, even though I'm supposed to be far past the fairy-tale age. Only, I figured, you had a heap of "thank you's" due, and I wanted to be a loyal backer, telling you just what I thought. I can imagine the hard work it took, turning out such a serial, and with all your other routine on top of special features, it surely must nick you. I, for one, want to thank you for "the sweetest story ever told."

Now, I'll tell you one reason I like it so well. I lost my own mother while very young, and the way you treat mother and son love kind of got under my skin. It sure is swell. Makes a person stop and think. Snoopy will be every inch a man before he's through, I can see that coming. He's waking up fast!

Anyway, it's a mighty sweet, appealing story, and it sure does pack a wallop as I said. There's not one objectionable or weak part in it so far, and I'm sure you'd catch any, even if they did pop up uninvited.

Guess you didn't expect such a long-winded letter of appreciation, but, as I told you, Snoopy sort of got under my skin; took me back to when I was knee high to a grasshopper, always wishing my mother had lived.

Please don't print my full name, Aunt Dolly, as I've written a very frank letter. Wishing you luck.
[Signed] A. G. H.

ARROWHEAD

By Eloysa Eisenhauer, Los Angeles

I could forget, oh, easily, just everything
If I'd not seen a scarlet flash on wing,
If I'd not heard the sweeping march of rain
Whose tread can make you rise and live again,
If on calm shores there touched no placid smile
In dimpling blue whose ripples swing in file,
If I'd not felt in flight from peak to peak
The breath of rock-thorned mountains brush my cheek—
And, dryad land, what human heart can hold
The breathless wonder of thy gracious mold?

BRIEF FACTS

By William Fisher, Age 13 Years, Franklin High School, Los Angeles

(1). Java contains a great gas lake which causes a valley near by to become a veritable death trap. It is called the Valley of Death, for those who venture in this ghastly gas valley are instantly killed.

(2.) The oldest hen in the world is claimed by a California farmer. Her age is 19 years, and she is still an excellent layer. During 1929 the hen, a Rhode Island Red, laid eggs for seven months without missing a day.

(3.) The potato was not regarded with favor in Europe, and even in the nineteenth century, there was a belief that that the growing of this vegetable was harmful.

(4.) Agoutis, little brown animals, native in Guinea, are born with practically a full set of teeth.

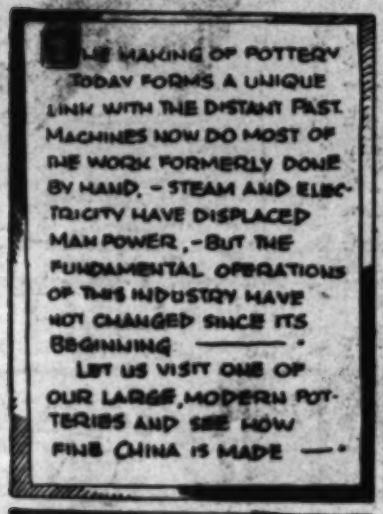
(5.) The word "manicurist" comes from the Latin for "care" and "hand."

(6.) In healthy conditions carp can live to 100 or more.

(7.) The word carat, used as a weight for diamonds, is derived from the name of the seed of the carob or locust tree, this seed in early days being used as a small weight.

"Gridders," or street hymn singers of London are boasting they make as much as $1.25 a day, while match sellers seldom receive half that amount.

HIGH LIGHTS OF HISTORY ✣ The Romance of Pottery, PART 4 ✣ By J. CARROLL MANSFIELD



THE MAKING OF POTTERY TODAY FORMS A UNIQUE LINK WITH THE DISTANT PAST. MACHINES NOW DO MOST OF THE WORK FORMERLY DONE BY HAND. - STEAM AND ELECTRICITY HAVE DISPLACED MAN POWER. - BUT THE FUNDAMENTAL OPERATIONS OF THIS INDUSTRY HAVE NOT CHANGED SINCE ITS BEGINNING ——— •

LET US VISIT ONE OF OUR LARGE, MODERN POTTERIES AND SEE HOW FINE CHINA IS MADE —•

FIRST THE CLAY GOES INTO THE MILL, WHERE IT IS GROUND WITH FLINT, FELDSPAR AND BONE, TOGETHER WITH WATER, AND BECOMES A THICK LIQUID KNOWN TO POTTERS AS "SLIP"—•

THE "SLIP" IS STRAINED AND PURIFIED, AND THEN PASSED ON TO THE PRESS WHERE THE WATER IS SQUEEZED OUT. THE CLAY MIXTURE COMES OUT OF THE PRESS IN A FLAT SHEET ——— •

NEXT, THE CLAY IS THROWN INTO THE "PUG MILL" WHERE IT IS KNEADED BY HUGE SPIRAL KNIVES. AS THE CLAY, A DAMP, FIRM MASS, EMERGES THROUGH A CHUTE, IT IS CUT INTO CHUNKS. —•

A CHUNK OF CLAY IS THEN PLACED ON THE POTTER'S WHEEL. THE POTTER'S SKILLED HANDS QUICKLY TRANSFORM THE WHIRLING MASS OF CLAY INTO THE DESIRED SHAPE ——— •

AFTER DRYING FOR A DAY, THE WARE GOES TO THE TURNERS AND MODELERS WHO PERFECT THE SHAPE OF THE PIECES AND ADD HANDLES TO CUPS, PITCHERS AND COVERED DISHES. —•

THE WARE IS NOW READY TO BE FIRED IN THE KILN — FOR PROTECTION EACH PIECE IS ENCLOSED IN A "SAGGAR", A SORT OF PAN MADE OF REFRACTORY CLAY.

THE SAGGARS ARE STACKED HIGH IN THE FURNACE, WHICH IS THEN FIRED TO A WHITE HEAT. THE POTTERY IS BAKED FOR ABOUT 90 HOURS. WHEN IT EMERGES, IT IS CALLED "BISCUIT." ——— •

AFTER COOLING FOR THREE DAYS, THE PIECES ARE TESTED, CLEANED, AND DIPPED IN GLAZE. THEN THEY ARE FIRED FOR ONE DAY IN THE KILN TO HARDEN THE GLAZE

(Copyright, 1938, by J. Carroll Mansfield)

AFTER COOLING 2 DAYS THE GLAZED WHITE CHINA IS DECORATED. THE DECORATION IS USUALLY PRINTED ON EACH PIECE BY MEANS OF TRANSFER PAPERS. THE MORE COSTLY WARES ARE DECORATED BY HAND. ——— •

THE DECORATED CHINA GOES BACK TO THE KILN AND IS BAKED ONCE MORE. GOLD, IF USED IN THE DECORATION, IS BLACKENED BY THE INTENSE HEAT, AND ON COMING OUT HAS TO BE BURNISHED. —•

THE LUMP OF CLAY HAS NOW BEEN COMPLETELY TRANSFORMED INTO AN EXQUISITE PIECE OF FINE CHINA, AND IS READY FOR TABLE SERVICE. ——— •

THE NEW GIRL

By Margaret Kostowal, Los Angeles

Alyce was young and totally inexperienced, which made it hard for her to find employment. She had looked until discouraged, so, finally, accepted a position, in spite of many disadvantages. The place was a storage and service garage for electric cars. One quick glance convinced her business was on the decline, due, no doubt, to the gradual disappearance of electric vehicles from common use. The salary was small, and the hours long, but Alyce shrugged at these bad features.

"I'll be getting experience, anyway," she consoled herself.

Her employer, Mr. Dearborn, who was also the owner of the business, was boyishly young, and given to telling his troubles. One afternoon, he pulled out a pile of account books.

"This is what started us on the down grade," he said, ruefully, turning the pages. "These are all accounts that have never been paid. Dad used to give everyone credit that asked for it, and he never dunned those who wouldn't pay. Finally, we got so short of funds, we couldn't allow people credit at all, and then we lost a lot of customers. Most of them, in fact. It's too late to do anything now. There isn't any business to go after."

When he had gone, Alyce turned the pages of the ledger thoughtfully. She found accounts of more than $100 outstanding in some cases. She shook her head and sighed. Then a wonderful idea came to her, and she set secretly to work. In two days, the results of her labor became manifest.

An old lady, elegantly dressed in black, entered the office, and angrily confronted Mr. Dearborn.

"What is the meaning of this?" she stormed, slapping down a statement in front of him. "This bill calls for $100 more than I owe. It's outrageous."

Mr. Dearborn looked dazed. "You see—we have a new girl, Mrs. Ainsworth," he stammered in confusion, "and—and"

He gave Alyce a withering look.

"Just the same, young man," Mrs. Ainsworth interrupted, "you'll get what I owe you, and not a cent more." She tossed a check in front of him, and strode haughtily out of the office.

Alone with the "new" girl, he told her angrily she had taken a great deal upon herself. "You've lost a wealthy influential customer for us," he accused her.

Alyce answered brightly, "but she hasn't been in here for five years," and Mr. Dearborn could think of nothing to say.

This performance was repeated more than a dozen times, that day, and almost as often again on the next day. Mr. Dearborn was panic stricken when Alyce confessed to him she had sent bills which showed an overcharge to all customers in the old ledger.

In a fury, Mr. Dearborn stood over her desk. "My dear young lady," he said, with icy sarcasm, "now the customers are gone, what would you advise next?"

Alyce was not intimidated. "We've taken in almost $1000, and we're going to use that to build up a new business with new customers," she told him.

He was riled. "You've insulted almost all people who have electric vehicles in this town," he reminded her.

But she was not abashed. "Then we'll change into a regular garage."

Mr. Dearborn rumpled his hair. His mouth was pressed into a thin, firm line. He stalked to his desk, wrote out a check, and handed it to her. It was her payment in full.

She looked at him with startled eyes, then her lips trembled, but she turned quickly away, and slipping into her coat and hat, left the garage.

Mr. Dearborn sat at his desk, and fumbled with his letter opener. He had to check an impulse to follow her. "Impertinent little upstart," he grumbled, but didn't mean it, and he knew he didn't.

But finally the impulse to call her back grew too strong. He hurried into the street and searched it with anxious eyes, but she was gone. Then he realized it was important that she should come back. He searched the telephone book, but her name wasn't listed. His look changed suddenly from one of despair to one of divine inspiration. He called the bank. In half an hour, the door burst open, to admit a very angry Alyce.

"Why did you stop payment on my check?" she asked.

Mr. Dearborn didn't answer. He just stood and looked at her. Gradually her eyes softened. They looked at each other, and laughed, and she sank into her accustomed place.

A TEA PARTY THAT ENDED IN A SPLASH

BY BARBARA HIRSHFELD
Los Angeles

The Garden was peaceful and quiet. The only sound heard was that made by two ants, who were squabbling over a crumb of sugar. Hippity hop! Hippity hop! A new sound broke the silence. Two little gray rabbits peered around the garden gate.

"Come on," said Jackie Rabbit to his sister Bunnie. "The garden's empty. Bunnie hopped forward to look over Jackie's shoulder.

"My, don't those hyacinths and pinks look good," she said.

"They'll taste better," laughed Jackie. "Aw, gee," he exclaimed a minute later, "there's Mrs. Squatteby Squirrel and her children, Bushy and Brushy, they'll eat everything up."

"Oh, look," cried Bunnie, "who is that distinguished-looking man in the black and white striped coat?"

"I'm sure I don't know," said Jackie, rather crossly. The two rabbits then hopped into the garden and began to sample the tender leaves and spring flowers.

"Pardon me," said the stranger to Jackie, "might I inquire your name?" Jackie looked at the stranger much as an an A-9 would look at a scrub. He then stuck up his nose as high as it would go, and deliberately turned his back on the visitor.

The smartly dressed gentleman looked rather angry, but there was a twinkle in his eye. He moved toward the tiny fish pond in the center of the garden.

"This clover is so sweet," he said, to no one in particular.

The little rabbits pricked up their ears at that, and looked toward the pond. They hopped over to the stranger, and rudely jostled him. While this was going on, the stranger smiled, a queer sort of a smile. Suddenly Jackie jumped, and put his paw to his nose. Bunnie did the same. "Phew!" The stranger's grin broadened. He took a step toward the rabbits—"Wow!" with an exclamation, Jackie stepped back and fell kersplash into the pool! Bunnie tried to catch hold of him, but was pulled in, too. Those two silly rabbits were squealing and splashing around, trying to get out. They finally succeeded, and ran home as fast as they could. They spent an hour drying their clothes and Bunnie's new spring hat was completely ruined.

The next morning they purchased a copy of the Daily Burrows—named after the famous sprinter, Jumpy Burrows of Burrowsville. What was their mortification, on reading these headlines: "Jackie and Bunnie Rabbit meet with accident in Goldfish pond." Beneath this was the story of their fateful bath. "Mr. Scenty Skunk, the well-known reporter, stumbled upon a bit of exciting and interesting news yesterday. Jackie and Bunnie Rabbit had gone into the famous Garden Cafe to partake of some spring flowers. They happened to meet Mr. Scenty Skunk, and acted snobbishly toward him. The two rabbits went near Goldfish Pond to sample the clover, and came a bit too close to Mr. S. Skunk. They hopped for obvious reasons, and disappeared into the pool with a splash. They left for home as soon as they could. Mr. Skunk expresses his sympathy, and hopes they will recover from the effects of their ducking." But, worse than this, a picture accompanied the column, showing Jackie and Bunnie as they fell into the pool. These sounds were heard coming from the rabbits' home after the paper had been read:

"Ah-oo-oo-boo-hoo—it was all your fault."

Moral—"Apologies to Burgess.

"It's easy to see the moral here,
Don't stick up your nose and laugh and jeer
At other folks you may chance to see
They're just as good as you or me."

To Catalog Huge Library

Cataloging the books of the British Museum in London will require at least ten years, according to Wilfred Marsden, the new keeper of printed books, who will undertake the work. To relist the 3,500,000 volumes will cost at least $1,000,000, it is estimated.

BIG-HEARTED PEGGY AND PATSY

By Mary Belle Rasco, Brawley, Cal.

There was a splashing in the bathroom, accompanied by a sound that was the voice of Peggy. It rose mournfully high, then descended to a depth that was unimaginable for a girl of her age. She was singing. Apparently, washing her hair was a delightful experience, for she didn't mind it in the least. That is, not just then. But, when Mums announced from the depths of the flour bin, that the family was going to town after dinner, it was an entirely different matter. Reaching blindly, but in the right place, the little girl found a towel, and a moment later, presented a woeful and dripping face at the kitchen door.

"Mother, I can't go!" Mother was properly apologetic, but she was still going to town. It later developed that Peggy and her sister, after exhorting some sort of promise from Mrs. Price, were going to stay home to do the dishes. Patsy knew where there was pudding, so she didn't mind missing the trip. Not so Peggy, she didn't go to town very often. But the promise was a good one, and she tried to resign herself.

An hour later, the Price's car rolled smoothly out of the garage, and down the street, leaving two small girls with their noses pressed disconsolately against the dining-room window. With a simultaneous sigh, they watched the tail light disappear around the corner. Then Peggy turned to her sister. "Of course, there's nothing to be 'fraid of."

"Course not," Patsy agreed, stoutly, but she looked cautiously into the kitchen before she went in. Somehow, the thought of the pudding made her a little sick. She wouldn't eat it now. Instead, she put the water on for the dishes, as fast as she could, then hastily made her way into the back bedroom, where her sister was reading in her accustomed position on the floor.

Thus, quietly, they sat for perhaps ten minutes. Not a sound was to be heard, except Peggy's hard breathing into a whoosh. Pollyanna's adventures lost their interest. She listened breathlessly. The noise was such a strange one, that it was impossible to tell what or where it was. A whirring followed by a steady tap-tap-tap. It continued unrestrainedly.

"W-What is it?" little Patsy asked, hoarsely.

Peggy wanted to say, "nothing," but it stuck in her throat. She was thinking hard and fast. Where was the noise? Could it be in the front room? She shuddered. Vivid pictures of a burglar at the window, flashed through her mind. Something made her remember that the Victrola emitted such a sound when a spring snapped loose in the machinery. Confidentially, she stepped to the living-room door. Surely it must be the Victrola. But it was not. The sound was almost upon her! It was near! It was in the kitchen to the right of her. Poor little Peggy was about to collapse, when the full knowledge of this descended upon her. What could it be? She surveyed the kitchen from the doorway. Only the familiar things that are in everyone's kitchens were to be seen. The fire was burning—the flour bin was open, just as Mums has left it. About that time, something touched her elbow. She moved. The sound grew louder. Ready to confront almost anything, she turned slowly and beheld her frightened little sister. Peggy was so startled and angry, that she could have annihilated her on the spot. Instead, she saved her rapidly diminishing strength for their unknown foe.

Taking Patsy's hand, she ventured slowly into the kitchen.

"The water's hot, Peggy."

"I know it," the other returned, irritably.

She looked nervously at the dish-pan. Little bubbles were forming around the plates. Those plates were moving. The bubbles were breaking, and when they did, they made a whirring sound, then a tap-tap followed. Two sheepish little girls looked at each other, and managed to smile wanly.

MODERN VERSE

By Elizabeth Niepp, Age 16 Years, Franklin High School, Los Angeles

Modern verse is almost as much talked about, misunderstood and criticised as modern art. A lot of us see nothing in it. We call it "mere murmurs, whispered without meaning." To quote the news notes of Poetry, a magazine of verse, "If poets do their best work, they must be given some other encouragement than polite applause at literary teas."

And most of the modernists in verse are doing their best work. They are searching for something new, new, glorious ways of weaving words, getting away from the trite stereotype. Of course some of them in their thirst for the different obtain weird, bizarre effects which can never live. Some even go so far as to eliminate all punctuation. They use fanciful spelling, as spelling "I" with a small letter, and letting their whims run freakishly away with them.

But as Louis Untermyer says, "When they go far enough they will swing back again and the right balance will be reached."

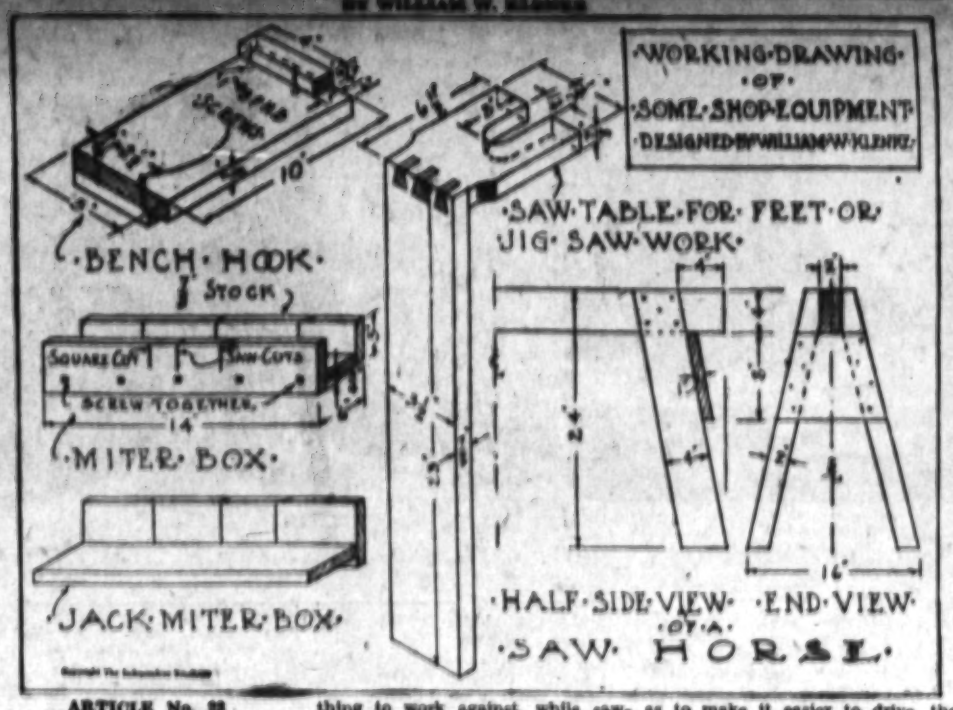
"THINGS EASY TO MAKE"

BY WILLIAM W. KLEINER



ARTICLE No. 22
SOME SHOP EQUIPMENT

There are quite a number of useful pieces of shop equipment you can easily make yourself, boys, and thereby not only save the cost of the article but have the fun of making it at the same time.

Maple is the best material to use, although other hard woods will do very well.

The bench hook: I have never been able to find out where this article gets its name, but I do know one thing, and that is, that you cannot very well do without it. When you saw or chisel a piece of material, do your cutting on this bench hook and thereby save the bench top; it also gives you something to work against, while sawing.

You will require:
One piece, 7-8x5x10 inches.
Two pieces, 3-4x1x4 inches.
Four screws, 1 inch No. 8 flat-head bright screws.

Bore four holes in the large flat piece as indicated on the drawing to receive the screws. Start with a No. 6 auger bit and bore down 3-16 inch deep; this allows the screw head room to pass below the surface. Then use a No. 6 twist bit and bore all the way through. Now place the flat piece and one small end piece together in the vise and using a No. 5 twist bit, bore a hole deep enough to take the screw. Run a little soap over the threads so as to make it easier to drive the screw into the hard wood. Fasten the other end piece in the same way.

Miter box: You cannot get along without a miter box when cutting moldings, etc., so, boys, let's make our own. You can make either the "Jack Miter Box" or the usual type; both are shown on the drawing.

For this article you will require:
One piece for the bottom, 7-8x 4 1-4x14 inches.
One piece for the side, 7-8x5 3-4x 14 inches.
One piece for the side, 7-8x5x14 inches.
For the Jack Miter Box, simply omit the 5-inch side.

Be careful to plane the edges as true as possible and make one cut square across, then make a right and left miter cut. To lay out a miter, which is 45 deg., you really draw the diagonal line of a square—that is, the line connecting the two opposite corners. A carpenter's steel square will make it easy work. Simply lay out the same number on both the tongue and blade of the square. You can also get forty-five degrees by squaring across a piece of wood, making an L and measuring say four inches on both arms of the L, then connecting these points, set the bevel to this angle.

Saw table for fret or jig saw work: This handy table is indispensable while using a fret saw for cutting out all sorts of curves. You will require:

One piece, 7-8x3 1-4x23 inches.
One piece, 7-8x4 1-4x6 1-4 inches.

I have shown the dovetail joint construction because it is the strongest joint for this job. You can simply screw the two pieces together and glue a corner block in the inside to reinforce the joint if you prefer. When using this table, hold the long part in the vise and the work flat on the top part, sawing in the cut-out part.

Saw horse: Well, boys, let's discard the old soap box we have been using for a saw horse and make this real and substantial one.

Use ordinary framing material such as is used on any building. You will require:

Four pieces for the legs, 2x4x27 inches.
One piece for the top, 2x4x42 inches.
Two pieces for the braces 1x8x11 inches.

Cut out the top piece to receive the legs; screw together securely. The only finish I would give to any of this equipment is a good soaking with boiled linseed oil.

Keep these small items on the shelf of the bench handy for use; that is, all except the saw horse.

YOUR LETTERS

By Joan Murray, Beverly Hills

I'll be waiting for your letters,
Auntie, dear,
They bring to me such happiness and cheer.
When I get them I rejoice
And my heart begins to voice
Just how happy they have made me, Auntie, dear.
I'll be waiting,
I'll be waiting,
For that envelope so blue
For the words it holds are treasures
Just because they're straight from you.

FAMED CALIFORNIANS

JOAQUIN MILLER

By Martha E. Davis, Hollywood

He was a man of mystery, this Joaquin Miller, a man of the Sierras, of the Monterey Bay of Oregon country, of California. His "cradle was a covered wagon, pointed west," his real name, Cincinnatus Heine.

In England he was even more mysterious, stalking about in high boots, velveteen trousers, kerchief and other romantic of western apparel. They went wild over his poetry; termed him the American Byron; fought to have him belong to this and that.

He thought he would like this applause, appreciation; in fact, it was his reason for going to London. He believed in his "Songs of the Sierras," even if the publishers of the stoical east would not accept them. He had no trouble, though, in the land of Keats and Tennyson.

They wished to know more about him. The alumni of Columbia College, Oregon, would have told them something, but the Indians and the Spaniards on the Pacific slope could have told them more. The old inhabitants of Eugene City could tell of the time when a certain "Democratic registar" was suppressed.

Grant county could add tales about a young judge. Those who hated the bandit, Joaquin Murrieta, could have plenty of material on a hot antagonist. Was it a coincidence that his first name was Joaquin? There are some who will smile if you agree in the negative.

But the yellow fog of London was too unlike the white of Monterey. The narrow street, the tall buildings, the piercing whistles of the bobbies brought all too strongly back the freedom of his Northern California.

Finally he settled in Oakland, making his home quite a feature of the city. In 1913 he died. In compliance with his last wishes, his body was cremated, and the ashes were scattered to the four winds that rule the Sierras.

Miller is thought of as the "poet of California," his verse and prose are prized especially as they are true documents on a period of American history. The woods and the mountains, the sparkling Pacific, the deserts, and the Mexican seas, all breathe fire through Joaquin's poetry.

Joaquin Miller was, as he desired to be, mysterious. And how could he help but weave himself in a web of romance with the name "Joaquin"? Miller and Murrieta, alike to a certain degree, will be remembered as they wished—the puma and the poet.

THE NATION'S MONEY

Here is One View of the Banking Problem—Another Side of the Question Will Be Presented in an Early Issue

By Louis T. McFadden

Chairman, Committe on Banking and Currency, House of Representativ

"FIRST THREE-BILLION-DOLLAR BANK," the headlines announced a few weeks ago as the boards of directors of three New York institutions voted approval of a consolidation.

That the combined resources of the merged institution probably will fall short of three billions by two hundred million dollars is not material, for a hundred millions or two hundred millions of resources may be "picked up" almost any time in the bank consolidation field! The next merger may produce a four-billion-dollar, even a ten-billion-dollar bank and produce only yawns from the man on the street, who quickly scans the first-page headlines and then folds back to the sporting page for careful perusal and study.

The exploits of Babe Ruth may be, and undoubtedly are, far more interesting to the mythical "average man" than the exploits of America's great financiers. Yet what is now going on in the banking field throughout not only our nation but the entire world is of direct concern to every American who has a living to earn. The average man and the average woman are not ordinarily interested in banking problems as long as there is a bank—no matter what kind—conveniently located where a pay check may be cashed without burdensome formality or a modest savings or checking account carried.

It is only occasionally, in the larger cities of the country, that the banking problem becomes visible to any large number of people. Then there may be a long line of people waiting hopefullly, and anxiously, too, for bank doors to open, because of the word-of-mouth rumor they heard the night before that the bank was "in trouble."

Very much more often these lines—sometimes clamoring mobs—form in the smaller cities and the villages of America. At least 437 times last year their wait was unrewarded, for the banks had failed. The wives of workingmen forgot their own losses of quarters and half dollars laboriously saved for deposit in Christmas accounts while consoling their husbands at Christmas time over the loss, through the same bank failure, of the few hundred dollars accumulated to make the first payment on a home. School-teachers, grown gray after long years of service, found tnat the savings intended to make their old age secure had suddenly vanished with the posting of a little white sheet of paper on the front door of the "Security Savings

DETECTIVE PEGGY AND PATSY

By Mary Belle Racea, Brawley, Cal.

There was a splashing in the bathroom, accompanied by a sound that was the voice of Peggy. It rose mournfully high, then descended to a depth that was unimaginable for a girl of her age. She was singing. Apparently, washing her hair was a delightful experience, for she didn't mind it in the least. That is, not just then. But, when Mums announced from the depths of the flour bin, that the family was going to town after dinner, it was an entirely different matter. Reaching blindly, but in the right place, the little girl found a towel, and a moment later, presented a woeful and dripping face at the kitchen door.

"Mother, I can't go!" Mother was properly apologetic, but she was still going to town. It later developed that Peggy and her sister, after exhorting some sort of promise from Mrs. Price, were going to stay home to do the dishes. Patsy knew where there was pudding, so she didn't mind missing the trip. Not so Peggy, she didn't go to town very often. But the promise was a good one, and she tried to resign herself.

"W-What is it?" asked Little Patsy

An hour later, the Price's car rolled smoothly out of the garage, and down the street, leaving two small girls with their noses pressed disconsolately against the dining-room window. With a simultaneous sigh, they watched the tail light disappear around the corner. Then Peggy turned to her sister. "Of course, there's nothing to be 'fraid of."

"Course not," Patsy agreed, stoutly, but she looked cautiously into the kitchen before she went in. Somehow, the thought of the pudding made her a little sick. She wouldn't eat it now. Instead, she put the water on for the dishes, as fast as she could, then hastily made her way into the back bedroom, where her sister was reading in her accustomed position on the floor.

Thus, quietly, they sat for perhaps ten minutes. Not a sound was to be heard, except Peggy's hard [illegible] almost [illegible] like a noise that sent the smallest one rolling pell-mell to her sister's side, and changed Peggy's breathing into a wheeze. Pollyanna's adventures lost their interest. She listened breathlessly. The noise was such a strange one, that it was impossible to tell what or where it was. A whirring followed by a steady tap-tap-tap. It continued unrestrainedly.

"W-What is it?" little Patsy asked, hoarsely.

Peggy wanted to say, "nothing," but it stuck in her throat. She was thinking hard and fast. Where was the noise? Could it be in the front room? She shuddered. Vivid pictures of a burglar at the window, flashed through her mind. Something made her remember that the Victrola emitted such a sound when a spring snapped loose in the machinery. Confidentially, she stepped to the living-room door. Surely it must be the Victrola. But it was not. The sound was almost upon her! It was near! It was in the kitchen to the right of her. Poor little Peggy was about to collapse, when the full knowledge of this descended upon her. What could it be? She surveyed the kitchen from the doorway. Only the familiar things that are in everyone's kitchens were to be seen. The fire was burning—the flour bin was open, just as Mums has left it. About that time, something touched her elbow. She moved The sound grew louder. Ready to confront almost anything, she turned slowly and beheld her frightened little sister. Peggy was so startled and angry, that she could have annihilated her on the spot. Instead, she saved her rapidly diminishing strength for their unknown foe.

Taking Patsy's hand, she ventured slowly into the kitchen.

"The water's hot, Peggy."

"I know it," the other returned, irritably.

She looked nervously at the dish-pan. Little bubbles were forming around the plates. Those plates were moving. The bubbles were breaking, and when they did, they made a whirring sound, then a tap-tap followed. Two sheepish little girls looked at each other, and managed to smile wanly.

MODERN VERSE

By Elizabeth Niepp, Age 16 Years, Franklin High School, Los Angeles

Modern verse is almost as much talked about, misunderstood and criticised as modern art. A lot of us see nothing in it. We call it "mere murmurs, whispered without meaning." To quote the news notes of Poetry, a magazine of verse, "If poets do their best work, they must be given some other encouragement than polite applause at literary teas."

And most of the modernists in verse are doing their best work. They are searching for something new, new, glorious ways of weaving words, getting away from the trite stereotype. Of course some of them in their thirst for the different obtain weird, bizarre effects which can never live. Some even go so far as to eliminate all punctuation. They use fanciful spelling, as spelling "T" with a small letter, and letting their whims run freakishly away with them.

But as Louis Untermyer says, "When they go far enough they will swing back again and the right balance will be reached."

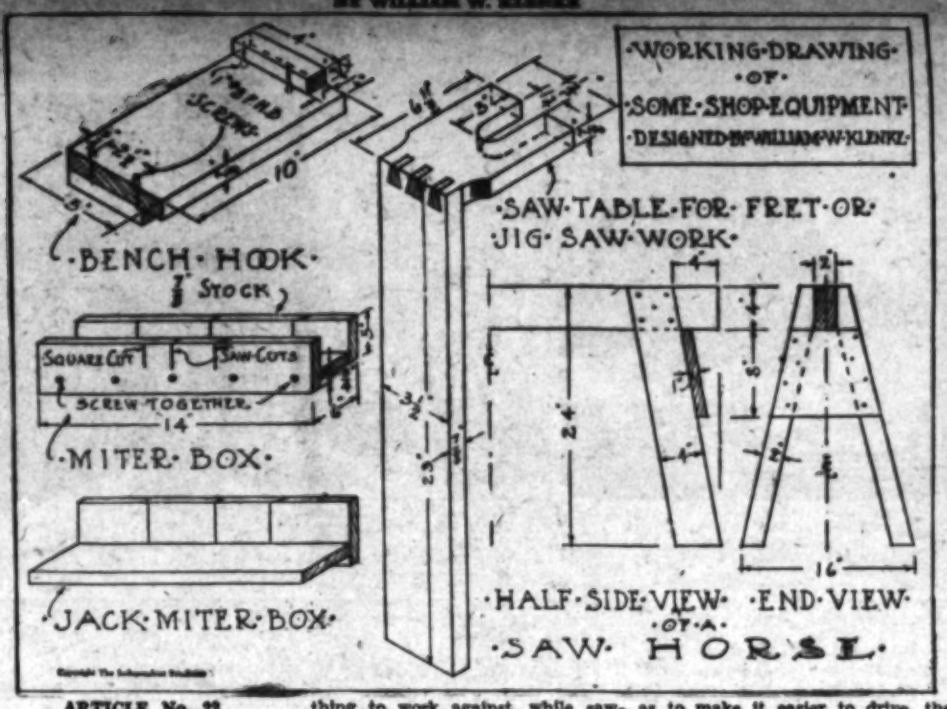
"THINGS EASY TO MAKE"

BY WILLIAM W. KLENKE



ARTICLE No. 22
SOME SHOP EQUIPMENT

There are quite a number of useful pieces of shop equipment you can easily make yourself, boys, and thereby not only save the cost of the article but have the fun of making it at the same time.

Maple is the best material to use, although other hard woods will do very well.

The bench hook: I have never been able to find out where this article gets its name, but I do know one thing, and that is, that you cannot very well do without it. When you saw or chisel a piece of material, do your cutting on this bench hook and thereby save the bench top; it also gives you something to work against, while sawing.

You will require:
One piece, 7-8x5x10 inches.
Two pieces, 3-4x1x4 inches.
Four screws, 1 inch No. 8 flat-head bright screws.

Bore four holes in the large flat piece as indicated on the drawing to receive the screws. Start with a No. 6 auger bit and bore down 3-16 inch deep; this allows the screw head room to pass below the surface. Then use a No. 6 twist bit and bore all the way through. Now place the flat piece and one small end piece together in the vise and using a No. 5 twist bit, bore a hole deep enough to take the screw. Run a little soap over the threads so as to make it easier to drive the screw into the hard wood. Fasten the other end piece in the same way.

Miter box: You cannot get along without a miter box when cutting moldings, etc., so, boys, let's make our own. You can make either the "Jack Miter Box" or the usual type; both are shown on the drawing.

For this article you will require:
One piece for the bottom, 7-8x 4 1-4x14 inches.
One piece for the side, 7-8x5 3-4x 14 inches.
One piece for the side, 7-8x5x14 inches.
For the Jack Miter Box, simply omit the 5-inch side.

Be careful to plane the edges square when cutting. One Thanksgiving, when [illegible] we are ready to make the different cuts which call for a guide while sawing moldings, etc. Make one cut square across, then make a right and left miter cut. To lay out a miter, which is 45 deg., you really draw the diagonal line of a square—that is, the line connecting the two opposite corners. A carpenter's steel square will make it easy work. Simply lay out the same number on both the tongue and blade of the square. You can also get forty-five degrees by squaring across a piece of wood, making an L and measuring say four inches on both arms of the L, then connecting these points, set the bevel to this angle.

Saw table for fret or jig saw work: This handy table is indispensable while using a fret saw for cutting out all sorts of curves. You will require:

One piece, 7-8x3½x23 inches.
One piece, 7-8x4 1-4x6½ inches.

I have shown the dovetail joint construction because it is the strongest joint for this job. You can simply screw the two pieces together and glue a corner block in the inside to reinforce the joint if you prefer. When using this table, hold the long part in the vise and the work flat on the top part, sawing in the cut-out part.

Saw horse: Well, boys, let's discard the old soap box we have been using for a saw horse and make this real and substantial one.

Use ordinary framing material such as is used on any building. You will require:

Four pieces for the legs, 2x4x27 inches.

One piece for the top, 2x4x42 inches.

Two pieces for the braces 1x8x11 inches.

Cut out the top piece to receive the legs; screw together securely. The only finish I would give to any of this equipment is a good soaking with boiled linseed oil.

Keep these small items on the shelf of the bench handy for use; that is, all except the saw horse.

YOUR LETTERS

By Joan Murray, Beverly Hills

I'll be waiting for your letters, Auntie, dear,
They bring to me such happiness and cheer.
When I get them I rejoice
And my heart begins to voice
Just how happy they have made me, Auntie, dear.
I'll be waiting,
I'll be waiting,
For that envelope so blue
For the words it holds are treasures
Just because they're straight from you.

FAMED CALIFORNIANS

JOAQUIN MILLER

By Martha E. Davis, Hollywood

He was a man of mystery, was Joaquin Miller, a man of the Sierras, of the Monterey Bay of Oregon country, of California. His "cradle was a covered wagon, pointed west," his real name, Cincinnatus Heine.

In England he was even more mysterious, stalking about in high boots, velveteen trousers, kerchief and other romantic of western apparel. They went wild over his poetry; termed him the American Byron; fought to have him belong to this and that.

He thought he would like this applause, appreciation; in fact, it was his reason for going to London. He believed in his "Songs of the Sierras," even if the publishers of the stoical east would not accept them. He had no trouble, though, in the land of Keats and Tennyson.

They wished to know more about him. The alumni of Columbia College, Oregon, would have told them something, but the Indians and the Spaniards on the Pacific slope could have told them more. The old inhabitants of Eugene City could tell of the time when a certain "Democratic registar" was suppressed. . . . Grant county could add tales about a young judge. Those who hated the bandit, Joaquin Murrieta, could have plenty of material on a hot antagonist. Was it a coincidence that his first name was Joaquin? There are some who will smile if you agree in the negative.

But the yellow fog of London was too unlike the white of Monterey. The narrow street, the tall buildings, the piercing whistles of the bobbies brought all too strongly back the freedom of his Northern California.

Finally he settled in Oakland, making his home quite a feature of the city. In 1913 he died. In compliance with his last wishes, his body was cremated, and the ashes were scattered to the four winds that rule the Sierras.

Miller is thought of as the "poet of California," his verse and prose are prized especially as they are true documents on a period of American history. The woods and the mountains, the sparkling Pacific, the deserts, and the Mexican seas, all breathe fire through Joaquin's poetry.

Joaquin Miller was, as he desired to be, mysterious. And how could he help but weave himself in a web of romance with the name "Joaquin"? Miller and Murrieta, alike to a certain degree, will be remembered as they wished—the puma and the poet.

THE NATION'S MONEY

Here is One View of the Banking Problem—Another Side of the Question Will Be Presented in an Early Issue

By Louis T. McFadden

Chairman, Committee on Banking and Currency, House of Representatives

"FIRST THREE-BILLION-DOLLAR BANK," the headlines announced a few weeks ago as the boards of directors of three New York institutions voted approval of a consolidation.

That the combined resources of the merged institution probably will fall short of three billions by two hundred million dollars is not material, for a hundred millions or two hundred millions of resources may be "picked up" almost any time in the bank consolidation field! The next merger may produce a four-billion-dollar, even a ten-billion-dollar bank and produce only yawns from the man on the street, who quickly scans the first-page headlines and then folds back to the sporting page for careful perusal and study.

The exploits of Babe Ruth may be, and undoubtedly are, far more interesting to the mythical "average man" than the exploits of America's great financiers. Yet what is now going on in the banking field throughout not only our nation but the entire world is of direct concern to every American who has a living to earn. The average man and the average woman are not ordinarily interested in banking problems as long as there is a bank—no matter what kind—conveniently located where a pay check may be cashed without burdensome formality or a modest savings or checking account carried.

It is only occasionally, in the larger cities of the country, that the banking problem becomes visible to any large number of people. Then there may be a long line of people waiting hopefully, and anxiously, too, for bank doors to open, because of the word-of-mouth rumor they heard the night before that the bank was "in trouble."

Very much more often these lines—sometimes clamoring mobs—form in the smaller cities and the villages of America. At least 437 times last year their wait was unrewarded, for the banks had failed. The wives of workingmen forgot their own losses of quarters and half dollars laboriously saved for deposit in Christmas accounts while consoling their husbands at Christmas time over the loss, through the same bank failure, of the few hundred dollars accumulated to make the first payment on a home. School-teachers, grown gray after long years of service, found that the savings intended to make their old age secure had suddenly vanished with the posting of a little white sheet of paper on the front door of the "Security Savings and strengthening of the external musculature are the only solutions.

The doctor may insert a temporary pessary to hold the uterus in position. However, always consider it as a temporary measure, only. You will be doing yourself serious harm by using it year in and year out.

In some cases where there are no contra-indications, cold water douches and cold water sitz baths are of great benefit.

Postural control should be exercised at all times. An abdomen that is permitted to slump forward and sag will favor the development of a tipped uterus better than any other type.

The trouble can be overcome. It is more uncomfortable than serious.

Spectacular results cannot be forthcoming. Give yourself time, patience, a rigid discipline of diet and exercise and the advice I have given you in this article. You will invariably get results. It is a much more sane solution than the surgeon's knife!

Seborrhea

"I must powder my nose! It is oily and shiny!"

The oily and shiny nose must never be shown in its true form! It must be disguised, painted, powdered, treated or ministered to!

Sometimes it goes beyond the nose. The skin on the entire face is oily as well as that on the rest of the body. Then the sweet young thing resorts to everything from well-advertised soaps to every conceivable lotion, ointment, salve or concoction!

The nature of her trouble is what is known as seborrhea—that is, the discharge of sebum or oily secretion.

The entire skin is lined with myriads of minute glands whose function is to soften and give the smooth, velvety touch to the skin. When the glands oversecrete, we then have seborrhea. This oversecretion is, in its turn, the result of excessive stimulation of a bad variety. Such stimulation comes from the excessive consumption of such foods as greasy fats, heavy meats, concentrated sweets, "delicious" delicatessen stuffs and too liberal quantities of coffee and soft drinks.

Skin hygiene has something to do with it as well. The infrequent changing of clothing, the hot baths which dissolve the secretions and thus irritate the glands, the medicated soaps, the infiltration of talcum powders into the skin—these are all responsible factors in a condition of seborrhea.

One suffering from this condition should go on a strict dietetic and hygienic regime.

The fresh fruits are the most valuable—the green vegetables next. Starches should be less indulged in, although the vegetable starches such as baked potatoes, baked sweet potatoes and carrots are permissible. Peas would be better than beans when one desires the legumes, and limas are better than so-called baked beans.

Meats should be excluded and all the greases and oils attendant with meat preparation should also be "out."

Liberal quantities of fresh, pure water should be taken.

The skin should be made to perspire by exercise preferably and secondarily by sweat baths.

Constipation must be overcome by the methods I have so frequently espoused. If you will refer to my leaflet on constipation, which is available to any Times reader for a self-addressed, stamped envelope and a loose two-cent stamp, you will find out how to overcome this attendant trouble.

Gradually adapt yourself to cold baths. The shower is 100 per cent superior to the tub.

Use the purest of soaps

The warm weather is the very best time to adapt yourself to the cold shower.

Far better than the shower, however, is the brisk rub which follows it. The hard, heavy rubdown with a coarse Turkish towel which serves to bring the blood to the surface of the skin is invaluable in the treatment of this trouble.

Try these measures and if you will stick to them for from three to six months, you will see what fine results you will get.

FEET HURT

Our method of making and adjusting arch supports and foot appliances has been endorsed by many prominent people of note and gained praise. This NEW METHOD of foot correction is years ahead of any other method that we know of, for it relieves foot pains in many instances almost instantly, and gives permanent relief. Our feather weight supports overcome fallen, arches, swollen ankles, run-over heels, weak feet, flat foot, painful heels, pains in the knee, leg and back; prevents corns, bunions, etc. The following are extracts from a few of the many testimonials that we have received from grateful people:

May I express my appreciation of the success you have made in correcting my wife's foot trouble.

You have done wonders for me. I cannot thank you sufficiently.
DR. A. N. WARD, A.M., D.D., LL.D.
Pres. Western Maryland College.

It is a pleasure for me to thank you for the effective service you have given me. When I came to you my arches were completely broken down, walking was a torture. The whole system was badly affected by the condition of my feet. After the first visit I grew better, and have continued to improve. I realize that my case was of long standing and thus I am so much more confident of your method and arch supports. I consider it a duty to let sufferers know what he can do for them.

BUNIONS

We have invented a day and night appliance for bunions and overlapped toes, and we have every reason to believe it will correct nine cases out of ten.

The night splints are worn while sleeping and the muscles are relaxed, to stretch the contracted tendons that distort the toes and cause this hideous deformity.

The day reducing appliance shields the bunion, hides the deformity and holds the toes in proper alignment and the normal traction for the bones will be re-established and in a short time the bunion disappears completely and forever.

Seen from the Green Verdugo Hills

John Steven McGroarty

Well, sir, A Woman From Home, making a visit to California from Penn's Woods, read a little piece that was printed on this poor blundering page, there awhile back, and she got as mad as the dickens about it.

Yes But There Is No Drama There

The lady is from our native Valley of Wyoming that lies lovely and beautiful up near the chimney corner of Pennsylvania, the winding Susquehanna flowing through it.

It was there that we learned to talk our first baby words, where we took our first uncertain footsteps in life, where we learned to swim and to skate, to fly kites and play marbles, to know joy and heartache, smiles and tears.

We said in the piece that we are talking about that no State in the Union has a story that lends itself to enduring drama except California.

The woman from home took bitter exception to it. And she cites our native Valley of Wyoming with its story of the massacre of Connecticut settlers at Forty Fort at the hands of the Iroquois in the year 1778 during the American Revolution.

The white people of the valley always refer to this event in history as a "massacre." But it really was a battle. The way it has always been with us, when Indians won a fight it was called a massacre; when we won the fight it was called a battle.

What happened back there in 1778 was that a remnant of the Seneca Nation of the great Iroquois Confederation, allied with the British, came down to their own country of the Valley of the Wyoming from which they had been despoiled, attacking the garrison behind the stockade of Forty Fort, routing it completely, killing all the men there, but sparing the women and the children. The Senacas would not permit the British to have a hand in the attack.

Now, while this is quite a story, it has nothing in it or about it from which enduring drama can be builded. And it is the same way with the history of the other States of the Union, with the exception of California. Almost every one of the States has a history from which some pageantry can be evolved, to be sure, but that's the end of it.

We say all this in the broadest spirit. And saying it about our native Valley of Wyoming we make expression of a conclusion that we arrived at regretfully. Because it is a place forever dear to us, if only for its memories.

Kathleen Kla-wah-na, of whom you have heard in the Synagogue before, and who is well known to so many through the music of her harp, and who is part Indian woman and part white woman, has been telling us of the unwritten law among the Indian peoples concerning gifts.

The Way the Indian Makes a Gift

An Indian would be ashamed to make a gift of something, he cares nothing about, says Kathleen Kla-wah-na. When he makes a present, he gives something he himself holds very dear. To do otherwise would be to offer a deep insult, in an Indian's mind, to the recipient of the gift. And, if afterward he should visit the recipient and find his precious gift unappreciated, misused or abused, he would promptly gather it up and take it home again. And the unappreciative recipient is then taken off that Indian's visiting list with superb scorn.

Come to think of it, this custom of gift making sometimes causes a lot of trouble.

We once knew a young fellow who worked in a livery stable, years ago when times were not very good. There was a girl he was "sweet on." And one day a man came around selling photograph albums on the installment plan. The young fellow took up the offer, promising to pay so much a month, with the result that one evening he presented a beautiful big plush photograph album to the girl's mother in order to get into her good graces, which event made a big hit.

Things were going along like love's old sweet song until one day a handsome young sailor whose family lived in the town came ashore on a leave of absence with several months' pay in his pocket. He took a shine to the livery stable boy's girl, hired a horse and buggy every morning which the livery stable boy had to hitch up for him, and took the girl out riding and to dances and everything.

To make things worse, the livery stable boy, losing heart, failed to keep up his payments on the plush album. And so one day the agent went up to the girl's house and took it away.

That was the end. The heavens fell.

But the end of the story is that the wound in the stable boy's heart was healed with time and he married another girl who was careful about money and they are now rich. The sailor went back to the sea, finding a sweetheart in every port as sailors do, and he forgot all about the girl in his old home town. She is now a lonely old maid and paying the bitter price of her fickleness and frivolity.

A kind friend who is of our far-flung Synagogue sends us a printed copy of a sermon preached by Reverend H. O. VanGilder, the good pastor of Central Baptist Church in Columbus, Ohio.

The Good Gospel Man Is in Error

What interested us about the sermon is that it voices an eloquent plea for more tolerance toward the Jews. Brother VanGilder says truly in his sermon: "Time after time has the devil massed his forces to exterminate the Jews, time after time have men pursued them to the verge of destruction, time after time have bloody hands been reached out to clutch the last remnant and time after time the pursuit has ended with a crash as their enemies have plunged headlong and blindly against the adamantine walls of the promises of God."

We read the sermon in our little high house in the hills in the peace and quiet of the night and thought much of the hard road that the Jew has had to travel in all the lands of the earth ever since the time when he turned the millstones of Babylon and sat down by its rivers and wept, remembering Zion.

Doubtless it was the devil who did it all—the same old devil that has raised the dickens with the rest of us ever since Michael hurled him from the parapets of Heaven for his disobedience and mutiny.

But, as we thought it all over in our little high house we rejoiced to know that here at least in our America the Jew is not the victim of the bloody intolerance which has cost him so much woe and misery in other lands. Here the Jew is the beneficiary of the same laws and opportunities that are the common heritage of all the people of our country.

And we like to believe that this broad spirit of tolerance in America will ultimately spread all through the world with the result that neither the Jew nor the man of any other race will be persecuted and harassed because of his race or his religious beliefs.

Nor will the world ever be happy until that day comes.

Vain Dreaming

I want to go down to Chinatown and buy a gay silk shawl,
To arise and go there early to dawdle through it all,
To feast my eyes on lovely jade while incense sweet is burning,
Just steep myself in Old World stuff at each enchanted turning;
To see the yellow babies with their shining eyes and faces
Which seem to blend with everything, fine silks and creamy laces.

Oh! it would be a dream come true to find myself some day
Wandering down through Chinatown on that street so like Cathay;
The warmth and color of it all to treasure and remember
As one sits huddled by the fire in bleak, ice-cold December.

I. F. M.

Out in the great sunlit sweep of the San Gabriel Valley where the shining little town of Montebello stands with all its happy people, there is a wonderful little school that has wonderful teachers to guide it.

A Letter From Our Friend Yoshito Toyota

The little folk of this school spent many weeks arranging a motion-picture show of their own. They got the whole thing up themselves, and then they invited us to see the show.

We received dozens of letters from the boys and girls of the school—little bits of folk they are—written in quaint chirography and with many brave attempts at the spelling of big words. We have folded all these letters away with a big blue ribbon tied around them, for they are love letters and should be kept sacred.

We wrote to the head teacher in answer to all the letters that she might read it to the boys and girls. Which she did. And now comes a letter from a Japanese boy who, six months ago, could not speak one word of the English language, let alone write it. And it is such a quaint letter, and such a marvelous performance for a little brown alien who has traveled so far in such a brief space of time in our America, that we want the whole Synagogue to read the letter just as it was written without any change whatever. And here it is:

Fremont School
Montebello, Calif.
March 14, 1930

Dear Mr. Conductor:

You send the litter for us, we was very glad. We are learning about miossin time in Old California and drawing pictures of them. The week from Saturday on 22, we will go over the San Garbile miossin to see the miossin play.

Your friend
YOSHITO TOYOTA

And so we sent word to our good friend Yoshito Toyota that we are looking forward with the deepest joy to seeing him and making his honorable acquaintance. His is a great credit to his great race. Well may he stand at salute to the spirits of his ancestors, making the report of his valor among an alien people in a strange land.

And while we are talking about schools and the boys and girls who compose them maybe we might as well call attention to the fact that Bill Pattison of the Rio Vista School in the San Fernando Valley has sent us an invitation to visit the institution of which he is a part. And in the letter Bill says something that is a sure bait for us. He knew danged well when he said it that we were bound to go.

"I hope you can come soon," said Bill in his letter, "because the crab-apple trees are in blossom now."

Blossom time and youth and the beauty of the world. Sometimes it is good just to be alive.

der and urethra, and a severe irritation takes place.

In most instances delivery of the child is, of itself, a cure. But where it is not, then more effective measures must be tried.

It is of extreme importance that the blood stream be brought into condition. This can be done only by means of the diet and hygiene which I have so long prescribed.

Then, the abdominal structures must be brought back into their normal position. Generally there is a prolapsus—that is, a falling of the bladder—when such extreme pressure as is evident in this case has been applied.

To counteract the local irritation, I have found very effective the use of a stream of cold water directly against the urethra. A rubber tube attached directly to the bathtub faucet will furnish sufficient pressure in a direct stream. This will relieve for hours, and often days, at a time. It will also serve to relieve the congestion and irritation and to clean the area besides.

Cold water sitz baths help provided, of course, no more serious disease such as cancer or fistula exists.

The fact that she is catarrhal is evident by her hay fever condition. This, also, can be overcome by diet measures, essentially by the elimination of sweets, starches and flesh foods.

At her weight, I do not see the necessity of reduction unless she is under five feet—and even then, she should not reduce very much. Far more important is the necessity of good elimination and the alkalinity of her excreta.

The acid urine will tend to irritate such a complaint still further.

Green vegetables, especially, tend to overcome urinary acidity and thus to minimize the pain and distress upon urination.

A knowledge of these essential processes would do very much toward aborting or entirely preventing similar disease processes in maternity if the average mother would merely understand that her body must undergo tremendous adjustment to a changed condition and that she should train herself and live accordingly.

Tipped Uterus

When the average woman submits to an internal examination, a very likely diagnosis the doctor may make is tipped uterus.

By this, of course, may be meant that the uterus is forced to any corner of the compass. That is, the uterus may be pushed north, east, south, west, upward or downward, or in any other direction.

A comparison of examination records of young women between the ages of eighteen and twenty-five shows a very decided contrast to similar records of those from thirty to fifty.

Generally, an abnormally placed uterus is acquired after marriage, when the first pregnancy is started and thereafter.

The mistakes that occur are of a varied assortment. Generally we have a combination of circumstances—wrong diet, a poorly-prepared-for pregnancy, a worse delivery, the same lack of preparation for the next pregnancy, little or no exercise, fatty degeneration, slovenly posture, pressure of the abdominal contents against the uterus, chronic constipation and abnormal birth-control methods.

These are the commonest causes, the leading one being the lack of preparation for pregnancy in which tremendous changes occur in the internal structures.

Exercises should be started before pregnancy commences and two months after delivery of the baby. Then, nature will adapt itself.

One should avoid constipation as one would a pest. It is the next great contributing cause.

If the diagnosis has already been established, don't rush to the surgeon for him to cut you open and shorten one or two ligaments in the hope that he will thereby put the uterus in a normal position. There is nothing the surgeon can do to put strength into the sagging muscles. There is nothing he can cut or shorten which will give new strength or elasticity to the ligaments which hold the uterus in place.

ARE YOU SUFFERING from painful affliction of the feet, broken down arches, callouses, bunions, etc.?

Ready-made Arch Supports are an unsatisfactory makeshift because everyone's foot is different and the displaced bones, enlarged joints and stretched ligaments complicate matter still further. We make supports from accurately prepared plaster of Paris casts and alter them to accommodate changes brought about by the wearing of the supports. In order to give relief and lasting satisfaction it is imperative that the foot be restored as nearly as normal as possible. We have had extensive experience in the correction of deformed, broken down arches and other deformities of the foot, and are able to promise our clients comfort and relief in every case.

It is not necessary to wear clumsy shoes with our supports; on the contrary, we often reduce deformities of appearance in foot badly deformed and crippled.

QUEER JOBS AND IDEAS

By
Marshall Breeden

A DOCTOR tried to sell a "guaranteed" rain-controlling machine. A man in Alhambra is raising "home grown" red angle worms, and an ex-top sergeant in the San Fernando Valley is playing with pet rattlesnakes.

His own garage was established by one man teaching "fraid-cat" women to drive their new cars. An old mechanic files saws for working carpenters, and a man in the country cultivates dandelions for their seed. A group of three or four industrious men farm the natural mud in the tide flats, while an ex-retail silk salesman earns his daily bread by restoring and trading in old garbage cans.

The man who trades in garbage containers originated his own racket. He has a home on a street below Slauson and a wife in the home. In his past business life he gathered some thrifty dollars and required only something to keep himself occupied. He prefered outdoor work. His racket is to wander down a residential street until he finds a discarded garbage can. He takes it to his workshop and with paint and tools makes it sightly and a thing of utility again. Then he goes from door to door and offers to sell the dolled-up can for a nominal sum plus the old one. When he has made two or three trades he calls it a day and sits in the park not far from his home.

Mr. William Thomas Johnson came to the Southland in the '70's. He was a husky young fellow then and a first-class journeyman carpenter. He established himself in his honorable vocation hereabouts and accumulated some small amount of this world's goods as well as age; and when it came time for him to stop his daily labor he had a trade to fill in the time with. Such is the caliber of this man that he has raised his trade to almost the dignity of a profession. He has the confidence, and esteem of hundreds of journeyman carpenters and from them gets his work, which is performed in his shop on Eastern avenue not far from Ninth.

Almost daily he goes to the headquarters of a large group of working carpenters. These men gather there to lay plans for their next jobs. All of them have their tools, for a carpenter carries his tools, with him just like a life-insurance agent carries his application blanks and fountain pen. Every carpenter has two or more saws, and Mr. Johnson is one of the most capable of saw filers. The working carpenters know it and trust their saws to his expert handling. He looks over the saws and when one needs attention he takes it to his shop and returns it in the sharp condition which should be vouchsafed to all good saws. He does well with the job and when he has finished he has the opportunity to sit in the sun, something desired by all men who have worked industriously and well throughout their lives.

The angle worm man is Mr. R. M. Bilkowsky of Alhambra. He has had his trials and tribulations. His first several crops were not so good as fish catchers. The pesky worms waxed fat and satisfied in their garden home, but when taken out and stored in cans they shriveled up and passed into the worms' happy hunting ground. But Bilkowsky kept trying and trying until he developed a species of red water worm which when placed in a sort of secret earth mixture abode happily in their cans for months. Then he said "mucho dinero" or words to that effect and started forthwith to raise his wiggle beasties on a large and numerous scale.

W. T. Johnson and his saw-filer.

To most of us a red water worm is just that and nothing more. Good for small boys to remove warts with and for small girls to scream and giggle about. But to the noble Nimrod a real, fat red water worm is something else again. It is a clearly printed invitation to go afishing. To these latter this Alhambra worm grower sells, delivers and ships his ignoble crop. His red water worms have the reputation of being almost certain to be sure strike-getters, with scarcely a dud in a whole can.

But before success what experiments this husky man made! How many martyred worms were returned to the dust of the soil to prove or disprove his theory of diet! Because it is diet which guarantees that the fisherman will find one hundred or more fat fellows waiting for him when he opens the can he has purchased.

He operates on more than two and one-half acres of rich land. This is flooded and cultivated as if for seed. It is then mixed with corn meal and leaf mold and is ready for the sewing of the seed. The eggs hatch with surprising quickness and prolific sureness, and a bushel of seed worms will in a season turn themselves into hundreds of thousands of their kind. When the harvest is ready they are dug, placed in cans and sent broadcast to make many a fisherman's happy holiday.

Orders come from zoological gardens, sporting goods dealers and individual fishermen. The cans of red fellows are shipped by express, parcel post and air mail. These red worms will remain alive in tins for many months and emerge to lure some speckled beauty in a distant torrent.

A few months ago Joe Klopp, working in a garage, began to notice the many women who wanted to be taught to drive their cars. He thought about it a bit, and then went into the business of teaching them the meaning of each auto lever, pedal and button. So successful was Joe that eventually he had other young fellows working on his pay roll. He made friends with garage owners and they sent him clients. He had about all the teaching his crew could do.

Joe is a thrifty and energetic married man. He saw to it that his assistants were polite, no matter how great the provocation. When an opportunity presented itself he established a garage. Now he repairs the machines busted by inexperienced drivers and others and continues his job of teaching new owners how to handle their cars.

The rattlesnake man lives in the town of San Fernando, where he conducts a business and plays with his snakes for scientific and commercial reasons as well as enjoyment. Willis A. Rowe is president of the Herpetological (which means snake) Society of California and now and then makes a speech with demonstrations on the puppy-like affection of a diamond-back rattler.

Now and then one of his pets develops temperament and several of them have taken bites out of this ex-top sergeant of the Eighth Ammunition Train. But, though he learned to be hard boiled in the service, once or twice, however, Mrs. Rowe has come close to collecting his insurance.

A Spanish War veteran raises an acre of two of ordinary dandelions for their seed. His place is located in the dry hills back of the La Habra oil fields. He ships the winged seed to a sort of savient or medical faker in New Jersey. This man uses the seed to make a sort of witch medicine, which he claims is far more potent as a chaser of evil than the juice of the unicorn's horn or the hind foot of a graveyard rabbit.

Farming mud has grown into a two-truck business for a group of oil workers who observed how mud was used in the drilling of an oil well. They therefore went out and found their own mud farm. It is in the soft bottom near the Los Angeles Harbor. They have a perpetual harvest. As fast as they remove the smooth, wet mud, the evening tides deposit more silt. In the morning they have a brand new stock of nice lubricating mud to be carted to some needy, and cash-paying, oil well, where the mud is poured into the hole around the long drill shaft to keep it cool.

But the "king-pin" job of all was a flivver. Maybe!

The man who got up the "rain-controlling" machine is a regular college graduated doctor. He seems to have patients here and in New York and rather generally over the land. He is rather widely known, especially among the "free thinkers" of the healing profession. But he is not to be considered a charlatan. Even if his business demands his absence for long periods yet he honestly loves the Southland.

Willis A. Rowe of San Fernando extracting venom from rattlesnake.

Joe Klopp, standing near the dog, and the business which he built

Last fall, he got to wondering about the lack of rain. It fretted him more and more. He worried about the dryness and then he put his brain to work on the job. He thought and he tinkered and he thought some more and then he invented a "rain-controlling" thing-a-ma-jig. He looked at his contraption and declared loud and long that he could make rain when he wanted to make rain. But being a sort of canny soul this doctor doped it out that he might as well make a dime or so out of all the rain he was going to give to the thirsty Southland.

With rain and gold in his mind he talked with several outstanding members of our citizenry about it. They were willing for him to go ahead but he would not until his palm was crossed with gold.

Since the money was to be paid on the nonreturnable basis the deal fell through and this controller of the atmosphere got about as sore as a wet hen.

"Very well," said he, or words to the same effect, "this machine of mine will work both ways. I am sorry I invited you to my party."

He went home and began to fuss around with his rain controller. He turned this lever and oiled that bearing, and set the spark of life going. Then he came outside and looked at the September skies.

"Smile on!" he said with an evil chuckle. "As long as the machine runs there will be no rain."

September waned and there was no rain. October came to the end of its days, and there was no rain. November faded into December and Christmas came and went and there was no rain.

Now the spirit of remorse began to leaven the breast of this "rain controller," then turned to fear and, on January 4, he took a hammer and in the company of some friends put that antirain machine out of business. Then he went to bed, and soon was awakened by the heavy patter of falling water dripping from the eaves above his contrite head. He rejoiced that the antirain machine had been put out of business . . .

That is his story, and he still has the ruined machine to show.

CARE OF THE BODY

The finest type of grace is effortless. If a simple task cannot be done without trembling or shaking, take twice the time to do it. But do it right. If it involves strengous muscular effort, don't try it.

Of course, the overcoming of most of the typical minor ailments of this age helps but the best of them all is mental concentration and a solution in this manner.

Urethral Growths

North Hollywood, Calif.

Dear Dr. Lovell:

I should like your advice with reference to what I think is a tumor of the urethra.

It is quite painful with a burning, itching sensation.

I have three children, the last ones being a pair of twins. When they were born and when I was pregnant with them, the weight was very great.

I have been bothered by this condition quite a bit the past month.

I am forty years of age and a little overweight, my weight being 117 pounds.

I am also troubled with hay fever.

Any advice you can give me will be very much appreciated A READER.

The ramifications of maternity extend into far more problems than the average mother considers.

In our civilized existence the continuity of the race demands an assorted array of adjustments.

With some, there is the problem of unwanted maternity. With others, motherhood comes with its string of troubles.

The above letter is probably illustrative of the latter—a case where maternity, in all likelihood, brought a chain of ailments in its wake.

There are a number of considerations which women must give to their bodies to fulfill this vital function successfully. The knowledge of pre-pregnant care should be an essential part of every woman's education.

Instead, we find the maternal tissues the object of the most vicious abuse. Before pregnancy they are subjected to every kind of irritative birth control and cleanliness procedure, ranging from douches to suppositories and including pessaries, dilators, astringents and so-called chemicals for "feminine hygiene."

The proximity of the uriniferous organs to the genitalia makes these structures a direct sufferer as a seqence. Wrong methods of birth control, irritative habits and then, finally, the customary catarrhal process of pregnancy render diseases of the urethra, bladder and associated urinary structures common conditions.

The above are some of the direct mechanical causes. What the diagnosis is in the case of the above writer, of course I don't know. The diagnosis must be based upon examination. It may be a simple angioma (a blood tumor) or it may be a cancer.

The commonest ailment following maternity is merely an inflammatory erosion present in the neck of the womb and on the opening to the urethra.

The symptoms of burning and itching are also often present in the post-childbirth irritations.

If the trouble is cancer, it is very serious and perhaps an incurable condition. However, cancer in this area is very rare, indeed.

Note what the writer says concerning the weight of the twins while she was carrying them.

The importance of this to women is very evident when one comprehends the simple mechanics of pregnancy.

The child is carried in the front portion of the abdomen. In the case of twins, as the embryos become larger, the weight on the front abdominal wall is very severe. After the third or fourth month of pregnancy, the uterus is not only behind the bladder but above it and on top of it as well. As a result, there is continuous pressure against the urinary organs.

This is the main reason why urination becomes so much more frequent when a woman is pregnant.

The front abdominal muscles are the structures intended to carry the bulk of the weight of pregnancy. When these are flabby and inert—and they are in the great majority of women—the internal viscera, usually the bladder, must bear the burden. Sedimentation occurs. There is pressure applied against the blood vessels and drainage to the bladder is impeded. Pus cells, bacteria and other waste products are not carried away as they should be. Infection is the result.

Displacement of Digestive Organs Most Common Malady—Causing Constipation, Backache, Stomach Trouble

Dr. Robert Coffey, in a standard medical book, states: "The most common malady which afflicts humanity is the displacement of the abdominal organs downwards." This condition, Dr. Coffey and other authorities point out, causes kinking of intestines, of the appendix, and of the gall ducts. It also produces congestion of the blood vessels, hampers the emptying of the stomach, and is the most common of all factors in producing stubborn constipation and backache.

We doubt if any person in ill health is free from this condition, because if the organs do not sag down and are held up in favorable position to functioning it is generally easy for the person to regain health. This condition of sagged abdominal organs is due to stretching or straining of ligaments in the lower part of the abdomen or to too fast or too great an absorption of fat. The logical remedy is clearly to apply support to the sagged organs in such a way as to lessen the sag and pull on the back and the kinking of intestines and of other vessels in the abdominal cavity. This can be done and can only be done by a properly adapted abdominal support. Ordinary store belts, corsets, abdominal belts and surgical corsets merely press back and tend to interfere with circulation and free muscle action. The support adapted to meet the needs of each case by Drs. Poole acts in such a way as to restore the organs to a position more favorable to functioning without the support in any harmful way crowding upon the abdominal organs. Drs. Poole have thousands of grateful and benefitted patients whose praise and endorsement of this measure of relief has given them the largest business of its kind in the West. Ask among your friends. Probably one of them is wearing a Drs. Poole support and can testify to relief from body discomfort such as extreme nervousness, backache, constipation, gall bladder trouble, excessive gas, sour stomach, and many other disorders which have resisted all forms of treatment previously tried.

Dr. Percy H. Poole

Dr. Georgean H. Poole

Dr. Poole supports are corrective in character and do not necessarily have to be worn indefinitely. Call and talk your case over. If your organs have sagged, it is clearly the terminal, and we will be glad to demonstrate at no cost or obligation the effect you can expect from a Dr. Poole support. A person does not have to wear a Dr. Poole support for the rest of their lives, but they do have to wear such a support if they are going to regain a full measure of health.

Send for Dr. Poole's 32-page free book on Enteroptosis (low stomach, sagged intestines) or, better yet, call and obtain a free examination and consultation. Dr. Percy H. Poole and Dr. Georgean H. Poole, Sun Bldg., 706 S. Hill.

WHY THIS NEW FOOD BANISHES DISEASE!

When you are sick, certain mineral elements, due to diet deficiency, are missing. Just what minerals are missing is hard to determine. It takes more than ordinary diet to correct diet deficiency—to supply the missing minerals.

To take just one or two minerals—for example, Iron or Calcium—in food, will not restore health for the simple reason that no one knows what deficiency in minerals is causing the disease. The modern practice is to offer the system ALL THE NECESSARY 16 MINERALS and let NATURE choose what it needs.

In order to supply all the necessary 16 minerals in SUFFICIENT QUANTITY to restore the MINERAL BALANCE and banish disease it has been found necessary to obtain the concentrated essence from 121 different foods and plants. These extracts are combined in one concentrated food called PRO-VITA.

It is obvious that no sick person could eat or assimilate 121 foods in order to secure these precious 16 minerals. The answer, therefore, is the concentrated food PRO-VITA.

Scientists know that the system cannot assimilate minerals in organic form. The system must get these minerals from food and plants.

PRO-VITA is absolutely guaranteed to contain these 16 minerals and to be the essence of 121 different foods and plants. It is not a breakfast food or liquid but is in a pleasant easy-to-take form. It is sold under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back.

If you are suffering from Rheumatism, Insomnia, Sleeplessness, Stomach Troubles such as Indigestion, Gas Pains, Ulcers or form an under-weight run-down condition—in fact, any disease, you should try PRO-VITA at once!

What Does He See in Her?

By Fannie Hurst

Tom's Delight Upon Re-meeting Ada Was All That Evelyn had Promised Her It Would Be. Here Was Recreation, a New Toy, a New Delight, a New Face.

FROM the day of her graduation, fifteen years before, from the high school of a large middle western city, Ada Gilbert had been baffled by the question which had first assailed her when her old sweetheart, Tom Cass, suddenly up and married her classmate, Evelyn Day.

Whatever of pique and chagrin Ada might have felt, were really beside the question, because she had eloped with the eldest son of the town's largest banker the week before the announced engagement of Tom and Evelyn.

But for years afterward, long after the Tom Casses had moved East, that question had flashed across the busy, variegated days of Ada's life.

What had Tom Cass seen in Evelyn Day, who was one of those colorless, nice-enough girls of dust gray personality and no achievements. A girl, as Ada used to describe it, with no face in particular, and no graces of mind or manner that in any way matched up to the sparkling distinction of Tom, who had been a distinguished student at high school, had captured honors at college, and from the start had seemed predestined for a career of honor and importance.

Not that Ada had any right to a sense of frustration. She became, upon her marriage, the town's wealthiest and most outstanding matron. But just the same, one could not help asking, whenever she picked up a newspaper and read the name of Tom Cass; what did he see in her.

What did he, who was once in love with me, see in her?

It is certain, that in the subsequent divorce between Ada and her husband, the conscious thought of Tom could have played little part. Nothing had been farther from her mind than to disrupt the snug bed she had made for herself as the wife of one of the most important, as well as the wealthiest, men in town. But Ada had reckoned without her host.

Practically out of a clear sky, the husband of Ada underwent the indignity of establishing residence in a State where divorce laws were notoriously lenient, in order to win his freedom from her on grounds of mental cruelty.

It was the most devastating catastrophe of her life. A famous beauty in her social world, a power, a woman of widest influences, the action came as a bewildering blow to her pride.

With all her cleverness, her nimble wit, her ability to lay her trump cards with outstanding diplomacy, she had made the supreme blunder of misjudging her husband's psychology. To her, he had been the plodding, rather stupid man, who concentrates brilliantly in business, and bares his neck to the yolk outside. Most galling of all, was the fact that his act had not been precipitated by a flare of passion for another woman. Nothing of that sort had entered into his life. His act was the deliberate cutting loose of a man who finds his marriage ties intolerable.

At thirty-five, still beautiful, well provided for, free, Ada found herself curiously cut away from the security and importance that had been hers as the wife of her husband. Life in the same city was no longer tolerable. Divested of the prestige, position and local importance, she became merely a divorcee, living on a generous alimony.

It was then she decided to move to one of the large eastern cities where the social horizon was wider, the life more varied.

Once more it was the subconscious that must have settled her choice on the town in which dwelt the Tom Casses.

In all the years which intervened between her graduation from high school, she had not clapped eyes either upon Tom or Evelyn. In the interim, Tom had become one of the most talked of magnates in the country. An entire township, devoted to his steel industries, lay just outside the city where he had built the famous Cass Castle. His industrial innovations, his revolutionizing sociological schemes were beginning to have their effect on the country, if not the world over. Tom Cass was a household word. His success had never faltered.

It was into his town, with magnificence of retinue, that Ada and her domestic caravan arrived with fanfare.

Of course, contacts with the Tom Casses were immediately resumed. Strangely, Evelyn seemed enthusiastically glad to see her and regaled her with promises of what Tom's exuberance was sure to be upon his return from Europe.

The Casses lived in a magnificence that seemed towering even to the accustomed eyes of Ada. The sweeping lawns, the baronial halls, the superb art wing and spacious nursery quarters were on a scale gargantuan. Evelyn's youngsters, true to form, were neither mentally or physically remarkable. A nice enough brace of children, a boy and a girl who had inherited much of their mother's dustiness and apparently little of their father's glamour.

Evelyn herself had not changed. In fact she had not even aged. The mother-gray quality in her was apparently a dust cover to the years. Quiet, unobstrusive, completely lusterless, she was the same quiet enigma who had startled her community by capturing the brilliant Tom Cass.

When Tom returned from what had been the flying business trip to London, his delight, upon re-meeting Ada, was all that Evelyn had promised her it would be. Here was recreation, a new toy, a new delight, a new face.

The years had dealt lightly with him. life had in general. He was a personality among personalities, assured, tremendously jovial, magnetic even beyond what he had been. Success had italicized him.

Curious, the bantering, sex-conscious, excited relationship that was immediately re-established between him and his old colleague. It was as if the intervening years had been merely hiatus, and here they were again, tiptoe as they had been in their youth, filled with awareness of each other, tantalizing to each other, and strangely exciting.

During these months, the beauty of Ada seemed to take on a new sheen. Her dolly blue eyes became brighter, her hair more jonquil yellow, the natural pink in her cheeks more surprising. She was taking the particular social set in which she was finding place for herself, chiefly it is true, through the Casses, by storm. Her dinners, her functions became focal points of the city's gayety. Not only Tom, but the town was agog with her.

What did he see in Evelyn?

More and more this question began to torment Ada. Why, here within arm's reach, except for this drab woman with no face in particular, was happiness beyond anything she had dreamed. Not the person to err twice, her second alliance would not only be crowned with success, but it now became evident to Ada, that all through the years of her marriage to another man, her one grand passion had been for Tom Cass. And here he was, ready, except for the intolerable impediments of a plain wife and plain children, ready to march himself back into her heart.

Fool, fool, fool that she had been, ever to miscalculate in those years back there—to let slip for want of imagination, yes, it had been just that, the youth with a future, for what seemed to her to be the youth with his future in his hand.

Fool. Fool. Fool.

CARE OF THE BODY

same civilized life.

The diet of these children is rich. They read salacious magazines. The stories teem with vivid descriptions of every type of sexually fervid experience. Their imagination is naturally keen—their appetites whetted. No counter-balance is applied, for the very best counter-balance is vigorous physical activity. Satisfaction of this deeply rooted sex desire must come in some fashion. It does—usually in the form of an early sex life—masturbation, one of the perversions, or the "wild" parties.

Our method of handling the situation is equally as stupid. We thunder and we roar. We apply crime-suppression waves and our churches scream. But root causes we seldom consider. We are far too prone to bawl out everybody than to consider the problem seriously and honestly as part of the mess we, ourselves, have created!

Were we to assume more of the humility of child-rearing and less of the great "I AM," our results would be better. At least, so think I!

Tremors in the Aged

There is no question but that when we arrive at the age of sixty, our nerves are not as steady, our muscles not as self-controlled and our movements not as smooth and even as at twenty. With most, there is a jerkiness, an unevenness, which is not quite a tremor—yet anything but that splendid ripple of muscles which we see in early youth.

The human machine is becoming old and with it is acquired a chain of troubles which includes internal function and external evidence.

The handwriting changes. Fine delicate tasks become more and more difficult or entirely impossible. The co-ordination between eyesight and finger muscles becomes less. And all in all, even though we do not have disease, we are confronted with a fairly rapid deterioration of such functions.

We need not discuss the more severe types as shown in the disease known as palsy or paralysis agitans. We may concern ourselves more with the milder forms which characterize nearly every elderly individual.

He may try to bring a cup of coffee to his lips and spill some of its contents. He may try to button his shirt and miss it two or three times.

It is in simple tasks of this nature that we see it shown best.

It is not that we find positive pathology. All we see are the usual ailments of advancing age—a little constipation, a little gaseous fermentation, a little sleeplessness, a periodic bilious upset, the loss of teeth and an attitude of general depletion.

At this period of life it is entirely too late to try to build up muscular co-ordination by means of exercises and muscular development. We must do this only during the anabolic (constructive) period—that is, the period when the body is being built or repaired at a faster rate than it is being destroyed. Past the sixties, destruction goes on at a keener pace than construction.

Muscular exercises for the purpose of building a finer set of muscles is more depleting than constructive.

Consequently, this is not the way to do it.

On the other hand, past the sixties, the mental forces should be more self-governing than at other times. At this age we should have cast off most of our repressions and inhibitions—our fears and our worries. There should be a greater "immaterialization." That is, we should care less for the material things and more for the abstract.

When we arrive at this epoch of our lives, we should be able to use our will force more potently than in earlier years.

Even though our bodies do not constitute such fine tools of behavior when we are old, our minds should be better disciplined and more rigorously trained than at other times.

For this purpose our objective should be relaxation. If we are suffering from the customary tremors and inco-ordinations of old age, we should try to make the slight tasks which involve such tremors as effortless as we can.

Ninety-five per cent of this inco-ordination is due to our tenseness, our concentration upon the task at hand.

ANCIENT CULTURE is

Toltec and Aztec Heritage, Stimulated by Influence of Entire Modern World Promises Glorious Future for Our Southern Neighbor Nation — Says This Artist After Close-Up Study of Mexico

By Norman H. Kamps

Illustrated by the Author

MEXICO, plaything of the conqueror, is facing a grand and glorious renaissance. After her troubled slumber of centuries, she is rising to the call of her cultural heritage; preparing to take her place in the sun along with sister nations of the earth.

An age of tyranny has passed over Mexico leaving the deep imprints of the iron heel, but great recuperative powers of time and change have been and are at work. Mexico now feels the influence of the entire world and not alone of Spain. All battles have a losing side. Decadence follows in the wake of the victor but losers have, in time, turned defeat to ultimate victory. Mighty Spain with her once great fleets and far-lying dominions has seen her pompous glory and exultant rule gradually wane. Mexico is yet recuperating, even as the conquered nations of the World War are slowly gaining new strength. Defeat has its sobering and cleansing qualities.

We may well expect a more glorious Mexico than at any time in its advanced Toltec or Aztec past. The oft-quoted "manana" and its apparent procrastination may be justified. Rest and relaxation sometimes follow centuries of fierce activity. Lolling in the sunshine or lying flat on one's back in the shade are not necessarily wasted time. In the World War, our own soldiers retained their energies during long sieges of intense activity and excitement, but many of the boys felt the reaction when the remnants of a division withdrew from the front lines. Rest brings renewed strength to individuals; it is the same with races.

We have great hopes in our own children, not so frequently in those of our neighbors. It is the pride of race. Inheritance, mutual talents and reversion to the finer qualities of a nation's predecessors are considerations. The Mexican has a heritage of art, culture and accomplishment in his Indian forefather, from which to draw inspiration, that is startling in its beauty, although equally fierce in its superstitious practices. The once-free Mexican has become a sensitive individual; in sensitiveness lurk genius and creative ideas and the feeling which makes him the true artist that he is. He realizes that a great change has come about. His civilization was once the most powerful and cultured of America, but the Valley of Mexico has been the stage for a great tragic drama.

The Aztecs as they came forward to greet Cortes.

The children of Mexico are eager and alert. Look into their deep dark eyes and you will sense divine energy, which will be expressed in all the endeavors of the republic. Great is the responsibility of the new Ortiz Rubio regime. The military element is losing its power. An engineer has become President. The writer has lived with the Mexicans, attended fiestas with them, sat at their tables with them, seen the bullfights with them; has felt their deep courtesy

THE NATION'S MONEY

Bank," bearing simply the words "Closed by Order of the State Superintendent of Banks." Business men and children, the aged and the young and prosperous, suffered alike when those 437 banks suspended or failed in the year 1929 with liabilities of $218,000,000.

This situation, however serious and distressing it is, presents only one phase of the banking problem, and not the most important one. The great majority of the banks of the nation are in sound and solvent if not prosperous condition. The stock market collapse of last fall produced surprisingly few bank failures. There was not, and is not now, any general shortage of money or bank credit.

The banking problems we confront now are not, in their essence, "new." They are difficulties with which we have been struggling many years.

In some parts of the country the problem is more apparent to the people generally than in others. For instance, in seven States more than 40 per cent of all the banks in existence in 1920 have failed. In six States, during the last ten years, between 25 and 40 per cent of the banks have failed. In twenty-six States about one bank out of every ten has failed since 1920. Most of these banks have been country or small-town institutions. The big city banks have been growing and prospering. One group of banks, under single control, made profits amounting to nearly $81,000,000 last year. Vast profits, amounting to many hundreds of millions of dollars, have been made by other big city banks, trust companies and their investment subsidiaries.

In New York City, as this is written, the asking price for a share of the stock of one bank is $3600 with "only" $3500 bid! Another bank's stock is selling at $1500 a share. Throughout the country, in the larger cities, bank stocks are selling at sums ranging from $500 to $1000 for shares the par value of which is only $100.

That is one side of the picture. Ordinarily it would not concern the man or woman who uses a bank merely for the purpose of cashing a salary check.

But there are other sides to the banking picture. Unless they are seen and understood by our people generally and an effort is made to remedy the defects, the consequences to the nation as a whole will be nothing less than disastrous. And when I say "the nation as a whole" I do not mean the bankers or the big business men of America, but the vast majority of our more than 120,000,000 people.

We have looked at the bright side of the picture in the growth of the city banks and the piling up of their enormous profits for a comparatively small number of stockholders. Now let us look at the drab facts which affect the great bulk of the banks and their customers.

Three-fourths of the country's 25,000 banks are located in the smaller communities of the nation. These banks should serve, and efficiently serve, millions upon millions of our people with comparatively little risk of loss through failure of the institutions. Do they? Let us look at the facts.

In the first place, of the total banking resources of the United States, amounting to about $72,000,000,000, nearly one-half ($33,400,000,000) are held by 250 banks. In other words, half of the banking assets of the country are in the possession of one one-hundredth of the nation's 25,000 banks. In two dozen banks in New York City there are concentrated practically one-sixth of all the country's banking resources. The capitalization of these twenty-four banks is almost as great as of the more than 20,000 banks situated in towns of 10,000 persons or less.

Here, then, is an enormous concentration of banking resources such as we thought we had guarded against by the enactment of the Federal Reserve Act in 1913. The great financial stringency of 1907 and 1908, when money—currency of any kind—was practically unobtainable in many parts of the country, when business throughout the nation was prostrated, produced an overwhelming demand from our people for banking reform. "Take the money control out of Wall street" was the cry to which Congress responded several years later with the Federal Reserve Act. That act has served a useful purpose—it has given the nation an "elastic" currency, so that there has been no grave shortage of money or credit for business purposes.

In the nine-year period from July, 1920, to July, 1929, approximately 5000 banks failed or suspended. These banks had deposits of $1,500,000,000. Most of the failures were in agricultural sections. Yet in the great and generally prosperous States of Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Missouri—not "one crop" States, like Georgia or Kansas, with their cotton and wheat—more than 1400 banks closed, with resultant loss and suffering to a vast number of people.

Outside the great cities there were thousands of banks which, while not failing, were giving little evidence of the prosperity of the big metropolitan institutions. In 1927, for instance—a generally good business year throughout the country—nearly 1000 national banks operated at a loss, and an additional 2000 earned less than 5 per cent. Together, these amounted to about four out of ten of all national banks.

In recognition of some of these conditions, in order to strengthen the national bank and Federal Reserve System, Congress enacted three years ago a banking bill which I introduced in the House of Representatives. For nearly a year before enactment there was a deadlock between the House and the Senate over ten words in the bill as it passed the House. Those words, if enacted into law, would have greatly restricted the establishment of branches by banks. In the end the action of Congress virtually was to permit national banks to have branches where the States sanction branch banking. Congress thereby adopted the view that big cities should have big banks, under national as well as State charters.

But Congress did not thereby give its approval to the kind of banking groups that have been born during the last few years, and which constitute one of our great national problems.

The issue now being tried before the

Care of the Body

By Philip M. Lovell, N. D.

Changes of Pubescence

From twelve to eighteen is the formative period in the boy's and girl's life. Were parents to become aware of the drastic changes occurring during this period, many of the mistakes would be avoided.

The pitfalls are many—the precautions taken against them are few. Consequently, the formation of bad habits is very easy, indeed.

We bemoan our losses entirely too late. The revolution inside the body should be familiar to every parent and with this a safeguard would best be created against the abnormalities which occur.

The boy and girl become conscious of the opposite sex—at first in a vague and indefinite fashion—then as a definite and specific longing.

There is nothing unclean or smutty in this desire. It is part of nature's fundamental processes—the awakening—the quickening of the sex senses.

If prohibitions and inhibitions are applied, the invariable consequence will be that complexes of perversions will be formed.

The surest way to get up pressure in a steam boiler is to permit the heat to accumulate with no safety valve to relieve the pressure.

Early youth is the period of heat. A means of source of outlet must be found. The commonest source, of course, is self-abuse and masturbation in both male and female. It starts surreptitiously at first. Then it gains force with the acquiescence and knowledge that others are doing the same thing.

There is a sort of fraternity of abnormality which is well recognized in the high school period. The "wild" parties and extramarital sexual relationships are merely phenomena associated with this fraternity.

It does not take long before the boy or girl knows practically everything there is to be known but from an abnormal and distorted sense.

The main reason is because the parents considered the adolescent period as something whose significance should be kept hidden from the growing child—as something which should be suppressed and treated as unclean and smutty.

It is a great pity, indeed, that the fundamental truths in life and sex cannot be disclosed, not only during the adolescent period but long before. The life of every insect, bird and beast should be an open book to the child from the earliest age of understanding. Then the changes of pubescence with its sex-consciousness would not be productive of such extreme reactions.

In an indirect fashion, parents are not the only parts of the system to blame. Unquestionably, the finest antidote toward sexual abnormalities and perversions, early masturbation and premature sexual experiences, is physical sports and exercise.

The lad who is a fine sportsman—who knows how to play baseball and basketball—who roller-skates and ice-skates—who wrestles, swims, goes on hikes and plays vigorous tennis—has very little time, nor for that matter, very little energy, to devote to quenching the fires of sex desires.

The same is true of the girl, for all of these sports and physical activities are now open to her as well.

This is fine from an ideal standpoint but again, we are up against the actual problem of circumstances.

An analysis of the average boy's or girl's life from thirteen to eighteen shows the impracticability of a program of this kind.

Our distorted ideas of education compel the boy or girl to remain in school until two, three or four o'clock in the afternoon. Most of the studies are sedentary and about 90 per cent of them are functionless, useless and a relic of the by-gone days when culture was an abstraction of superficiality rather than the actual meeting of the everyday problems of life.

To my way of thinking, we could dispense with fully 90 per cent of the superfluous stuff taught both in grade school and high school.

In the middle-class and in the wealthier homes, the boy and girl must spend some time on music, perhaps dancing or elocution or some such foible with which the mother likes to dress her possessions.

Generally, the "culture" which is thrust down the throats of our children is nothing more than the thwarted inhibitions and ambitions of a mother or father who want to give the children what they, themselves, have been denied—at least which they say they have been denied but which, in most cases, they have been too lazy to acquire themselves!

With school out between three and four—with an hour or two of lessons, chores or transportation—there is not much time left. Supper comes next—perhaps an hour or two of school work and the day is done.

If the lad or lassie has permission to go out, the time is usually spent in the form of a recreation—not in the indulgence in physical pursuits. The movies take most of it and a dozen-and-one other sedentary activities take the rest.

This leaves Saturday and Sunday.

Generally physical activity during the week-end is dependent upon the rest of the family. The family "chariot" must be washed, polished and serviced. Mother and dad spend Sunday as their day of rest, which means sleeping until eleven or perhaps church until noon. Then, Sunday afternoon, the boulevards tell the story!

What time is left for the average sixteen-year-old to apply to vigorous physical pursuits?

As a result, he is also a victim of the Perfect Eyesight Without Glasses

Dr. Wesley M. Barrett

Ocular Science is fast reaching the conclusion that the highest perfection of the Eyes, the same as any other part of the body, can only be obtained by the use of the Eyes unhampered by any artificial aid.

The use of glasses is fast being limited to its legitimate field, that of an emergency aid to the Eyes, while scientific methods of treatment for rebuilding and normalizing the Eyes are being applied so as to make glasses unnecessary.

The Barrett Eyesight System, as originated and developed by Dr. Wesley M. Barrett in the Barrett Institute, has pioneered the way and has demonstrated the truth and success of the method over a period of years by successfully treating thousands of the various types of Eye cases.

The Barrett Institute is fully equipped, and maintains a staff of Physicians and Specialists to carry out the various forms of treatments necessary to rebuild the Eyes, and to correct the body conditions and ill health which causes a great majority of all Eye difficulties.

and believes in them. Mexico is not to be judged by the border towns; they are not the heart of the country, but rather, what the novelty-seeking tourists encourage them to be.

A wholly unwarranted cry is being made by some Americans to their fellow-citizens, "to stay out of Mexico, to leave them alone." Mexico wishes the opposite; her doors are wide open to the immigrants of the far corners of the world, who are bringing progress and various cultures to her domains. Mexico City has long gone to Paris for ideas. Her shops are cosmopolitan, the men carry canes, and more high-priced cars are seen in the capital than in the average city at home. The Germans have their hardware and drug stores well distributed throughout Mexico; they also have their own schools, as do the English. The French, Swedish, Russian, Chinese and Japanese have their extensive interests and they have come to stay. Mexico invites the knowledge of the world and makes only one stipulation: that her laws be respected and obeyed. The visitors and foreign residents are very eagerly encouraging the continuance of the beautiful old Indian and Spanish customs, and it is to be hoped that Mexico will never acquire the rush customs of our busy American cities. May the noon-day siesta ever remain as it is, an institutional custom.

The Toltec Indians migrated from the north and settled in the Valley of Mexico about the year 648 A.D. They were followed by the Aztecs about 1196 A.D., who, together with other less-known tribes, are forefathers of the Mexicans of today, many of whom trace a direct Spanish lineage as well as the Indian one. There are many distinctions to be accorded to the great Indian civilizations which existed in Mexico previous to and shortly after the Spanish invasion, that bore marked resemblance to the Egyptian, ancient Greek and Roman cultures of ages before. There were codes and customs equal to many of our twentieth-century standards. A very unique and honorable distinction was practiced by the Aztecs, in the carrying out of the decree, that no one could be born to slavery: the children of slaves were born to freedom. Slaves sometimes married freemen and upon the death of the master were frequently freed. However, although the life of the slave involved no great hardship, the end was often tragic.

Consider a few outstanding Aztec codes, the gentleness of which were derived from the Toltecs (who disappeared from Mexico about 1051 A.D.) and the fierceness of which comes from their own priesthood and superstitious beliefs. They relied largely on physical means of correcting evil and disclosed great respect for the principles of morality. Great consideration was shown for the rights of property and special attention to the personal security of all, but the human sacrifices. The Aztec judges were punished by death for accepting presents or bribes. Lawyers' fees were unknown, as the parties concerned would state their own cases and support them with their own arguments and witnesses. The proceedings were recorded in hieroglyphical paintings, and thus the art education of the Indian was a part of his daily life. Hieroglyphical drawings of figures, animals, birds, trees, symbols and designs, denoting every conceivable object and action in combinations expressing ideas, thoughts, plans or judgments, were the books, public notices and records of the people. All of this was art in everyday life and much more unique and interesting than any printed page of type of today. It is very aptly termed "picture writing."

One feels the artistic background in an unusually large degree among the twentieth-century Mexicans. The barber will ask permission to examine your sketch book, and you marvel at his understanding of even a few vague lines; and some little six-year-old Lolita will come to your side, while you are sketching in the Mercado and say, "How well you do that, senor." These are evidences of the soul of the race, of their interest in art and expression, and when Don Carlos describes a sunset, he uses many adjectives to convey his feeling about it, which run from exclamations of "Que bonito, preciso, hermoso, divino, lindo, elegante, bello delicado, primeroso, exquisito," on upward.

The Aztecs emphatically disapproved the murder of slaves or the squandering of fortunes by prodigals. The punishment for these offenses was death. Thieves were exterminated by death or sold into slavery. Consequently the fear of thievery was not great and no bolts or locks barred free entrance to dwellings. Intemperance in the young was punishable by death also; and in the old, it resulted in loss of rank, yet the moderate use of pulque was never frowned upon.

The Toltec and Aztec craftsmen and artists excelled in the building of pyramids, statues and carved monuments. They made exquisite feather mantles, ornamented armor, vases and plates of solid gold, bracelets and utensils of copper. Taxes were paid to the kingdom with crystals, bells, reams of paper, grains, fruits, copal, amber, cochineal, cacao, wild animals, timber, beans, mats, white salt, axes, red chocolate, lime, tiles of gold, scarlet feathers, tiger skins and other commodities. All of this, long before Columbus ventured forth.

Many of the famous cathedrals and churches of Mexico were erected shortly after the conquest, and they remain to attest to the fineness of the craftsmen of these bygone generations that only a few years before lived to carve weird gods and monsters on the walls of pyramids, but so soon to edify the Christian God and saints by their artistic skill. Superstition still lurked in their skillful hands, for although the Spanish architects prescribed the Christian motifs, the Indian frequently forgot himself and boldly carved some deep-rooted pagan design on the facade of these early Spanish Colonial edifices, which are among the glories of Mexico.

They maintained a courier system that was incredibly fast. Fresh fish from the bay at Vera Cruz reached Montezuma's (the King's) table at the capital in twenty-four hours from the time they were caught; the distance was two hundred miles. The couriers were trained from childhood, and all messages were relayed on foot. Not as speedy as the air mail of today, but very conducive to the building of beautiful strong bodies.

The highest place in the life to come was reserved for the heroes who died in battle. They at once passed into the realm of the sun, whom they accompanied with dance and song for a period of years, after which their spirits animated the clouds, the beautiful singing birds and revelled in the rich odors and beautiful blossoms of the gardens of Paradise. The wicked merely expiated their sins in a place of deep darkness and no suffering was added. This is a very marked contrast to the physical suffering that other religions have devised for the wicked.

They believed in the existence of a Supreme Creator. Many of their prayers are noteworthy and exemplary, as this fragment, "O God, by whom we live, omnipresent, who knoweth all thoughts and bestoweth all blessings, without whom man is nothing, invisible, incorporeal, one God of perfect perfection and purity under whose care we find repose and defense, etc." Yet, the many under gods had to be appeased and their altars reeked with the blood of human victims.

A few words about the fiercer qualities of the Aztec, in which the Toltecs took no part. Strange and weird, sublime and cruel, is the medley of thought, custom and prayer that so sacredly guarded life on the one hand, and on the other hand, brutally sacrificed twenty thousand victims a year to the special gods. So do the records of historians read, and the Aztec recorder, Ixtilcochitl, states that the number of captives massacred during one memorable year amounted to one hundred thousand. Such a practice had to come to an end, and this end we owe to the Spanish invasion.

The milder Toltecs were content with processionals, offerings of fruit, animals and birds. The Aztecs also had their confessors and among the various penances, the sinner was exhorted to bring a slave for sacrifice as soon as possible to appease the wrath of the gods. And yet, hear the beautiful prayer of the Aztec priest: "Clothe the naked, feed the hungry, whatever privation it may mean to thee, for remember their flesh is like thine and they are men like thee." Thus, good and evil were practiced at the same time, and one becomes aware of the fearful curse that superstition can inflict on the growth of a race which has so many admirable qualities.

The Aztecs went singing and shouting into battle; eternal reward was always at hand for those who perished. The enemy was never killed if he could be captured alive; the sacrificial altar awaited him. Many of the Aztec leaders were killed by the invaders, and it is said that the initiative of the nation perished in that act. We too have lost great souls. The names of Joyce Kilmer, Quentin Roosevelt and Maj. McCrae are not to be forgotten. What initiative they had, what deeds they would have done, what songs they would have sung.

Years of defeat and oppression lie behind the Mexicans. There are brilliant prospects ahead. The spirit of the Toltecs still flickers, and Mexico is perhaps the richest of the undeveloped countries of the world. One feels the unconquerable quality of the Mexican in her sons Vasconcelos, Rivera and others.

The lure of Mexico is strong. The half-Spanish half-Indian senoritas with their vivacious eyes and beautiful lips; with their ability in the arts, their genuine love of home and family, their gentleness and affection, are a power and attractive force, more potent than the highest diplomatic stroke.

Mexico sends her children to our colleges and schools, her emigrants cross our borders, and, in the meantime, many of our own sons and daughters are finding their lot in Mexico a very happy one, indeed.

Failure

An enterprising reporter managed to reach one of the Mayo brothers, world-famous surgeons, to ask his opinion on the newly discovered cancer serum. Doctor Mayo gave his opinion and a little later the reporter asked:

"Do you think, doctor, that the time will come when we can be vaccinated for every known disease and thus enjoy perfect immunity from every ill?"

"Not unless someone can invent a universal antitoxin," replied Doctor Mayo promptly. Then he smiled.

"Do you realize," he continued, "that in Paris they already fear a smallpox epidemic?"

"Why, no!" gasped the reporter expectantly. "I thought vaccination had practically eradicated smallpox in civilized countries."

"So it had, until recently," admitted Dr. Mayo, "but you see," he added with a chuckle, "now-days women are refusing to be vaccinated because there seems to be no place where it won't show. Now suppose health requires not one, but twenty vaccinations—they'd die first."

Tough

Some visiting Americans were complimenting Lady Astor on the excellence of her household servants.

"That is because they are born to their tasks and take pride in them," declared the titled American. "You see, in England, a butler doesn't put in his time trying to be something else. His ambition is to be the best of all butlers. We really have what you might term a servant aristocracy.

"Now, in America, no one is content to be a servant and few have ambition to be the best in their line. That is why you have your so-called domestic problem.

"There is an old saying that 'no man can serve two masters.' In America I think it would be more correct to state that 'no man can master two servants.'"

Mystery

She's only a freshman now, in Hollywood High, but one of these days she's going to be a movie star. In the meantime, history is causing lovely Joan no end of trouble. The other day, in class, she stated that the British were terribly ungallant in that they had shot Joan of Arc.

"But they didn't shoot her," asserted the history teacher. "Do you mean to say you failed to read the dramatic account of how she was burned at the stake?"

"Yes," said Joan, "I read all about that, but I thought maybe it was movie fire and didn't kill her. Anyhow, it said on the next page that she was shot."

"You'll have to show me, dear," insisted the teacher.

"All right, here it is," said Joan triumphantly. "It says right on page eighty-four that she was canonized."

Boston

And now comes another expert who has found out what's wrong with the churches. It is Rev. Robert L. Minker, who declares:

"Much of the religious apathy in country places has been attributed to the prevalent habit of serving baked beans on Saturday night. There are homes where the beans are served again for Sunday breakfast.

"It is well-nigh an impossible task for a preacher filled with baked beans to preach to a congregation similarly filled."

Ultra

Before his rise as a real estate man, Frank Meline was a well-known architect and has done as much as any other one man to shape the style of Southern California dwellings.

Not very long ago a close friend said: "Frank, I want a really modern apartment; the very last word in progress; something of the future rather than of today."

"'That's easy'" laughed Mr. Meline. "All you are asking for is a garage, a putting green and a bedroom."

Proper

Little Walter Sloane of the Logan Street school seems destined to become a financier one of these days. He had turned in his writing lesson, very neatly and painstakingly done. To the teacher's eyes just one flaw appeared.

"Walter," she asked, "why is it that you always write bank with a capital B?"

"Because I heard my Dad say a bank was no good without capital," spoke up Walter promptly.

Philanthropist

Four-year-old Junior Carter of Pasadena was diligently engaged in sliding down the cellar door when his mother caught him.

"What in the world are you doing?" she demanded.

"I'se working," said Junior. "I'm fixing pants for the poor orphan boys that don't need seats in them."

Foreign

Mary, aged five, came to her mother with a puzzled frown. "Ma," she asked, "what does S-M-T-W-T-F-S spell?"

"Why, nothing. Where did you ever see anything like that?"

"It's right on here," declared Mary triumphantly, pointing up at the top of the calendar

Omnipotent

Al Smith, forgetting trouble and politics on his vacation in Florida, was asked who he thought was the most effective speaker in the last Presidential campaign.

"Well," he replied with a smile, "that's a hard question to answer, but there was one chap that the whole country listened to."

"You?" asked the tactful reporter.

"No," grinned Al. "The radio announcer."

Development

"We have been having a lot of fun with our Farm Relief plans," says Gov. Allen of Massachusetts, "but it is a serious business. It is serious for the country, and here in New England it is serious for the local vegetable markets—because people won't work at what won't pay and if farms won't pay, we soon won't have any.

"I was talking the other day to a farmer out Concord way whose son has just been graduated from the Amherst Agricultural College. "Has the boy any plans for perking up the old farm?" I asked jokingly.

"'You bet he has,' replied the farmer seriously. 'He wants me to quit plowing it and turn it into a golf course.'"

Important

On his recent trip to and from Santa Barbara from Los Angeles, ex-President Coolidge was twice imperiled by near-auto accidents. The following day he was telling Col. Lindbergh all about it. it.

"Lindy" congratulated the Coolidges on their fortunate escape and then remarked with a grin:

"Travel by air seems assured. Now someone ought to see if something can't be done about travel by road."

Schemer

"Courts would not be so crowded if too many trivial cases did not find their way onto the docket," says Judge Wilson adding:

"The majority of these cases could be settled out of court by means of a little arbitration or a little diplomacy. Some of these contestants could take a tip from Jones.

"A friend called on Jones one night and noticed a nice, big, shiny saxophone on the table.

"'My goodness,' he exclaimed. 'You don't mean to say you've bought a saxe.'

"'Nope,' grunted Jones, 'I borrowed it from my neighbor.'

"'Borrowed it! What's the idea? You can't play it.'

"'Neither can he—while I've got it,' snapped Jones."

Honest

There is at least one clerk in the income tax department who has a sense of humor. He had been going through a pile of returns when he suddenly waved one in the air and shouted:

"Hold everything, folks, at last we've discovered a really honest man."

"Go on, tell us!" cried everyone with manifest disbelief.

"Well," said the Columbus of the office, "here's a movie executive who has classified his salary as 'unearned income.'"

Impartial

The epidemic of dog poisoning in Los Angeles caused Mrs. J. D Lane, the social worker, to remark:

"Of course I'm sorry for the destruction of the defenseless animals but I don't think you can blame the men much for being jealous of them. I know lots of money who kiss their dogs but not their husbands. I know another woman who has two little children. One day the maid asked:

"'Are you going to take the children out in the auto today, ma'am?'

"'Oh, no, not today,' replied the mistress lightly. 'I think Fido needs the fresh air more than they do.'"

Sport

Gloucester, Mass., is one of the most famous fishing villages in the world. Here is a story from there but strange to relate, it has nothing to do with fish.

Dogs, and not king cod, was the subject, each dog owner bragging vividly of the intelligence and tricks of his favorite canine. Finally, ex-Mayor Henry H. Parsons broke up the meeting with this one:

"Boys, I had a dog about thirty years ago who had more brains than Rin Tin Tin. When this dog of mine saw two boys fighting on the street he would always run out and bite the big one."

The Nation's Money

Committee on Banking and Currency of the House of Representatives is, in effect, whether the head of a great banking group, sitting at his desk in Wall street, shall be permitted to say to John Smith, farmer in South Dakota, "We will not permit your bank to lend you money," or say to Richard Roe, merchant in California: "You must cut down your loan and pay a higher rate of interest." It is this issue which, in the final analysis, will have to be tried by the American people through their representatives in Congress.

The committee of which I have the honor and privilege to be chairman is proceeding under the authority of a resolution which I introduced in the House of Representatives and which was passed by that body on February 10, 1930. It authorizes a study and investigation of group, chain and branch banking, to be followed by a report and recommendations for legislation.

Let us see how present tendencies in banking may affect the man or woman in the ordinary walks of life. Under the system of banking we have had during nearly all our national life, banking has been practically a personal service.

Group banking, on a large scale, is a development of the last few years in America. The banking group is formed by the purchase of bank stock sufficient to give control of widely scattered banks. The stock is held by a corporation which is not itself in the banking business—yet practically owns and controls scores or thousands of banks. Thus the president, chairman or directors of a Delaware holding company may control the business life of a California city, a Minnesota village or a farming community in Georgia. The depositors and customers of the Minnesota bank may not even know that control of "their" bank is vested in a few men in New York City or Chicago; yet, as a matter of fact, the local officers of the bank are mere employees, subject to the will and direction of men, great financiers, whom they have never even seen.

What I have described is a condition, not a theory.

There is already in existence, for instance, a single banking group, or holding corporation, controlling nearly 300 banks. It represents a concentration of authority and control over more than $2,500,000,000 of resources. Another holding company controls nearly 100 banks, with assets of about $500,000,000. It dominates the banking of a large group of States. There are various other groups of this nature—all tending to centralization, perhaps monopolization, of the banking facilities of our people.

These banking groups are prosperous; they bring efficient management to even small-town links in their chain; they produce profits for the owners of holding-company stock. Whether they are beneficial to the communities in which their banks are located, whether they represent an element of grave danger to our whole economic life, are questions to be determined by the study my committee now has under way. Certainly there would seem to be danger in permitting such a concentration of banking control and resources as would eventually give half a dozen men complete, unrestrained domination of the credit and money of all America. Yet that might come to pass if present tendencies are followed to their logical conclusion.

There are other dangers, besides possible monopolization, in chain and group banking. The Comptroller of the Currency of the United States, who has supervisory charge of the national bank examiners, recently said:

"Where a group is composed of both State and national banks, as well as of other types of financial institutions, it becomes practically impossible for any supervising governmental official to ascertain authoritatively and accurately the financial condition of the group as a whole.'

Thus, eventually, a whole chain of banks operating in hundreds of communities in dozens of States, may fall through the mismanagement, poor judgment or dishonesty of a few men in control of a bank-stock holding company. The result would be a national catastrophe. It may be said, in defense of the group or chain-banking system, that good results flow to all parts of the system from efficient supermanagement at the center. But it should not be forgotten that there is no guaranty of continuing honest, intelligent, public-spirited management in the center of such a system. Dire, evil results can flow from selfish, mercenary, plutocratic management.

Chain-store systems, giant manufacturing, power and other business consolidations tend toward a centralized money and credit control. Already these processes have brought to the Federal Reserve Bank of New York a gold reserve of approximately $900,000,000. This is nearly one-third of the gold held by all twelve Reserve banks combined. Under the control of this single bank is one-twelfth of all the monetary gold in the world.

Such resources, so controlled, are often poured into questionable, speculative foreign investments—while our own people are made to pay unreasonably high rates of interest or denied loans that would contribute to the upbuilding of American agriculture and industry. It is proposed, for instance, to use America's funds to finance Germany's reparations payment to her former foes; to foist upon the American public billions of dollars of questionable foreign securities—so that Europe's currencies may be "stabilized."

It is these tendencies in the American banking structure and practices that make urgently necessary some study and remedial action by the people's representatives, if the nation is to live and thrive.

The White House Gang

By Earle Looker

Theodore Roosevelt, when President of the United States, started the adventurous, rollicking, joyous career of the White House Gang by sending his youngest son Quentin, to the Force Public School in Washington. Here the Gang was recruited. The accredited members were Charles "Taffy" Taft, "Brownie" Seeley, Dick "Sailor" Chew, Edward "Slats" Stead, also called "Bedstead," Walker White, "TR," the most active member of the Gang, Quentin, the leader, and Earle Looker, the author of this story.

"By George!" T. R. said, "that shows how unstable are the seats of the mighty!"

CHAPTER VIII

Concerning Collars

FOR testing the texture, quality and endurance of any sort of clothing give it to any boy to wear for a few hours. The seat must be strong, unsnagable, preferably of armour-plate; the elbows must be of triple thickness, the knees of some miraculous material which will continually replace itself.

At the end of a regular Gang meeting, a boy might hardly be recognizable, except to his own mother. For having been inspected, at least for cleanliness and a certain conventional completeness of attire, before starting off for the White House, he might fall desperately from grace and return in quite another far less reputable guise. His mother would see that her son's collar—we wore Eton collars then—was fresh. The Gang, with or without intent, would see to it, before the afternoon was over, that the collar was returned, together with the boy, both rather shopworn and soiled.

I once carried a two-cent stamp, affixed by Quentin, together with my name and address, scrawled all across the back of my collar, and on the side of it this legend: "If not delivered, return to White House, Wash., D. C." To my intense anguish, I was forced to take a street-car home, in order to avoid being late for supper; as a consequence, I had to endure the stares, smiles, remarks, questions and laughter of a carload of afternoon shoppers, coming back from F street, together with a number of business men and government clerks.

Had I been alone, it would have been a simple matter to have hidden my collar under my coat; but, unluckily, two other members of the Gang were with me, highly delighted at the sensation I was creating. My pride in sticking it out, therefore, was just a trifle greater than my suffering, since they told everybody within earshot that Quentin Roosevelt had personally addressed me home, and that the inscription was in his authentic handwriting.

The commotion caused, however, was nothing compared to the great collar-riot which occurred, one snowy Saturday afternoon, in Chase's Polite Vaudeville, a theater which stood on the south side of Pennsylvania avenue, near the Treasury. We had arrived in state, all properly collared, in a White House carriage. Reader was to call for us at the end of the performance, as we all were wearing our good clothes, and the sidewalks were rivers of slush.

The weather had been damp and chill and the theater was thoroughly warmed. As we entered and were ushered to a box, provided, as Q informed us, "at great expense by my mother," the heat of the place was similar to that of a Turkish bath.

To our surprise and Q's evident annoyance, someone in an orchestra seat recognized him! There was an instant craning of necks, a murmur, and, finally, a ripple of applause, as we seated ourselves endeavoring not to notice the demonstration . . . The vaudeville progressed politely, and as our excitement rose with the thwacks of a slapstick comedy we began to drip with perspiration.

"Take off your coats!" Q said, being host, and we removed them.

Presently, our enthusiasm being enhanced by a juggling act and a precarious chair-balancing-tower, our collars began to wilt.

"Take 'em off!" said Q, commencing to remove his own. So we removed our collars.

The jugglers took their bows, the asbestos curtain was rung down and the lights went up, for the intermission. The sudden illumination discovered to the audience, five Eton collars, perched in a row upon the wide velvet edge of the box. Their owners had vanished. There was much laughter, and tremendous applause from the audience.

Suddenly realizing its coatless and collarless state, the Gang had dropped, as one boy, to the floor of the box. Which action, of course, was born of a quite accurate understanding of the proprieties of the occasion.

"By buzzard!" Q said, still on his hands and knees, and reaching up for his collar, from behind the solid edge of the box. "That wasn't polite at all! They just shouldn't have noticed it!"

One by one, the collars disappeared from the view of the audience, which loudly applauded each fresh disappearance, as the Gang crawled across the floor of the box in single file and out through the curtains hung behind it. There we waited, more or less stunned by the furore of the ovation, yet secretly pleased by it, although not showing this to one another. We stood behind the curtain until the intermission was over, and the lights were turned low, before venturing back to our seats, to be met by a round of applause, more prolonged than before. This was the end of our act, and the actors upon the stage had to wait until the audience was through with us, before they could resume.

"Sit still," Q advised, speaking out of the side of his mouth, and looking straight ahead of him, into the sea of faces. "If we get up and bow, as everybody expects us to, we'll be blamed for the whole thing!"

As the show continued, there were a number of impromptu lines directed toward us and the collars, to the huge delight of the audience. We were rather fed up with that sort of thing, long before the end was reached. When it was, we rushed out to the White House carriage and the protection of Reader, gladly enough. Reader, seeing that something had gone wrong, wheeled his horses away from the theater entrance and the outpouring laughing audience upon the sidewalk, in an abrupt but beautiful arc.

The influence of his splendid parents, strong as it was, could not always control Q, when out of their sight, but TR and Mrs. Roosevelt both knew that the independence of Q and of other members of the Gang, was as precious as their own, all boys being created free and equal. Q knew it too, and showed it in this expression, doubtless picked out of a remark of TR's—"We all pay taxes." Young as he was, it was his constant effort to keep fair in this respect; yet this very resolve brought about one of the Gang's early disagreements.

On a certain afternoon—from the outside looking in—members of the Gang might have been seen streaming across the garden behind the iron picket fence, like a pack of puppies in full cry, falling down, rolling over in the grass, kicking up their heels to the sun, getting up, disappearing with an idea, like a dog with a bone, behind shrubbery, reappearing ten minutes later silhouetted against the long "good running roof" of the corridor, extending toward the Treasury.

After all this tremendous exertion, Q suggested abruptly, "How about bicycle racing in the hall?"

There was a dead-wind silence for a moment; then someone said, with disgust and finality, "Oh, gee! I'm sick of that!"

"Well, whatever you say, we'll do," Q assented.

"Why should I say?" asked the other, irritated, because he had no immediate idea.

"Well, why not?" countered Q, flushing rosy red.

"Because I don't want to. Isn't that enough?" the other boy snapped. "Just because this is your place, you needn't think—"

"Aw, shut up!" Q returned indignantly. "Let's do what you want to do. That's fair, isn't it?"

"No," the boy said, "it isn't. Because that's what you want to do, now . . ."

Q remained silent; the logic of the statement seemed quite unanswerable. The Gang regarded the two disputants with heightened interest, and extreme seriousness. What the argument was, originally, made no difference, now; it had developed into a question of each boy standing up for what he considered his rights.

Q looked at his friend with blazing eyes, and then ran his hand, uncertainly, through his own tousled hair. The friend glared back, defiant, fanning his anger. Neither wanted to strike the first blow. The rest of the Gang, however, took action; they shoved the two disputants roughly together and each, instinctively, struck out at the other.

Two furious, snarling wildcats they were now, rolling in a struggling ball of arms and legs about the hard roof, panting, pulling, biffing, wrestling. Filled with delight the rest of the Gang stood aside like gentlemen. It was a fine set-to, neither boy gaining anything, as far as we could see, except bruised knuckles, ripped collars, draggled clothes and streaked faces. It was a long tough fight, ending, finally, in mutual exhaustion, both boys making weak, ineffectual passes or landing blows that no longer hurt. Eventually separating, they regarded each other with solemn, unblinking pelasure, and respecting each other vastly. Each had maintained his right and dignity; each had demonstrated he was no weakling. Quentin, like the other boy, had entirely forgotten the subject of dispute, which was, that, as host, Q had insisted that the other do whatever he wanted; they were firmer friends than before, and had knocked all prejudice and nonsense out of each other.

"My gollies!" Q said. "I bet," he went on, indicating the whole Gang with a sweep of his arm, "one of us could take on two of anybody else!"

We nodded in agreement. Through disagreement, we were really becoming knit together.

"How do you feel?" Q's late opponent asked him, as he rubbed the back of his own head, where it had smacked the roof.

"Refreshed!" Q replied, and immediately went on to quote:

"There was an Old Person of Ewell,
Who chiefly sub-sist-ed on gruel;
But to make it more nice,
He i-n-s-e-r-t-e-d some mice,
Which refreshed that Old Person of Ewell."

CHAPTER IX

The Virtue of a Name

THE deep, serious authorities tell us, in almost incomprehensibly technical terms, that when a boy begins to settle degrees of personal companionship, he is making his first grading of the elements of importance in his world. Certainly, he is then first most closely semiconscious of somehow being related to everybody and everything else. Many of the mysteries of the living world open to him. Sometimes, however, his gestures to this same world seem, to say the least of it, to be darn peculiar.

When Q stood upon his head, or reclined in a chair with his feet comfortably resting where his head should normally be; when he hung suspended by the middle over the branch of a magnolia tree, and surveyed the gardens and the government buildings, upside-down, it was to secure a more interesting experimental point of view, as well as to serve as a preparatory limbering-up exercise.

TR still limbered up, to the extreme satisfaction of all concerned. Quite often his exercise took the form of thirty minutes of Gang-chasing, in the attic. He drew the line, however, where the chests and trunks, stored up under the roof, provided the hazards of mountain-climbing with dizzy heights, unsteady peaks, slippery and uncertain footings. Kenneth Channon, who took especial delight in these adventures, would hurl himself across the spaces with utter abandon, and call his intrepidity "chasm-jumping"—the word chasm being pronounced with ch, as in "chair," of which there were many examples covered with slips.

These slip-covers provided fine places of concealment, from which an arm could suddenly dart out to trip up a careless Gangster, or pinch his ankles, if he sat down.

Even TR came to suspect them, and from experience. Once when he had paused to rest after some strenuous and enthusiastic racing through the attic, he sat down upon one of these relics of bygone White House grandeur. The surprising thing to the President was, that the chair utterly collapsed with him with shrieks of high anguish. There had been no chair in the slip-cover, at all, but simply, two members of the Gang! Edward Stead had stood upright holding the back of the cloth with his hands, in the upper right and left corners; Dick Chew had sat on the floor, with his head between Slim's knees; Dick had both feet, outstretched, to hold the lower front corners, his arms and hands supporting what looked to TR to be the outline of a comfortable chair. The President had not noticed, however, that the chair had been trembling with expectancy, nor that its contours appeared wobbly and unusual.

Slim and Dick howled, under the weight of the President as he sat down and threw himself back in complete relaxation.

"By George!" TR said, the instant he struck the floor. "That shows how unstable are the seats of those who consider themselves the mighty!"

He scrambled to his feet, clutched at the squirming slip-cover, shouting to the rest of the Gang, "A chest! A chest! Open a chest! When these ghostly covers begin to move about, by themselves, it is time to imprison them in chests—for which these we have here have evidently been provided!"

So the cover, with the two boys inside it, was unceremoniously bundled into a chest; the lid was opened again, however, before the Presidential time-limit of sixty seconds had elapsed.

The scale of the White House dimensions—corridor-distances, portico-column heights, and circumferences, balustrade-widths, drops-to-the-ground, tools and garden equipment—was phenomenally out of proportion to our strength, reach, height. This, of course, was providential for all concerned.

Kermit's part-solution for this "largeness," was stilts. His favorite stilt-walk was the upper hall and although he had a gang of his own, which he mounted, and jousted from one end of it to the other, the difference between their age and that of the Gang, removed all possibility of hostility between rival factions.

The White House Gang

"Kermit, the Hermit," Q called him adding, "Of course, he isn't at all, really; only the name is so ap-pree-poe." Though we came upon these stilts, once or twice, we hardly ever used them, because they were not original with us, and were, into the bargain, too hampering for Q's mercurial movements.

These—as may have been gathered—were, usually, of a rushing character, like the short, violent skirmishes, in open warfare, which sweep all before them in a given area, although not always directed toward any defined objective. Among these apparently purposeless sallies was one which carried us, several times, a long distance on our bicycles. Starting from the Force School, we raced eastward down Massachusetts avenue, passed Thomas Circle, went on to, and around the Carnegie Library to New Jersey avenue, where we turned right near the red-brick pile of the Government Printing Office.

So, through a less flourishing part of Washington, where we were unknown, met with no courtesy, and occasionally, heard some amazing language, we continued to the northerly edge of the Capitol grounds, turned left, and, standing upon our pedals, pumped up the remainder of Capitol Hill.

Finally we arrived, quite winded, at the grand staircase of the Library of Congress. Locking our bicycles at the rack, we assumed the air of Senate pages—feeling, perhaps, that, at this end of Pennsylvania avenue, Congress thought it governed the country, and not the White House—and subduing ourselves with conscious effort, entered the bronze doors, and came into the great hall.

"Yes sir," Q said, "this building cost us six billion dollars,"—he meant millions—adding, in order to give the information tangibility, "and fifty-five cents . . ."

We then tramped through many corridors—always a little bewildered by the amazing profusion of painting, sculpture, mosaic, marble, bronze, gilding, carving and other lavish decoration—until we came to a room of the Division of Prints, where the models of the city of Washington were on exhibition. These were made by George Carrell Curtis, stereographical sculptor of Boston, for that famous Burnham Park Commission of 1901, of which McKim, Saint Gaudens and Olmstead were members.

Q was fascinated by these exquisite models, exhibited in glass cases on long, wide tables, showing the city as it was and as it was hoped it might be, when developed. Every building of prominence was shown—accurately done to scale with architectural detail—every street, every plot . . . even the realistic masses of trees, bordering the streets and in the parks.

"Look down on the White House, as if you were a god!" Q said many times, and in many different ways. "How small it looks! Yet we all know how big it really is. You could drop a pebble on it and crush it, together with the p-i-g-m-y President and the State-War-Navy Department, too, by mistake!" Presently he corrected himself, "I mean really, that the great big tre-men-jous God could."

We were all interested in the models, but not with the fixity of enthusiasm which possessed Q. "Some day, of course," he said with finality, "when all this is done,"—pointing to the model of the projected city—"it'll be just nothing, looking down on it; it'll only cost you a month's allowance to hire somebody to fly you all about over town! It would be worth six months', now, wouldn't it?"

Then he crossed over to another corner of the model-case, to get a view from there. "By golly! It takes my breath away!"

Two men and a woman, who had been looking about idly, and were, obviously, rather bored with the prints, came over to the model-cases, and immediately became absorbed in them, forgetting, entirely, the small boy who had directed their attention to them.

Q, well aware of the possibilities for fun in an incognito, joined himself to the group about the table. "What's that place, there?" he asked, pointing to a little, toylike White House.

One of the party turned to Quentin. "You live in Washington?" he asked sharply.

"Yessir," Q admitted. "I was born here—"

"There it is, all over again!" said the man, scornfully. "You don't even know that that's the White House!"

"Nosir," Q said, with his tongue in his cheek, and the index and second finger of both hands crossed. "Is it a museum?"

The Gang, clutching the edges of the show-case, with an extreme effort at self-control, their features expressing the agonizing pain of repressing a joyous shout, managed, somehow, to maintain silence.

"No," Q's informant explained, "it's not a museum; it's where the President lives. Teddy, you know—"

"President Teddy, I do know!" Q cried, and realizing that he would not be able to contain his laughter much longer, ran out into the corridor, where it exploded, rudely shattering the austere silence of the library . . . None of the sight-seers ever understood.

Blind Alley

The Story of a Man Who, With Bland Assurance, Prized His Own Serenity and Security Above the Real Things of Life

"WOMEN," said Charles Adair, "only want a man for one of two things."

The two listening women kept very quiet—his bright eyed mother still staring into the fire, his friend still watching for her last glimpse of sunset from the window.

He went on with some determination. "They only want a man—one, for his money, or, two, as a husband."

Neither of the two women rose in arms against his judgment. He noted that with pleasure in the pause which followed this remark. Every other woman he could think of would have taken up the cudgels on behalf of her sex. These two regarded the thing, as it were, with almost masculine abstraction. And yet, if he knew sincerity, these were two of the most sincere people he knew.

"I think," said the younger woman, turning toward him, away from the window and dropping the heavy curtain almost reluctantly, "I think you are quite right. A woman's interest nearly always is founded on one of those two—unconsciously perhaps, in many cases. Though I should have put marriage first. It's the natural instinct for many to look out for a suitable father for their children. The money hunters have generally been 'worsted' or they've just got perverted ideas on the subject."

"A nasty thought," mused Charles. "No wonder some poor devils lose their faith in women. To be liked or loved for oneself is a rare thing."

"Yet there are exceptions." Mrs. Adair spoke with conviction. "There are cases of love entirely disinterested; almost impersonal, one might say."

"Of course," Charles nodded gloomily. He was thinking of Catherine Hill. "But they are the rare treasures of the earth."

Catherine stretched her pale hands toward the fire. The action brought her dark head lower. Shadows were all around, but even so her lashes veiled her eyes.

"I've always said it. When a man brings himself to marry it is generally because he really loves some woman, perhaps because he cannot help himself. For women there are often hosts of other reasons.

"Preserve me from loving any one thing or person to the exclusion of all others. Fancy not being able to help yourself!" His laugh, which followed this, was more pitying than contemptuous.

"And yet," said Catherine slowly, "many people seem willing to love like that or rather willing to think that they do."

"Oh, think! They don't see straight half of them! That bloke in the 'African Farm' story was right. Once you bite through the fruit of life on to the stone of truth you never get the taste of the hardness of it out of your mouth."

He dared to be serious with them. Vaguely he was convinced that each held him too dearly to laugh.

"I didn't think," said his mother, "when I rocked your cradle that here was a little boy who would find truth fairer than love." She was smiling at him, so he smiled back, unhappily, uneasily as a small child smiles when it feels it is misunderstood.

"Don't," he said. "It sounds just bilge. It's just that it's all been so spoiled and begrimed; that people can't see straight or clearly—that the word love has become so cheap that any one who thinks at all fears to fall in love . . . Let's stop being morbid." He turned to Catherine and put an impetuous hand on her knee. "Too tired to play?"

She shook her head and went over to the sideboard for the chessmen.

In the candlelight, then, Mrs. Adair watched them at their play. The light flickered on their two dark heads; Catherine's a little darker than Charles'—black burnished hair which made so bright a frame for her pale face.

"It was," Mrs. Adair reflected, "the game she ought to play." In thoughtful mood Catherine was charming and her long beautiful hands moved with something very like perfection over the board.

The mother did not resist her desire to interrupt. "Had you not an eye for the picturesque when you let Charles teach you to play chess?"

The two absorbed heads bobbed up. Charles looked at Catherine, waiting for her reply.

It came lightly and with decision. "What do you think? You don't imagine it was for love of him?"

He laughed across at her. "And yet there was a time when I thought I might have to fear you. You had more spirit then. You seemed capable of many things, even capable of making me marry you had you been so minded."

"And you?" she eyed him humorously, serenely. "You like me better now?"

He nodded. "A thousand times more. You have softened and sobered. You even take me seriously. You don't desert me because you think I or my ideas are mad; you accept me now without the old questionings and criticisms. You were always questioning and criticising me as a kid."

"Oh, as a kid." She nodded slowly.

"And yes—" his voice touched on eagerness. "Once, ever so long ago, you cried because you couldn't understand me."

"Cried!" She seemed incredulous. "Did I? What a funny kid, Charles."

"Such a funny kid, Catherine. And I believe I joined you because I didn't understand myself!"

"So that we were both crying over you."

He nodded.

"And no one taking any notice of Catherine."

"No, nobody taking any notice of Catherine."

"Poor Catherine."

She fingered a knight tentatively. "And so you don't fear her any more?"

"Only just sometimes," he admitted reluctantly.

"You see, I know now that I'm safe with you. I mean that if I ever grew to love you it would mean that it had happened in spite of everything. It would be quite a catastrophe. Because I know that you would never try and make me feel differently about you—I mean different from what I wish to feel . . . You know what I think—that love as the world knows it isn't worth a candle. You know I'd face anything that happened to me; p'raps be glad to; but you know I'm not looking for adventure, for romance or glory. I just want to be quiet and walk in security.

"As soon as you're in love you're out of safety. As soon as you love any one enough, you're in their power. I don't want to be in anyone's power. I like you so because you don't try, as so many others will and would do to exert any power over me. I know that you'd never set out consciously to attract me or to behave in any particular way because of me. But when we were kids you did. When you were eighteen or nineteen you nearly made me propose to you."

He spoke the truth. She regarded her clasped hands with perplexity. Then she looked up and smiled at him, confidingly and a little wistfully, like a little girl again.

They had been serious, then rightheartedly, and now because of the grief which in some form or another enriched each of their three lives, they were serious again. It wouldn't do. Somehow, these days, she couldn't bear to be serious.

Her smile stretched to laughter. "You can feel safe with me, Charles."

"I won't be so sure of that," he said, then ruminatively, "What is it—which is the safe age?"

"Thirty-five, the books say. A man who is thirty-five cannot be really influenced by women. But at fifty or so they start being silly again. But you won't, then—you're too nice. No, in six years' time you'll have no need to consider me even momentarily. But it was right, what you said; you can feel safe with me—"

They laughed. This had always been their little joke. Then they went on playing again while the woman in the corner watched them and wondered why she wanted to weep.

The years adorned their friendship, or perhaps it would be truer to say that their friendship adorned the years. They met at least twice a week. They played chess, they visited the theater, they rode and dined together.

They talked—he as naturally as a child; she not quite so naturally nor ever so intimately. Not that he noticed. She only became, as the years slipped by, rather more beautiful, with an outward serenity which would have seemed to some people infinitely touching in one so young. She was quieter and more aloof. And because of this she became more dear to him, these changes in her doubled his security. It seemed sometimes almost as if in her withdrawals she was unconsciously trying to make his path safer.

Once or twice, even, he was forced to wonder whether she was not a "stickler" for safety, herself . . . A different form of safety from that which he desired, of course, but still safety. For, to his certain knowledge, she had refused two or three very good offers of marriage.

He confided once his suspicions to his mother, and a little guiltily, to be sure. Weren't there, he asked, women who feared marriage, love even? Weren't there women who were absolutely terrified of having children?

There were, his mother thought, but she hardly thought that Catherine was one of them.

"Yet it would be rather natural if she were," he said. "After all, she is the pale, cool, delicate type. She seems, too, so utterly self-sufficient."

"But," his mother pointed out, "there was warmth beneath that pallor, fire beneath that coolness; strength enough behind that delicacy—"

Yet the idea remained with him in spite of this. And he suggested it at length to Catherine, herself.

They were celebrating his thirty-fifth birthday when he did so. They always dined together on his birthdays. That, too, had become part of their joke. Each year he was to grow safer. Each year she would rejoice with him because of this.

"I suspect you," he said, "after all these years, I suspect you of sharing my own especial weakness for safe paths, for quietness and peace. Indeed, I am halfway to believing that what I thought you did out of consideration for me, you only do out of consideration for yourself."

She shook her head, smiling, and refused to discuss it. She said instead, "If you are not careful, Charles, I shall try and flirt with you."

"I wish you would," he said gallantly, but with such uneasiness that she laughed outright and drew her fingers away from the hand which she had so lightly touched. For some unaccountable reason he kissed her hand that night when he took leave of her. Just for a moment then she let her other hand rest on his dark, bent head.

"Why, Charles," she said, "you mustn't do that sort of thing. It's against all your code."

"I must, that's just it," he said. "It's the only way I can show my gratitude. I can never tell you how grateful I am to you for letting me go in peace, for walking with me in friendship as you do, for not laughing at me; not deserting me. I sometimes feel—I feel it very much tonight that I have given you nothing in return."

"Oh, that's nonsense," she laughed. "You've given me more than you realize. But you mustn't kiss my hand—that's halfway to making love to me, my dear. See," she went on, trying to draw her hand away, "see how anxious I am to preserve your safety."

But he would not relinquish her hand and kissed it again so that for a few minutes his head was still bent.

"But don't you see," he said, "it's because I am safe, because I feel so utterly safe with you, because in that way I can trust you so utterly that I may kiss your hand?"

His hair was very thick—a heavy enough carpet on which her tears might fall.

They neither of them hunted, but they loved riding and they always rode together. He hated the social side of the hunt and she knew she would hate the gossip and the curiosity which their presence together at a meet would arouse.

She had suffered already. People did not fail to notice that she and Charles Adair had been around together for years. They did not fail to repeat that Charles had peculiar ideas.

Charles shared with her an inveterate relish for the winter's afternoon ride. They loved coming home in the dusk to tea and quantities of buttered toast. They loved the plowed fields sinking into shadows and the sense of adventure which lurked in the thought that they might not get home before dark. They met some of the North Down returning often enough on Mondays, Wednesdays or Saturdays. And often enough, too, Catherine was glad of the dusk which hid her partly from their curious eyes.

They encountered far away from home one afternoon a solitary rider who rather appeared for the moment to have lost his way. He did, however, seem to be in as great a hurry as they to be home. Darkness seemed to be falling fast that night. There was a mist, too, creeping up from the distant sea. Catherine shivered, suddenly very anxious to be home.

Then the rider seemed all at once quite sure of his bearings again—so sure, in fact, that they determined to follow.

"Trust a huntsman to know all the short cuts," said Catherine, cantering a little ahead of Charles.

The rider disappeared at length into an extremely narrow walled-in lane. There were, too, deep ruts on either side so that it was only possible to ride in single file. Charles did not like the look of it.

"But it's worth trying," said Catherine.

"It probably leads on to the main road. Why, he must know it; he seems to be going pretty fast. I'll go on first, Judy's so used to picking her way carefully."

He made his horse walk behind her a little reluctantly. Then for a little while she trotted on ahead.

She went a little faster, anxious as she was to find the end of this little lane. But it was very long. At length in the distance she caught the faint gleam of a white expanse; then she saw how this expanse resolved itself into a high white wall.

They were in a blind alley, not a short cut at all. Then suddenly she was forced to remember the solitary rider who had gone on ahead. She remembered how swiftly and surely he had urged his mount down this little lane and she saw how now he was having the utmost difficulty in getting the horse to turn. Dark and sinister, it was plunging and rearing in terror before that white, blank wall.

Charles was coming up behind her, but even from where he was she knew that he would hardly be able to see, let alone sense, this danger.

She was not frightened, although as she managed to bring her own mount to a standstill, she was quite convinced that the horse at the other end would bolt. What else, after a long and tiring day when it had thought it was on the way home and was now being forced back? Besides, the sight of that white wall gleaming specter fashion through the dusk, seemed to have sent the horse into a frenzy of terror.

Charles heard the thunder of hoofs. But he saw Catherine with her mount turned broadside almost, standing right in front of him. He could not see the blank wall at the end of the alley, so he could not understand at all what was happening.

The next thing he knew was that Catherine was flung low between those menacing walls, beneath those plunging, excited hoofs.

She regained consciousness once. She gazed her eyes, serious and pain ridden to his.

"Did they bring me home on a gate?" she asked. He nodded, quite unable to speak.

"Nice, she murmured thoughtfully. "Nice to be brought home on a gate. I've always thought so. So near to earth and everything—so right."

"If only I'd known what was happening to you," he said.

"Never mind. For you couldn't have known that," she whispered. And suddenly he knew that she was not thinking of the accident, at all.

Once just before she died, she smiled ruefully. She reached out a weak hand and touched his head which was bent so that she could not see his tears.

"You'll be quite safe now. You can go in peace now," she said. And again he knew that it wasn't the accident which prompted this remark. It was their old joke she was thinking of.

"Don't cry," she said, "for think, you'll never have to worry about me any more. You can walk in utter safety now."

He bent his lips to her hand; for the first time in his life keeping his misery from her ears.

Only death had been great enough to prove her dearness; he saw his life as a series of blind alleys with the white wall of disaster at their ending. He had lost her, but it was in the loving not in the losing that his ruin lay. Not because he had lost his listener, his preserver, his friend—not because of these would safety slip through his fingers; but because of all she had never been. It was the thought of the lover behind the friend, the fire and warmth beneath her cool detachment, the spirit tireless and unbroken, the beauty brought low before fulfillment . . . these were to be his torment. It was for all she had never been that he would mourn and for all that she could have been that he would go on mourning.

"Dear Christ, save me," he cried in sudden horror. For just as her life had been dedicated to his safety, so would her death rob him of peace for evermore.

The "Late" Mrs. Bangs

"As usual, girls, she's late."

"Yes," responded another of the waiting trio, "When she arrives she'll have a thousand excuses and a lovely grouch."

"Well, as this is to be contract bridge, let's start lunch . . . that may bring the 'Late' Mrs. Bangs."

Sure enough! Lunch was scarcely served when Mrs. Bangs arrived, all smiles and apologies.

The girls looked at her in amazement. Never had she appeared so blithe and debonair, so charmingly vivacious.

Mrs. Bangs enjoyed their expressions and hastened to explain.

"Since our last meeting, girls, I have made a wonderful discovery. For some time my feet have just about wrecked my social life. I mentioned this to a neighbor and she took me to Jesberg's Walk-Over Shop."

"The interested salesman explained how I could achieve foot health by wearing Walk-Over Main Spring Arch Shoes. Naturally, I thought of grandma's shoes. But, look at these beauties I bought for afternoon wear, and you should see the other darling pair for sports and knock-about."

"And comfortable! I walked all the way from home this afternoon. That's why I'm late. Next time I'll start earlier and be on time."

"I Never Licked My Kids Unless I Didn't Have Time to Argue."

"Younguns are forever askin' why."

"PA'S COUSIN EDGAR come over last night to set a spell an' got to shootin' off his mouth about modern younguns goin' to the dogs because they don't get licked enough.

"'Spare the rod,' says he, 'an' spoil the child. The younger generation is goin' to hell because parents neglect the duty o' beatin' 'em.'

"I hear a lot o' folks talk like that, an' all of 'em is folks that got beat plenty when they was young an' didn't sprout no wings on account of it.

"Parents don't beat their younguns like they used to, but it ain't because they're neglectin' a duty. Men don't beat their wives like they used to, an' folks don't beat their dumb servants.

"It's just because the world is gettin' more civilized an' got ashamed o' beatin' the weak an' little an' actin the bully.

"The only reason parents lick a child is because usin' a stick don't take as much sense or time as it takes to explain things.

"You got to have brains an' spend a lot o' time to show a child book learnin' is necessary, an' make him want it, so parents that's dumb or lazy just grab a stick an' make the poor brat want education because it will keep him from gettin' a lickin'.

"That's the quick an' easy way o' winnin arguments. Instead o' showin' children why they ought to be good, fetch 'em a lick on the ear. That learns 'em to be good so's to avoid a lickin', an' they go through life thinkin' that's the only reason for not bein' ornery.

"Younguns are forever askin' why, an' most of 'em has sense enough to see the reason in a thing if their parents has sense enough to explain. That's the decent way to raise 'em.

"In my time a youngun that asked why he must do so-an'-so was told because he would get the everlastin' fire knocked out of him if he didn't. An' he done it or he got it.

"But that way o' raisin' 'em didn't produce no generation o' saints. Most o' the middle-aged folks I know was beat frequent an' ample when they was little chaps, an' now look at 'em. The ones that got the least beatin' turned out the best because they had the best grade o' parents to set 'em a good example.

"That's what modern younguns need. They grow up to match the times they live in.

"A pup soon learns to head sheep if it sees older dogs a-doin' it, an' no amount o' beatin' will keep one from bein' a sheep-killer if the old dogs show it how."

WITH the POETS

A California Mission

How many feet have trod the way that goes
Up these dim aisles, beneath the pepper trees!
The air is pregnant with old mysteries
Within the fastness of the garden close,
Where fall the fading petals of the rose.
Here men have passed of low and high degrees,
Mendicants, horsemen, lords with kingly fees,
Knights of old Spain and many of its foes.

Yet each has known in some brief hour long spent
The glamorous spell that haunts these crumbling stones,
The voice of bell that bade the wanderer rest
And with his meager blessings be content;
Even as now a message it intones
Alike to penitent and lingering guest.

MABEL W. PHILLIPS.

This Is My Fear

The wind has gathered up a world of woe
And brought this heavy trouble to the trees—
And this is what we hear beyond the glow
Of evening lamplight, on such nights as these;
So thin a thing as window glass divides
This inner peace of ours from Something there . . .
Whose black shape throngs the darkness where it rides,
An evil omen on the innocent air.

Perhaps our door was never tall enough
For such a one to stoop and enter in,
Perhaps, because we kept a little love
But I can have no faith in what is thin
As window glass, or roof, or door, or wall,
Or love, that is most pitiful of all.

His Majesty the Fly

While I sat in contemplation
Of the wonders of creation—
I saw a fly.
As I reached out for the swatter
To exterminate the dotter,
At least to try—
He lit o'er me on the ceiling
Where the calcimine was peeling,
Away up high.
Then he started gently kicking
While the particles came flicking
Down—in my eye,
And while salty tears were running
I still marveled at his cunning
And strategy.
He was victor undisputed—
I surrendered and saluted—
His Majesty.

above her teacup narrowed, and I knew I'd said too much. "He had so many friends."

Her implication was plain and Lucy flared at it.

"Yes," she said, "because I want you to let me go home by myself, Tom."

They stood in that empty little place holding each other's hands, unable to talk. The million tiny lights of Paris lay below them in a transparent nether firmament of gray. A line of light stretched along the east.

"You don't seem tight now, Tom," she said. There was nothing really to say.

"No," he agreed.

"You haven't been all evening, have you? Why not?"

"Because I poured all the stuff in the ice bucket when you were not looking, Lucy."

After a pause she said, "It's a wonder the ice bucket didn't overflow. So did I. Oh, please let me go now, Tom."

A weak, spreading daylight, minutes later, found them still clinging together, whispering frantically things which made no sense before the descending blade of separation, with a swift blow, should make their breath, their eyes, their faces into nothing but memories. The horn of the waiting taxicab tooted impatiently.

So Tom and Lucy played out their parts while I went to dinner with the Scovilles and with the key to certain problems in my pocket. Twice in my cab I took out my cable and read it over to make sure. "Scoville fortune reported dissipated executors bad investment particularly industrial market collapse two years ago March."

And the Scovilles, the mighty Scovilles, were broke, so broke they would even take Tom Crosby for the sake of what they thought he had. I waited until coffee before I exploded my bomb.

"It's too bad about the Crosby Company just at this time, isn't it?" I asked innocently.

Mrs. Scoville sat up straight. "Have they passed a dividend? I thought they never—"

"Worse than that," I said. "The company has gone into receivership. I happen to be one of its directors. It's rough on Tom."

It was funny to watch her. She sat very still and paled as much as her rouge would let her.

"Well," she said finally, "what more could you expect? He's been running around Paris with some girl all this time until poor Nathalie had to break the engagement. Didn't you, dear? These young men of today—"

Nathalie had sat stony-eyed and indifferent through the whole conversation. I admired her as always. Later that night when I left them at the Claridge, she drew me aside.

"I know you're glad," she said. "It's a blow to mother, but—I'm glad too. I think they had a better chance for happiness than almost any of us."

[Copyright, 1929, by Stephens, Morehouse Avery.] (College Humor.)

"I suppose you came to talk about the business, Tom," I said, tossing him one of the cables I had just received.

He glanced at it without interest and villas will only have him the rest of their lives and so, of course, they couldn't spare him for more than one day. Could they? Oh, I wish the whole pack of you often as the only real tragedy of love.

So there was no more to say. It was none of my business anyway. I tried to change the subject by asking Lucy about from Croydon over the Channel to Le Bourget next day I kept thinking of all the little things which had worked together to form the inquiry which I had expressed in that cable. There was Mrs. Scoville's pointless emphasis on the saving of Tom Crosby's supposed fortune. "These young men with fortunes, you know," was the way she had put it. There was Lucy's petulant complaint about the lioness's split-penny buying. It was all very queer and I could barely wait to get to the D'Iena for the answer.

No answer had arrived, however. For a few minutes I was too disappointed to pay attention to the two messages which the concierge did find in my box. One of them was an invitation to dine that evening with the Scovilles at Les Ambassadeurs. The other, penciled vaguely on a hotel envelope, was from Lucy. It said: "Please come at once, George. I still need a little more help." Well, with a show of speed I might do both. It was only 6:30.

I was at Lucy's pension in fifteen minutes, and she sent down word for me to come straight up but not to expect to find anything enticing in the way of chaises longues and peacock screens.

No, there was nothing of that sort. Lucy's little chamber was rather sweet but hardly luxurious and Lucy herself in a blue dressing robe was the only thing of color in it. Three simple dinner dresses lay spread out on the bed and she said at once, "I just wanted you to tell me which of these to wear, George. Sit down and have a cigarette."

"Do you mean to tell me," I was almost angry, "you dragged me all the way to Passy just to decide your costume for the evening?"

"Of course, darling," Lucy smiled. But then she bit her lip and her chin lost its firmness for an instant. "You see, George, it's rather important. I'm going on a wild party with Tom Crosby and it's very special. It's our last."

She had turned her back and I waited until she wanted to look at me again. "What do you mean, Lucy?"

"Well, tomorrow's Thursday, isn't it? He's going to her. Don't you understand? He's going to his fiancee. He promised me he would."

"You mean you made him, Lucy?"

"Yes," she said, "but he made me promise him tonight in exchange. So we could end up as we began, you see. And that is why it is important about the dress—because he's apt to remember me in it, isn't he, George? Don't people always remember you the way they saw you last?"

They dined at the Maisonette-Russe, where the black and white of evening dress and the smooth contours of shoulders against deep, rich shades of red made a picture of civilization in an atmosphere of quiet and subdued light. They had cocktails and then Burgundy with a dinner notable for fresh caviar and caneton.

"Is it too quiet for you here, Lucy?" asked Tom. "A real jazz band would knock down the walls."

Perhaps it would have. Even the throbbing low tones of Russian folk song which came at times from the table of entertainers seemed to level the walls out flat, into wide, dark, limitless spaces seen through brooding eyes. Occasionally a gypsy woman sang in a wild, harsh, fascinating wail, as though there were no audience and no echoing curtain nearer than the stars.

"I like it," said Lucy. "Do you?" She watched him from the corner of her eye, his elbow on the table, his chin in his hand, wondering perhaps. "I mean," she added, "it's all right. It hasn't much pep."

The level of red wine reached the bottom of their bottle and champagne took its place in the ice bucket. Both of them were gay now, because it was midnight already and there wasn't much time.

It was easier at Zelli's. They could dance there. Lucy was glad, when a spotlight played upon her, that she had chosen her white and silver. Tom drank a toast to her, and some other people begged them to join their party. The lights were very bright now, cutting the film of cigarette smoke; faces became expressionless.

"Let's go," said Lucy. "It's—I can't stand it, Tom."

"What?" he asked.

"Oh, I mean here," she said quickly. "What did you think? Let's go to Florence's. That's always best."

Two adjoining rooms, no larger than New York apartment living rooms, a ten-by-twelve dance floor, a black-face jazz orchestra with drums, trombone, saxophone, husky black boys recruited from Harlem and dressed in summer jackets shouting some white man's raucous ballad at the top of their strained voices.

Hour after hour went by, two, three, four o'clock, if anybody cared to notice, a procession of champagne bottles, figures leaning too far forward over their tables, the noble husband of a film actress dancing with a napkin tied about his waist, a scarecrow of a woman whom somebody said was Hemingway's famous Brett, clamor and noise.

"Lucy, you're tight. Your hair is all crazy."

"Who cares?" said Lucy. "Aren't we all tight? Did you kiss me while we were dancing, Tom?"

"I think so. We ought to make sure. The place is thinning out."

They danced again and made sure, danced easily and smoothly, because they had the entire floor.

"We're the last ones here, Lucy."

At their table Tom poured full glasses. "Well, it's all over then, Lucy. Pick up your glass, like a good fellow. If I tried to say anything, I'd bawl. Come on, little soldier. Every drop for our last."

Lucy touched his glass with hers but she didn't drink. The thin stem slipped from her fingers and the full glass crashed to the floor, a broad, wet splotch full of shining bits of broken glass.

Tom Crosby stared at her a moment. "Did you do that on purpose, Lucy?" Then his own glass, hurled as though it were a baseball and trailing a stream of sparkling, golden drops, splintered to pieces aginst the opposite wall. "Yes," he said, "that tells the story better."

There was no protest. What were a couple of broken glasses to Florence's?

By gesture and six words of Princeton French Tom Crosby told the taxicab driver to find the highest hill in Paris, and soon the puffing, grinding little five-horsepower motor was dragging them up through the deserted streets and dark, forbidding alleys of the Butte de Montmarte. They came to a small open square finally and Tom shouted, "Ici! Time is the place where we say good-by, Lucy. Come on. Let's get out. She'll wait."

"Yes," she said, "because I want you to let me go home by myself, Tom."

They stood in that empty little place holding each other's hands, unable to talk. The million tiny lights of Paris lay below them in a transparent nether firmament of gray. A line of light stretched along the east.

"You don't seem tight now, Tom," she said. There was nothing really to say.

was jealous on the pier and she reached her arm around my neck and said she didn't want to go. 'I'm only going, she said, 'so that you'll have one less fellow to drink with, Tom.' I was tight at the time but not so tight I couldn't remember."

It was hard to keep my mind on the main point when he told me that. I could have wept. "Then you fell in love with Nathalie." I was abrupt as possible.

"There is no excuse for me," said Tom. I thought I did. The Scovilles took me up when everybody else in town turned me down as a hopeless drunk, although I hadn't been that way for months. My pride came into it. I could show them all that I was not such a down and outer that I couldn't marry the girl they were all after, the famous Nathalie Scoville. Of course there was something missing between us always—"

"Yes?" I wanted to hear the whole thing now.

"It didn't seem to worry Nathalie though. Perhaps the reason it worried me was that I knew what the matter was. It was Lucy. Being with Nathalie only made me think of Lucy and remember how she'd trekked with me through all that muck, watching out for me as well as she could. I knew she had more stuff in her, more looks, more personality, more character than Nathalie ever would have, more everything but money. She'd been a grand little soldier and I'd left her in a shell hole. Finally I tried to break the engagement, and that's where Nathalie's mother came in. They wouldn't even consider a postponement. Of course I could have refused point blank. I wasn't brave enough, or cad enough, whichever way you care to look at it, for that. But when they came to Paris, I couldn't stand it and sailed the next day on a faster boat. I had to see Lucy before I went through with it.

"Well, you saw her and got drunk with her again," I said brutally. "Wasn't that enough? You admit she turned you down. Why?"

Tom stood up to go, red with anger. "I've made a mistake," he said, coldly. "I thought you liked Lucy. The truth is, she sent me here tonight because, she said, you could tell me better than she could why—she turned me down."

"Oh, I like Lucy." I tried to be casual. "She won't last long but she's amusing while she lasts. There's no use being sentimental about that kind of hard-shelled little June bug, Tom." I could have bitten my tongue off.

Tom Crosby paused at the door. He was furious, as furious as, down in my heart, I had hoped perhaps that he would be, furious enough to make me skeptical of the clear common sense of my advice to them both.

"You're a damned smug lot, you respectable people," he said.

The bang of the door which Tom had slammed behind him rang in my ears for hours.

As near as I could tell, Nathalie Scoville was as much deserving of sympathy as any of them. What was she going to get out of it? That kept me awake for another hour. What were the Scovilles going to get out of it? I am suspicious of dowagers with too acquiescent daughters.

At three o'clock still sleepless, I lost patience; for after all, who were these people to me? Why should I care if young Crosby married Lucy Sackett and went to blazes? I wasn't his father, or his uncle or his brother, or hers either, and I had plenty of affairs of my own waiting for me in London. The next morning I caught the Imperial Airways plane at Le Bourget and left Paris and other people's troubles behind me in a haze of lavender and gold which was too beautiful to admit of their existence.

I had friends in London and might have enjoyed it. But somehow I didn't. The Embassy Club failed to amuse me and the greyhound races in pursuit of a tin rabbit struck me as absurd. The problem of which of half a dozen underfed dogs was the fastest was little to me compared with the engrossing question of what the Scovilles were going to get out of it, although the two were equally none of my business.

The second question, nevertheless, worried me finally into dispatching an urgent cable to a very well-informed acquaintance with offices in Wall street, New York, giving my Paris address for return. I was going back to Paris. I'd made up my mind to that. And all the while that big plane drummed its way

What Does He See in Her?

What does he see in her?

Of course, the expected happened.

There came a time when Tom, as if to announce to the world he was no more than human, began to be seen about, more than was discreet, in the company of the golden grass-widow. Inevitably, there was talk. One or two of his friends even ventured to remonstrate. But Tom was involved. Tom was smitten. Everyone, with the exception of Evelyn, saw that. Plain as the nose on your face. Tongues wagged.

Tragic! Even with all his security, a scandal hurts a man like Cass. Has always seemed devoted to Evelyn. Well, serves her right, letting herself remain drab. Can't expect to hold a dynamo like Tom Cass. Poor Evelyn. Wonderful woman. Such a sense of humor, but dumb!

Never a word out of Evelyn. Never a lapse in her carrying on of the gigantic household, her duties to her children, to her social position, to her husband.

Funny thing, said Ada, aloud to her mirror one night. I've a feeling she is laughing at me. Fool!

There came the crisis. Ada lost. A sickened, revolted Tom suddenly jerked to his senses, staggering from her presence with a sense of finality and self-loathing.

Strange, but Tom too, had the sense as he lay with his head in Evelyn's lap and his arms flung about her knees, that she was laughing at him.

"No, darling, I am not laughing. It's just that I am so much wiser than you are, sweetheart. I've been watching it happen, praying for how it would end—and somehow, knowing my bad boy to be just the youngest member of this family, feeling so sure . . . so sure . . . I just had to see the funny side . . . or go under."

THE CYNICAL BARRAGE

By Alma Whitaker

WE ARE having quite a dose of these cynical plays, of which "Philadelphia," played here some weeks ago, was a horrible example. "Chicago" was bad enough, but at least it was played in burlesque vein, and even "The Front Page" was extreme enough not to be taken too seriously.

But in "Philadelphia" . . . well, that city should have a good case for libel. It was played straight in theatrical parlance, not satirically, not burlesque. And there wasn't a single honest character in it. In the first act we pin our faith to the young lawyer, partner of the villain, so that it positively turns one's stomach to find him transformed into a slicker thief than the villain in the last act. Even the "nice" girl of the play lies glibly to her father and shocks us with her facile trickery. And father, who is Supreme Court judge of the State, finally stands forth as the master-gangster of the underworld.

From beginning to end we were deliberately schooled to believe that graft, chicanery, ruthless fraud, greed, ruled supreme. References to fine passages in the Constitution anent honesty and integrity were recited sarcastically. And every last one of us left that theater feeling soiled and degraded. Not one iota of faith was left to us. Nor was there the slightest moral anywhere, for all the crooks escaped comfortably in the end, and villainy remained triumphant.

Now I maintain that that is a ghastly play for anyone to make money out of. I hope it didn't pay. "Rope's End," a play on the Leopold-Lobe murder lines, at least punished the villains in the last act, but the public didn't support that one so well, either.

One mighty reason for the success of the films, and especially the old silents, was that virtue was always triumphant in the end. True, the producers went to blah ends to obtain this denouement in many cases, but that was lack of skill in story-writing rather than the public's love of "hokum." Even now, although some of the films permit the hero and heroine to have a little blemish, it has been found essential that an imperfect hero or heroine shall reform and see the error of their ways in the end or get duly punished for their sins.

And this, I maintain, is a human need. We must have faith in ultimate righteousness and justice. We simply cannot bear to believe that wickedness prevails. Besides, in our hearts, we know it doesn't. Day after day the daily papers print righteous exposures of guilt, even in the highest places. It is appalling enough that such should have been guilty, but quite unbearable that they should not be brought to book.

Moreover, we have been treated to altogether too much shameful villainy in high places of late in real life. Too many fortunate successful people in authority have failed us utterly. To go to see this sort of thing for "entertainment" and be shown that wickedness triumphs is unendurable.

During the war and immediately after, we couldn't bear war plays . . . the thing was too near to us. All the shows at that time had to be gay, light, amusing and never, never cynical. No producer could have made money out of "What Price Glory?" or "The Big Parade" or any of the other successes . . . certainly not "Journey's End" or "All Quiet on the Western Front" in those days. Our emotions were too taut, our suffering too real. They had to wait till the hurt was at least almost healed. As it is, those persons who suffered the most acutely during the war cannot see a war play to this day.

It's the same with this crook and graft stuff. We are too close to it. Too many people have suffered directly or indirectly through the machinations of false officers of cities and States, of corporations. The only possible satisfaction we can get from a play about them is to see them sumptuously defeated and righteousness ultimately triumphant. Just as, in this vogue for the murder mysteries, they must give us a solution in the end and punish the murderer . . . there have been too many murderers uncaught and unpunished in real life.

Nothing can be more unfortunate at this time, especially to the young people of our country, than to blast their faith in ultimate righteousness. To show our leading lawyers, bankers, judges, detectives policemen, all a bunch of crooks, dealing out shameful injustice, and getting rich thereby is a good way to arouse anarchy. In this "Philadelphia" we find the District Attorney, a Supreme Court judge, a coroner, a city investigator, and the criminal lawyers all conspiring to defeat justice, taking bribes, and standing willing to see any innocent person, if any, victimized.

Where are the people who can wax gloriously patriotic toward their country if they believe that these indeed, are the conditions they are up against? Which of them is going to feel prayerfully heroic and willing to take any glorious risk of personal life and property, if they once believe the contry is sodden with crook officials in power? Our young people are quite cynical enough now . . . and often prattle that "no man can be honest in public office" . . . which is a quite appalling attitude for us to allow them to accept.

Far more important is it that we prove to them that it isn't true. And in the main it isn't. It is still true that all public business and trading is based upon the assumption that people are inherently honest. Personal honesty and good character are still the best assets anyone can have . . . as our former District Attorney, Asa Keyes, and half a dozen other false officials in the penitentiary will doubtless testify. The whole country's big business is based on credit . . . founded on the inherent integrity of the majority of the people.

Those huge chain drug stores that let the customers pay as they go out, after they have secured their purchases, report that it is a remarkable month when they lose a nickel through this trust in the people.

This cynicism that has come upon us of late is poisonous. A young healthy prosperous country like ours has no right to be cynical. And things have come to a pretty pass when we go to a play for "entertainment" to see just how rotten conditions can be But the interesting and hopeful point is that we don't support these plays for long, they make little if any money . . . more often they lose. The whole remarkable success of "Journey's End," playing in all parts of the world, is based upon the precious innate goodness of men under hideous trial . . . just as that ill-named picture "Men Without Women" stirs our souls with its portrayal of glorious courage and loyalty in a motley assortment of men. And, thank God, they ring true. We, the audience, rise to heights beyond ourselves because of them. For weeks the memory lurks, so that we would be ashamed to commit any paltry deed.

Plays and pictures are tremendously important. They educate millions of people who have no other education. A country can be judged by its taste in the shows it patronizes. And America still likes good clean plays in which righteousness triumphs in the end . . . as witness the success of the Duffy houses all up and down the Coast.

All of our most successful producers of both plays and pictures have long since learned this lesson to good purpose. Just as the more successful publishers have learned it regarding books and magazines. The United States still wants to believe in righteousness, and the defeat of villainy.

Death Unmasks Hunchback

All his life George Bernstein of Palma Majorica, in the Balearic Isles, was believed to be a hunchback. When he died it was discovered that his deformity had been assumed. In his artificial hump he carried more than $9000 in notes and valuables said to be worth nearly $40,000. Living like a miser and eating little but bread and marmalade, he died of starvation, the authorities state.

The Sacred Eyrie

(Of Sweitzerland Camp)

Like eagle's nest perched high on lonely peak,
Far up from haunts of men, and din of strife,
Rests "Sacred Eyrie," Chapel of the Cliff.

This little church's not matched in all the world;
Viewed from the long trail, it looks a tower,
A castle, built to guard this mountain pass.

Not so; it is a dream in stone of one
Who loves his God; a sacred dream come true;
A gem; a cameo on mountain's breast.

Its walls were built to guard the Word of Life;
Its graceful arches stretch like gathering wings
To hold in peace and love, all worshipers.

From 'neath its cross, float out each Sabbath day,
O'er gorge, and slope, and rugged cliff, such chimes!
So sweet! that all the scene's a paradise.

Here fold the wings of God; He feeds His brood
Christ's broken body, and stoning blood;
Thence bears them forth on everlasting wings.

'Tis "Sacred Eyrie," Chapel of the Cliff,
This cross-crowned, little church in Sweitzerland;
Most charming little church in all the land!

Thus is the place where we say good-by, Lucy. Come on. Let's get out. He'll wait."

"Yes," she said, "because I want you to let me go home by myself, Tom."

They stood in that empty little place holding each other's hands, unable to talk. The million tiny lights of Paris lay below them in a transparent nether firmament of gray. A line of light from the level of red wine reached the bottom of their bottle and champagne above her teacup narrowed, and I knew I'd said too much. "He had so many friends."

Her implication was plain and Lucy sat up, straight and taut. She was, to my knowledge, the verbal match of any lioness in the world. I feared the worst. "Yes," she said, "I used to take him home nights when he'd forgotten where he lived."

Nathalie smiled. Only Nathalie's lips ever smiled, but she had a sense of propriety. I began to like Nathalie better all the time.

"Don't be silly, mother," she said. "You know Lucy was one of Tom's intimates."

But the lioness refused to retreat. "At any rate," she said, "I am sure you were not one of those intimates of his who did so much to ruin his life."

"I probably was," said Lucy. "But he didn't do any of us much good either, Mrs. Scoville. Tom's Scotch was just as poisonous as anyone else's."

I turned over my glass of porto, a distraction which, if not original, was, nevertheless effective. Even Nathalie gave me a glance of thanks. On the way to our taxicab she lingered behind and took my arm. "Would you deliver a message for me, Mr. Lockwood? Tell Tom that I would not mind his secret presence in Paris so much if he did not make it so conspicuous."

Eventually I recovered my breath. So Nathalie knew. Well, she was a shrewd young lady. The puzzle to me was what a shrewd and attractive young lady with plenty of money of her own could want with Tom Crosby. For the moment I was convinced she loved him.

We left the Scovilles at the Claridge. Lucy had been so gay and pleasant coming in from the Bois that, after giving the Rue Jules Janin number of her pension as our destination, I sat back in the cab prepared to hear an amusing version of Tom Crosby's appearing in Paris and preferring the company of his blithe little former drinking companion to that of his reformer fiancee.

I heard something quite different. "I'm not going to Passy, Mr. George Lockwood," said Lucy. My surprised glance found her flushed and her eyes full of an anger which she had evidently saved up until we were alone. "Suppose you take me to Harry's New York Bar instead. That's where I belong." Then it came out with a rush. "You must have been afraid, George, that your beloved Scovilles wouldn't find out their lamb was here. Or were you afraid another day of my dangerous company might corrupt him all over again? The Scovilles will only have him the rest of their lives and so, of course, they couldn't spare him for more than one day. Could they? Oh, I wish the whole pack of you would go away and let me alone. I got out of the way and came to Paris by myself. What did you all have to follow me for? Well, they can have Tom Crosby for all I care. I don't want him. I hope I may never set eyes upon him again. Tom Crosby can go—"

"Lucy!" I stopped her, for she was near to tears. "You don't even mean what you're saying. You know very well that an hour of your happiness is more valuable to me than years of it for all the Scovilles in the world. The thing is, you can't get an hour of happiness with Tom. They would all be hours of torment now. You and Tom ruin each other. You've proved that by four years in New York and by one night in Paris. You two are done. He's found his salvation now and all you can do is find another of your own. And as for my giving his presence away to the Scoville's, Nathalie knew it before I'd said a word."

"She wouldn't have," said Lucy. "She'd told me she was going to Les Ambassadeurs with some people from Philadelphia. I took him there. She saw Tom across the dance floor. Why didn't she come and get him? It would be so much easier—for me. Nathalie is all right, I guess."

"All right or not," I said, "she is the one who, according to report, has done for Tom what you and I and all his other friends never did. We didn't even try."

"At least," said Lucy, pausing to brush the anger from her face and smiling a smile too old for twenty-two, a kind of man's smile when he sees his last margin go, or when the army surgeon tells him he is done for. "At least," she repeated, "we didn't succeed. So don't worry about my not playing the game. George, although you doubtless realize that Tom is—all there is, the whole show for me. Will you please take me to Harry's New York Bar now?"

Before we arrived there Lucy weakened. Perhaps she expected me to say that love was the only thing which mattered and that she ought to run off and marry Tom if she could. But love is not the only thing which matters and I knew them both too well not to foresee their dismal end together. They would fail first; then she would lose respect; then bitterness, and Tom in self-defense would be bitter too. Or else, indifference which Maugham, I think, puts down so often as the only real tragedy of love.

So there was no more to say. It was none of my business anyway. I tried to change the subject by asking Lucy about business. "You ought to do well if you get commissions on many Paris trousseaux."

"Not if they are like the Scoville trousseau," she said. Lucy tried to match my mood. "That old girl can split a franc over a pair of stockings with any Frenchman in the world. She expects them to sell her Chanels at Betty Wales prices just because she's Mrs. B. Kingsley Scoville. But the rich are like that, even you, George. Is that how to get rich?"

Lucy's humor would probably save her some day. But she could not hold it and just before she left she said: "If I can't do it alone, you will help me, won't you, George. He's so—strong."

I felt very low that evening and about eleven surrendered to it and went home to my hotel, the D'Iena, not very far from the Etoile. There were some cables waiting for me there and one of them depressed me even more. I swore at the whole crowd of Crosbys and Scovilles and Sacketts and got into bed with my favorite Tauchnitz edition of Frances Elliot's "Old Court Life in France." It opened upon the story of Louise de Lafayette.

So I was still wakeful when at something after one the house phone buzzed and the night concierge said there was a gentleman to see me."

"Send the gentleman up," I said. I felt pretty sure who he was.

The concierge's voice dropped. "Pardon, m'sieur, the gentleman seems to be, as you would say, intoxicant perhaps."

"Send the gentleman up nevertheless," I said. "If he can't walk, carry him."

Of course he was not "intoxicant" in the least, although he had undoubtedly had a drink. I often wondered how much of Tom Crosby's reputation arose from his unfortunate aspect of inebriety coincident with his first sip—that vagrant look of hair. He sat down on the foot of my bed.

"Surprised to see me, George?"

"Not a bit," I said. "You haven't exactly been in hiding since you've been here, even if you should have been." I had no sympathy with his having come to Paris just to give Lucy another pang before he married, but it was difficult to be angry with Tom just then. Somehow, in spite of the hard, lean health to which his improved habits had restored him, he seemed in a way tired and defeated. One of his hands lay graphically relaxed and empty on the counterpane.

"I suppose you came to talk about the business, Tom," I said, tossing him one of the cables I had just received.

He glanced at it without interest and then passed it back to me. "Can't help it, George. I did my best for the firm the last two years but it was too late. They had no confidence in me and this explains why the directors wanted me to take a vacation. As one of them, you will have to forget friendship and do whatever you think best for everybody. It may even be best for me. I came here, however, to talk about something much more important than the fate of Crosby and Company."

"Such as—"

"Such as what happens to—Lucy."

"Lucy!" I said. "You mean Lucy Sackett?" For I knew now what she meant by my having to help her. "What have you got to do with her? I thought you were going to carry Nathalie Scoville."

"Oh, I am—I am," he muttered impatiently. "I'll marry anybody who is foolish enough to want me—as long as Lucy doesn't."

"What!" I was genuinely astonished that what I had assumed to be a sort of tender regret or hurt of conscience over Lucy on Tom's part, a feeling for which I had liked him the better, had burned till its proportions were very near a flame of love. It was impossible. It would ruin them. I knew it and Lucy knew it and now she had sent him to me. Well, I would do my best.

"Do you mean to tell me, Tom, that you'd throw away all you have won back, everything you may yet accomplish, a decent, solid, successful life with a girl who amounts to something and who cared enough about you practically to save your ungrateful life—all for the sake of a confirmed little bum like Lucy Sackett? You'd go back on the night clubs and the booze in two weeks. Didn't you start it the moment you met her again? You can't do anything for Lucy. She's a goner."

He held up his hand to stop me. "Well, maybe she is," he said. "But why should she be a goner while I save myself by hanging on to some other girl's skirts? I took Lucy Sackett on her first wild party, George." Tom was too much in earnest just then for me to be able to head him off. "I'll admit I didn't love her," he went on, "or anybody or anything but alcohol those years. But the day I quit the stuff—not that I became a never-touch-a-dropper—but the day I quit was the day Lucy sailed for Paris. She was sitting on her trunk in the bag-

How Hollywood Was Named

By Lucile Erskine

WHEN Eugene Rafael Plummer, hale though 76 years of age, mingles with the cosmopolitan crowd of Hollywood Boulevard, he must murmur to himself: "I have rubbed Aladdin's lamp and this is the new Bagdad!" For modern business buildings tower above him and Paris, Monte Carlo and Fifth avenue are mirrored in shop and cafe.

Yet this same senor was driving in a phaeton with Horace H. Wilcox along this same Hollywood Boulevard on a history-making afternoon in 1882. It was like summer—a California December. The boulevard zigzagged then, just a dusty road, flanked by orange and lemon groves. Sagebrush and cacti stood where now the famous and otherwise of Hollywood take the air.

On this lively street on these afternoons, the old Californian is apt to see an actor walk past him with hat in hand and head bare. Because he's out of a job, he hopes some director in the sidewalk throng will notice the photographic quality of his sleek black hair. But on that other eventful afternoon, there passed Wilcox and the then-young Californian only an ox cart bearing a single Mexican family, with the mocking bird doing his glorious bit, as they crawled with a processional gait toward some Yuletide fiesta.

Plummer had found himself in the rather unusual phaeton instead of on the back of a horse, because the man beside him was lame. Wilcox, originally from Kansas, was then in the real estate business in the insignificant town of Los Angeles, with its population of only 25,000. He had driven out that afternoon and picked up the young senor on his ranch to use him as an interpreter. For the language of all land transactions, even as late as that day, was Spanish, and a momentous one was brewing. An insignificant village lay behind them, now one of the principal arteries of the cinema city.

Eugene Rafael Plummer

Wilcox had just come into possession of what he and Plummer called Cahuenga Valley and we call Hollywood. A gambler named Ellsworth had owned it, but one feverish night when his cash gave out, so the story goes, he continued buying chips with his land. Dawn found him with a face as gray as its own. The winner sold his night's turn at the wheel to the real estate man from the Middle West for $1.25 an acre.

The new owner was now on his way to receive the deed, as little realizing that he had made one of the world's historic bargains as did the early Dutch settlers on the day they paid $24 to the Indians for Manhattan.

The two men being comparative strangers had not much to say to each other on that important afternoon. It may be to break the embarrassing silence that Wilcox asked:

"Senor Plummer, what are those red berries peeping from the cacti?" indicating the roadside with a gesture of his whip.

"Those are holly berries, sir, and if you stop your vehicle, I'll get out and gather some for you."

This courteous act completed, they continued along the sleepy road until Wilcox said again:

"Why, look here, there and all around—more of those red berries! This is indeed a holly wood! And why shouldn't I name it that?"

At the end of the drive, when the deed was put into his hand, he scratched out the name Cahuenga Valley and wrote the new one he had just coined. The orange and lemon groves and a few simple homes were to bear it for awhile and then to vanish as if by a genie's command, for . . . the flame that is Hollywood!

BROKEN GLASSES

By Stephen Morehouse Avery

LUCY SACKETT, looking for some one or any one, sauntered through the Rue Cambon doors of the Ritz and paused for an irresolute moment between the gentlemen's and the ladies' bars, that Scylla and Charybdis of Americans in Paris. Finally she came up the several steps to the little red and gold salle d'attente, where I sat hoping that something of the sort would happen and as I exclaimed, "Lucy!" she exclaimed, "George!" and in unison we said, "You? In Paris? Marvelous!"

For Lucy was a darling, at least a species of darling, and although she was not, and never will be my darling, a fact which is doubtless all for the best, I was none the less delighted to see her wise blue eyes and her rose leaf and porcelain bit of face again after two whole years of forgetting her existence. She took my hands and I forget now whether or not we kissed, there being no reason why we either should or shouldn't, except of course that one would never fail to kiss Lucy if there were the faintest excuse for it.

She had on a slim, wine-colored dress with a hat of the same shade cupping her yellow hair, and I remembered that she always did do more with pin-money wardrobe than her rivals could with all the haute couture in the world.

We waited until we saw some people leave the so-called ladies' bar and then squeezed our way in through an atmosphere burdened with perfumes and pretty scandals to a small table, a plate of potato chips, and two bubbling champagne cocktails. Lucy bubbled too, pointing out to me Prince So-and-sokoff in one corner and a famed beauty of the silver screen and the golden hair dye in another, and all the time my surprise at finding her in Paris was fast ebbing. I began to realize that with a grain of prophetic sense I would have known five years ago that Lucy Sackett would end up doing the American thing in Paris.

Yes, it was inevitable, predestined as when all those gay little sinners were busy rubbing off most of their rouge, making their boy friends behave, and trying to acquire at least the aspect of decorum. But Lucy was either too far gone or too honest even to try it. She knew it was harder to unlearn things than to learn them and she had learned how to smoke, drink, be the life of a party, and talk about anything and everything too well at the age of seventeen to be able to forget it all calmly at the age of twenty-two. Tom Crosby, who generally had her under his arm on his way from one New York night club to another in that disgraceful period, used to say: "Lucy's my girl. She sticks till the sun comes up."

One night in Parker's on Fifty-second street some sly lad added, as if with a special knowledge, "Yes, and then some. Eh, Tom?" Tom Crosby knocked him across two tables. She has the benefit of the doubt as far as I am concerned. I'm certain she and Tom Crosby had never said two love words to each other in their lives. That she liked Tom's parties and he liked her gayety was explanation enough for me. She was out to give and receive a good time and she wasn't out for anything else.

As a matter of fact, she used to anger Tom Crosby on that score. He couldn't give her so much as a subway ticket. "She'd rather save two weeks for a $20 dress than accept a fur coat bought with my tainted money," he complained. But secretly he admired her for it and would follow his complaint with the story of an evening at Smallwoods on Long Island when in an easily persuaded condition he had written a large check for a lady who persisted in dripping crocodile tears on his coat sleeve. Lucy returned to the table just in time to snatch the check and tear it up. "Just as if she were a young wife protecting the family fortune," he said.

And so, reasonably certain that she had little or nothing, I pinned her down. "Just what do you live on in Paris, Lucy, besides potato chips and cocktails?"

"Oh, I've got a job," she said, and she didn't smile either. I noticed a faint line or two in that shell smooth face. Poor child! I squeezed her fingers and she smiled. Well, if you don't believe it, I can buy you anything in Paris from a top hat to a Ninon silk robe de nuit at about half the price you'd pay. You remember Mrs. Coates? She has a buying agency over here and I'm junior member of the firm. We're incorporated too. My salary is—but you'd laugh."

But I didn't feel like laughing at all. I was thinking of Lucy Sackett at seventeen, racing off to parties at Princeton, New Haven, Williamstown, running out to Southampton, house parties, yachting cruises, like a young millionairess of the blood, the flapper of flappers in the day of flapperdom. She could have married a dozen times if she had quit when the rest did and let the Tom Crosby sort of thing go. She had had sponsors, people of position who, delighting in her capacity for happiness, had given her a life which her admirable though unobservant family, appearing vaguely out of an up-State somewhere, had neither the means, standing, nor inclination to give her.

It was all over now. Lucy was the answer to what became of the flappers, at least many of them. They are all over Paris. They were all about us in the ladies' bar of the Ritz trying to pretend that life goes on forever in the same tempo and without change.

A bright crowd squeezed its way in and out of the narrow door, men with sticks, monocles, marvelous mustaches, men with desperately British accents, and just men; and there were women with lap dogs, women with long cigarette holders, women in the latest Chanel and Vionnet street costumes. English, Russian, Roumanian, American, many American, and one or two French were all jammed together for the midday rendezvous within the limits of that one small room. There were partings and greetings in several tongues. "Pardon, madame. Gustave! Deux Martini ici!" . . . "Well, so you're still alive!" . . . "Florence's? Oh, we'll get there by three." . . . "Thought you sailed on the Paris" . . . Waiters balanced trays of yellow and amber cocktails dangerously overhead.

Lucy nodded to half the people in the room. A pretty dark head in a tight lavender felt bent down to our table a pair of big, young, tired gray eyes. "Lucy, you quitter!" She gave Lucy a friendly push and turned to me. "Lucy and I were out with young Yale last night and she ran out on the party. Left us flat at a mere four o'clock!"

"I had a breakfast engagement," said Lucy. "This is George Lockwood you are talking to Lysa. He likes all kinds of people; so be yourself. This intruder is Lysa Edwards, George. Go on over to your breathless sophomore, Lysa. We're reminiscing."

"How painful!" said Lysa. "In Paris one so seldom remembers even yesterday. But if you must, what do you think of your friend Tom Crosby's scheduled marriage to Nathalie Scoville? There was a note about it in the Herald. Paris trousseau, wedding at St. Bartholomew's, the whole show for Nathalie of course. I always knew Tom would be grabbed up any time he could stay sober for a week. Perhaps that's the reason he so seldom did. Au 'voir, crazy."

"Yes!" said Lucy to me carelessly, "Tom's fiancee has reformed him, they say. She and her mother are due in Paris for the trousseau and Mrs. Coates has a line on the business. With all their money they ought to spend a lot." She took down the last half of her cocktail with a gulp.

I was glad to see that Lysa's news meant no more to Lucy than a profit on the trousseau. I knew the Scovilles, especially Mrs. Scoville. She was famous for permanently golden hair and tremendous hats, and her enemies called her the Queen of Beasts. If Tom Crosby wanted to enter that den, it was his business. Maybe it was business. As a director of the business which Tom had inherited and of which he was nominal president, I knew better than others its precarious position and the extent to which his fortunes were involved. But I rated him above a money marriage. I'd prefer he'd remain a drunk.

"Let's go get a table for luncheon, Lucy," I suggested. "We'll talk over this business of buying Ninon nightgowns at half the regular price. Or else, we'll think about what boat you'd take back to New York if some otherwise useless friend offered to lend you the money." I knew what these Paris jobs amounted to.

Lucy's quick glance was a measure of thanks but she shook her head. "We'll walk through Faubourg St. Honore after luncheon and you can buy me a new lipstick instead. I couldn't leave Paris."

At our luncheon table, pleasantly overlooking the courtyard garden, Lucy was at her best. This happened at Zelli's and that at Josepnine Baker's, and somebody said something while they were all having onion soup in the market at the disillusioning hour of six in the morning. She made Paris appear as a mere glittering tinsel ball which she had picked from a Christmas tree. From her description it had about the same degree of solidity and was just as much her personal possession. She talked until I grew suspicious and wondered if she were talking only so that I would have no chance to. Finally I knew it. She gave up and sighed. "All right, George," she said, "go ahead and lecture me. I know you're dying to."

Frankly, I was. She was a great temptation to serious-minded people. I told her she ought to use that keen little yellow head of hers to some purpose, collect as much dignity and Continental manner as she could, and then go home. I felt that at least one of the sleek scions of wealth who were once her slaves would return to the shrine long enough to marry her. Possibly, however, none of them would. Possibly it was too late for such advice and with the doubt came the conviction that it was too late.

I began to wonder who was to blame and decided that Tom Crosby was. He was older and must have realized the changing times. He should not have permitted her to keep it up. But if he did not know enough to save himself—that was even a greater mystery. How could a fellow with as many qualities of taste, breeding, intelligence, wit in his head and as much steel in his knee grip and polo forearm be willing to dilute it all to such an extent with the semi-poisonous contents of his highball glass? What right had he to reform and marry now when it was too late for Lucy to do the same?

"You know Lucy," I said. "I always took it for granted that you would marry Tom in the end, if any one did. Why didn't you?"

Apparently the idea was ridiculous,

Tom Crosby knocked him across two tables.

An Old Pueblo Lives Again

Another of the Sixteen Best Short Stories of the Year; Selected by the Editor of College Humor.

"Do you mean to tell me that you dragged me all the way to Passy just to decide your costume for the evening?"

for Lucy, sipping her black coffee, half choked and then burst out laughing. She couldn't stop laughing, covering her face with her hands, and her slim body in that wine-colored dress fairly shuddering with glee. A mirth tear slipped out between her fingers.

Long after I remembered and wondered about that moment, I am not particularly gifted in the penetration of feminine psychology. Laughter meant laughter to me, especially such abandoned laughter, and it did not occur to me that analysis might reveal something besides mirth in that tear which had stood for an instant round and cloudy on the back of Lucy Sackett's hand.

In fact, for three days I did not even see Lucy Sackett, although I did see the Scovilles. The hotel news reported them at the Claridge and I spotted them first across the crowded front room of Rumpelmeyer's famous palace of sweets in the Rue Rivoli. There was the timeless tawny glory of the old lioness under a wide hat and Nathalie's black felt helmet of a thing which became the mask of her frozen little features very well. Nathalie was the frontispiece of Vogue. I liked her. She must have had greater force of character than people thought to have been able to make Tom Crosby quit drinking for a year.

I stopped long enough to invite them to tea Sunday afternoon and to say something banal about Nathalie's approaching marriage. "We've been hearing other good news about Tom these days too."

Mrs. Scoville beamed. "Yes, indeed. It's all a matter of the proper influences. But you shall see for yourself because he's coming over in a few days. Poor dear, he wanted so badly to come with us, but some important business thing came up. So he lands next Thursday."

I went directly to the Ritz to find Lucy and report the arrival of her prospective clients. She wasn't there. She wasn't anywhere apparently. Before the day was over I went to Harry's New York, Bodega's, the Cozy Tea Room, stopped at Pouquet's, the Dauphine, and finally at Lucy's pension in the Rue Jules Janin, Passy. There was always some one to tell me she had either just left or was expected any minute. The point was she was never there.

I gave her up and went out for myself that night, finding amusement with the gaudy caricature of itself which Paris offers to most Americans as a plaything. I pretend to no finer perception than the rest and emerged about two in the morning from Zelli's with an astonishing feeling of exhilaration and a charming little companion, who within the space of an hour or so had become so attached to me that she had all sorts of plans for our future.

Perhaps the romantic mood suggested Casbeck to me. It was a tiny Russian rendezvous where a woman with cloudy eyes sings so low and beautifully that you can hear in your mind the slow wash of heavy, black water against the banks of the Dnieper. It may be too bad that we never arrived. One never knows how much romance one misses. But our taxicab took us no farther on the way than the Place de Clinchy.

We halted in a swirl of traffic before a gendarme who was standing, like a blue statue, with his white club held aloft. The lights of the Moulin Rouge, the Bal Tabarin, Heaven and Hell, and all that giddy nonsense made a white, flickering daylight all about us. My little friend was explaining that it was not so far to Biarritz. And then through the window of the cab halted alongside ours I saw a face, a face which surprised me almost to the point of collapse and at least to the point of complete sobriety.

I think the conviction that I was enjoying a champagne vision scared all of the exhilaration out of me, but the sight of Tom Crosby in a taxicab in the Place de Clinchy when, according to his fiancee, he should be just about leaving New York Harbor struck me as pure hallucination. But it was Tom. I was sure of that. The lock of brown hair falling down over his forehead and the general dishevelment with which even a drink or two invariably affected his otherwise groomed person were too characteristic and real for anything less than fact.

I struggled with the obstinate window of our cab, trying to hail him before the traffic moved. Tom was too intent with some business of his own to notice, emphasizing by short jerks of his head the points of an argument with his invisible companion. I strained forward to see and received for my pains, like a right hook following a left lead, my second jolt within the minute; for the features I saw fainly back in the dim interior of that cab was not the anticipated little mask of Nathalie Scoville. It was the singularly grim and determined face of one Lucy Sackett.

I sat back plunk in the seat, to the utter disgust of my playmate du soir, very sober and quiet with my own thoughts. Tom and Lucy! Some other people's affairs have always interested me far more than my own and I was suddenly caught off base with the realization that a poignant, even tragic little situation had lain all this time in the heart of a relationship which I had assumed to be casual as the friendship of a couple of schoolboys. It hurt me because I could foresee the pain of it would be Lucy's and because, if the truth were admitted, I felt a yearn inside over such a bad young spendthrift of life who could grin and bear it so prettily now that the time had come to pay up.

The traffic whistle blew. The absurd, high-pitched motor horns tooted. I had our driver follow their cab to the door of Florence's; Florence's where the blackface jazz is loudest and the closing hour, if any, latest. Tom Crosby reformed? Well, I might have known better than that. I watched them enter the place, subsidized my disappointed little friend, and went home to my austere hotel bed.

One drove slowly through the Bois de Boulogne, the promenades crowded with smartly dressed Sunday afternoon strollers. Simpler, happier folk reclined at ease in grassy spaces between the bordering trees with bottles of red wine standing by and cheese and bread in napkins. The surprising thought came that the French also live in Paris. An arched gateway finally permitted us entry through a white facade and into a half real, tree-shaded court filled with the soft music of an orchestra and the murmur of many people seated at the small tables, the Chateau de Madrid. Mrs. Scoville impressed the maitre d'hotel to the point of giving us an excellent table. Nathalie had not come with us but would taxi out later and with my permission, would bring a little friend.

Gleaming tea service, yellow cocktails, trays of golden patisserie, gigolos, sleek and pale, doing their stint on the tiny dance floor with very old ladies in youthful Poiret costumes! Occasionally a light breeze penetrating the court brought down a few leaves from the branches overhead and left them incongruously upon a white tablecloth beside a Martini cocktail. There were many Americans there, as everywhere in Paris. Mrs. Scoville was favoring me with the sort of propaganda she thought would be good for one of Tom Crosby's best friends.

"I didn't think Nathalie, dear child, had the character to do it," she said. "He was headed for the gutter, as of course you know, and when I saw what an influence Nathalie had upon him, I felt it my duty not to oppose the match. He can thank her that he reformed in time to save his fortune from some clique of swindlers or a scheming woman. These young men, with fortunes, you know—"

Yes, I knew. I remembered the remark later on when it had greater significance. We saw Nathalie herself just then, weaving her way among the tables on her way to join us. Her "little friend" was none other than my own little friend, Lucy Sackett, a fact which surprised me very much until I remembered her job. Coates and Sackett had apparently landed the Scoville trousseau business.

Mrs. Scoville explained in violent whispers as they approached. "She knows the shops and how much one should pay," she said. "Whatever she used to be in New York, and I believe she was rather too well known there, she is very useful in Paris. That is all Nathalie cares."

No doubt that was all Nathalie cared, but a sharp, vivid little picture jumped into my mind of Lucy picking out a trousseau for Tom Crosby's bride. I didn't like to think of it.

Lucy wore a simple dress in black velvet with a short, full skirt. Nathalie was in black and white, very smart and severe. Lucy was a picture, Nathalie a design.

"We've been trying on," she said, "Lucy thinks the silver Patou ought to be shorter, mother. You said you knew George Lockwood, didn't you, Lucy?"

Lucy looked sidewise at me and, during the placing of chairs, murmured, "I hear you've been looking for me."

"But I'd have to become a bartender to have a chance of finding you," I said, adding aloud because I wanted to punish her a bit for not having confided to me about Tom, "I happened to glimpse you in a taxicab last Friday night in the Place de Clinchy."

Lucy shot me a quick, commanding glance and her lips tightened. The Scovilles did not observe it. Nathalie was watching at the moment the deserved suffering of a sinuous gigolo who had asked a lady of square dance proportions to honor him with a tango and incidentally thirty francs.

We had our patisserie and tea. Lucy took a cocktail and I ordered porto blanc. I was not through with Lucy.

"So old Tom is landing on Thursday," I remarked, apparently out of an innocent reflection, and immediately received under the table a sharp kick on the shinbone. I was the madder because Lucy was smiling sweetly the while and asking if she might sip my porto. It did occur to me to wonder how the devil Lucy could have reached me with a kick from where she sat. Nathalie was opposite.

Nevertheless I blamed Lucy and leaning toward her said, "We shall hardly recognize him in these regenerate days, shall we?"

"So you knew Mr. Crosby too, my dear?" asked Mrs. Scoville. Her eyes

An Old Pueblo Lives Again

By Helen W. King

NO SURER token of our increasing culture, here in Los Angeles, is to be found than is revealed in the fact that we've come to realize the value and the interest which lie in the remnant of our earliest days. This awakening is not confined to a small group any longer, although it must in fairness be admitted that it was a small group which sounded the alarm when modernism seemed about to sweep the last traces of old romantic times into the discard.

Now and again we have seen something in print concerning the old Avila home on Olvera street, once the headquarters of Gen. Fremont. It probably has occurred to a good many minds that it was rather too bad to let the old landmark be demolished, but it was stuck down there in a dingy little street just off the Plaza, and—well, maybe it couldn't be helped. Nothing was done about it, in any case, until Mrs. Christine Sterling, born in the San Francisco Bay district, but ardently interested in anything, anywhere, that pertains to the beginnings of California history, became interested in preventing the destruction of this old adobe house. She succeeded in getting the co-operation and some financial backing from a small group of people whose family history was interwoven with that of the city.

From a project to preserve the house the interest spread until the reconstruction of the entire block, all that remains of Olvera street, became the plan. If you want to be transported back to the time when the fifth city of the United States, in point of population, was a mere pueblo, step through the doors of the Avila adobe and into the courtyard in the rear. Through a lower corner of the court passes all that remains of the Zanja Madre, the Mother Ditch, which brought the first water into the village, and the first construction work done in Los Angeles. The course taken by the ditch is marked diagonally across the paving in the street outside, that it may be more clearly remembered. Against an adjoining brick wall stands an old black fig tree, a part of the original planting in that quiet spot around which the life of the family centered.

Here is all that remains of the Zanja Madre, the Mother Ditch, which brought the first water into the pueblo which is now Los Angeles. It is in the courtyard of the old Avila adobe on Olvera street, where active effort is being made to restore some of the atmosphere of old California.

In connection with the work of restoration, Mrs. Sterling has refused to permit any plantings to be made that might not have been possible at that early period of our horticultural history, whether in connection with the adobe or the street outside. Given a bit more time, these plantings, which now seem so sparse, will grow up into vines that will chamber graciously over the old structure and into plants big enough to mask harsh lines.

While one-half the world is reckoned as not knowing how the other half lives, it is certain that it will manifest a good deal of curious interest if given an opportunity. In the short length of this picturesque thoroughfare it is possible for a person to get a pretty clear conception of the sort of food which appeals to our Mexican neighbors. Beverages made of some sort of small seeds, which we are assured are "very good for the liver," concoctions with milk in them, greatly diluted; tamales so delicious that they win for themselves an entirely new respect; enchiladas, the ubiquitous frijole prepared and served in a number of ways; tortillas folded around minced-up meat, shredded lettuce, ground cheese and tomato sauce; bananas, skinned and prepared in some fashion so they can be sold as pressed dates and figs are sold. There are peppers of all descriptions, beans and nuts and things familiar and unfamiliar to us. The stalls of the typical street vendors, the tiny little "hole-in-the-wall" shops, and the more ambitious cafes all serve strange and savory fare.

On every hand are the gayety, the color, the joy of life which seem so characteristic of these people. Whether it is a shrine or an array of primitive pottery, a roadside cafe or the forge of a wrought-iron worker, it is all part of the intimate life, the usual surroundings of the Mexican, and we are charmed by them all. Strolling along the street, with its padre tile paving and its center drain, gazing at the quaint shops behind the grilled windows, it is hard to believe you are in the center of this great metropolis, on the very spot where our early history was made. A glance back up the street catches the great cross dedicated to Philip de Neve, with the droway old Plaza beyond, and looming up above the surrounding buildings, the high and immaculate tower of the new City Hall.

Old Olvera street will fascinate the tourist, as well as the homeowner. An ugly, neglected street has become a place of interest and beauty. Property which has in many instances stood idle for many years is bringing in good revenue. It is a good beginning, which may well lead to other equally worthy projects.

State Extension Service Reports On Turkey Survey in Mojave River Valley.

The State Agricultural Extension Service, working with the Farm Bureau of San Bernardino County, is issuing very valuable information of unusual interest to turkey raisers showing costs and returns upon representative turkey ranches in San Bernardino county. Following is a summary of the most recent annual report. This report deals with four farms located in the Mojave River Valley under very favorable climatic conditions for turkey raising. One of these farms is in Adelanto, the others in near-by localities.

Number of birds raised	3017
Feed Cost per bird	$2.15
Total cost per bird	3.81
Income per bird	5.30
Net profit	1.49

This report includes all costs, farm labor, also labor hired, and all overhead items, such as interest, taxes and depreciation.

A gratifying fact is the steady reduction which is being made from year to year in costs. This is the result of better management and improved methods, also co-operative buying and selling.

Adelantans are turkey specialists and are pooling their interests much to the advantage of individual growers.

Due to very favorable climatic conditions at Adelanto and proximity to a splendid market, depending for a large part of its turkey supply upon localities from one to two thousand miles distant, Adelantans have become turkey-minded and are placing turkey raising on a highly standardized business basis.

R. H. Moore Gains Health And Income

R. H. Moore, popular Adelanto poultry breeder, in a recent interview stated:

"I was almost out when I came to Adelanto 4 years ago. Had been in bed for months. Adelanto's fine climate, reasonably priced land and congenial neighborhood life made me into a new man. And best of all while gaining health I have made a tidy income."

Chaplin Talks on ADELANTO

Mr. and Mrs. Chaplin own and operate their poultry ranch consisting of 3000 white leghorns and 1000 turkeys.

"Since I came to Adelanto five years ago I have seen a marvelous story unfold. The great majority of our families have come here from Los Angeles and other cities and they have found health, home and income. The whole atmosphere of this community is so earnest and progressive that success is contagious.

"As I see it the success which these families have made in Adelanto is due to the low land and water costs, co-operative buying and selling, the near-by markets, the attractive community life and unusually favorable climate."

Mr. Wyn Chaplin, the poultry adviser at Adelanto, who has made a special study of the production and marketing of turkeys in the Adelanto district during the past five years states that the net return which can reasonably be expected from turkeys, where the grower does his own work and does not include labor costs, is $2.00 per bird.

No expensive, high pressure real estate sales methods at Adelanto.

In order to give you authentic information and deal direct we have produced a group of bulletins, each descriptive of some phase of our Adelanto development, which we will gladly mail upon request.

Farm and Garden

Devoted to the multiform agricultural interests of the great Southwest and issued every week with the world's biggest Sunday newspaper.

EDITED BY HAROLD M. FINLEY

Communications from practical farmers, ranchers, stock raisers, poultrymen, gardeners and others engaged either in a large or small way in the vital work of agricultural production are gladly received. Address all letters to editorial department, Farm and Garden Magazine.

Stimulating Crops

FOR six years the United States Department of Agriculture has been experimenting with paper mulch on its farm at Arlington, Va. The scientists in charge believe that they have figured out pretty closely its advantages and where and how it can be used best.

"The major economic function of paper mulch," says Dr. L. H. Flint, physiologist in charge of the trials, "is ordinarily its stimulation of the plant crop. The practical tests with a view to the economic utilization of paper mulch are now well under way throughout the country, even though the knowledge of the methods of obtaining the maximum benefits under different conditions is far from complete."

An important factor to consider in connection with the use of paper mulch is the relative value of the crop itself. The actual cost of the paper varies widely, but with the usual practice followed in the production of annual crops, it runs around $35 per acre. Crops which indicate possibilities of profitable production with the use of paper mulch are tobacco, sweet corn, melons, peppers, cauliflower, onions, celery, lettuce, nursery stock, fruit and nut trees, vine crops, flowers and flower bulbs.

Besides increasing the yield, paper mulching has been found, in a number of cases, to improve the quality of product. In flower production, larger blooms and longer stems were reported from the use of the paper.

The use of paper mulch for weed control promises much, according to Dr. Flint. This is an item to be considered in the matter of relative costs. It may be used for the extermination of noxious weeds, regardless of the profit made directly from the crop.

Reports from growers indicate that the use of paper mulch sometimes has a decided effect on hastening maturity of plants. In some regions, certain crops have matured more than three weeks earlier, but such cases are exceptional.

Paper mulch first came into general use in the United States in 1928, although it had been in use for a number of years on pineapple plantations in the Hawaiian Islands. Initial sales of mulch paper in 1929 were limited by the manufacturers to a few rolls per person and amounted to only enough to cover about 500 acres. Most of it was utilized in home gardens. In 1929, the total coverage ran above 5000 acres.

Desert Monsters

VAST areas of timber were cleared in the making of the East and Middle West, but the pioneers who hewed the trees to create farms in those effete regions had nothing on the hardy folk who developed parts of Arizona. Imagine clearing land forested with desert giants like those pictured on today's cover page—gigantic saguaro trunks, streaming branches of ocotillo, one and all armed with murderous pointed spikes and challenging man and all creation to take them! Much of the fertile Salt River Valley was wrested from just such defenders, and they were he-men who did the work. Now nature lovers are fearful for the wild desert life and are taking steps to preserve it. Save only in those privately owned areas where development is actually proceeding or contemplated, the grotesquely beautiful cactus giants and other desert natives may not be disturbed and penalties await those who molest them. Thus will future generations of Arizonans and the hordes that travel that State's desert highways be reminded of what the fathers had to endure and overcome.

The Business Farmer

THE completed report on the cost of picking, hauling and packing oranges, lemons, and grapefruit for the 1928-29 season, has been published by the California Citrus League. This report is doubtless of interest and value to the citrus industry.

To the general public it is of interest solely as an evidence of the new business-like attitude being taken by the agriculturist toward his industry.

Time was, and not so very long ago, when all that governmental agencies offered the farmer was advice on how to increase yield and quality of product. In the ever recurrent periods of overproduction, the farmer had a hard time seeing the value of greater yields. And there is no question but what one of the most popular steps ever taken in California by an official agency was the institution of the cost of production studies by the agricultural extension service, whereby the grower or producer of some particular crop might learn about his business through statistical studies of actual "going concerns."

Ready co-operation has been secured for these studies. The farm adviser of a peach county, for instance, may undertake a cost study in his district. He secures a number of grower-co-operators, who keep a careful record of expenditures, etc., on blanks furnished by the farm adviser. At the end of the year the averages are struck. The following year the study is continued, and for several years, so that the averages will be more nearly a perfect picture of conditions as they exist in the industry year in and year out, good times and bad.

The statistical bulletins published by the State university have been along the same lines, an attempt to guide California farmers in their horticultural business, to advise for or against certain ventures, to analyse present markets and future chances, in general to discuss a California crop just as any industrialist would discuss a manufacturing venture.

The value of these official studies seems obvious. There are always farmers who will jump in and help to overplant any fairly successful crop. But there are a great many more who are eager, even hungry, for just the very information which the studies are making available.

A Snail Round-up

TO WHAT a low estate has the western cow hand fallen that he must go snail hunting. Yet snail hunting he must go, and so will his old-time rival the sheep herder.

The reason—the fresh water snail is an intermediate host of liver fluke, a very "bad hombre" for cattle and sheep. It is thus essential in making a "clean-up" of the disease in a certain area, to charge down upon the snails with horse, foot, and artillery.

Parasitologists—bug hunters—of the United States Department of Agriculture are developing means of killing the snails in wholesale lots. The little mollusks have been found to be "highly sensitive to weak solutions of copper sulphate," an "astringent." In fact, that they turn up their toes in one part copper sulphate to 130,000,000 parts of water, a solution which will not hurt sheep or cattle. It is thus easy to kill the snails in small streams by dropping a sack of copper sulphate into the stream near its source. On the lowlands along the stream, dusting with the sulphate is effective. Bogs and marshes should be drained to eliminate the snails, or fenced to keep the sheep and cattle away, the biologists say.

Recent Agricultural Activities of State Commonwealth

PHOENIX (Ariz.)—The Arizona State Farm Bureau Federation, at its annual meeting held here recently, amended the constitution and by-laws to meet certain local conditions. George M. Bridges of Yuma was chosen president. He acted in the same capacity three years ago and succeeds Walter R. Strong of Phoenix. Other officers named were: Louis Groehler, Tempe, vice-president; C. O. Spilsbury, Mesa, secretary-treasurer; M. A. Anderson, Casa Grande, director-at-large. The women directors of the organization are: Mrs. M. A. Anderson, Casa Grande; Mrs. Martha J. Boggs, Phoenix, and Mrs. D. C. Taylor, Yuma. One of the features of the annual meeting was the presence of Sam H. Thompson, president of the American Farm Bureau Federation. Mr. Thompson made two addresses while in Phoenix.

Salt River Valley's rapid growth as a citrus district is shown by the annual report of the Arizona Citrus Growers, submitted to the members recently. This report shows that the co-operative did more than $1,000,000 worth of business in oranges, grapefruit and lemons during the season just closing, at the best prices it ever enjoyed. Plans for a new packing plant in Mesa to cost $75,000 were announced. An addition to the main packing plant in Phoenix is also to be made before the next citrus crop starts to market. F. W. Avery has been re-elected president of the association. Other officers are: H. C. Heard, vice-president; V. E. Engdhal, W. S. Perry, J. D. Tway, L. C. Smith and F. C Bevernick, directors; I. de Miller, association manager, and George H. Lilley, plant superintendent.

Federal inspection of alfalfa hay is being tried for the first time this spring in Salt River Valley. The response from the hay dealers has been so general that it is assumed the inspection service will be maintained permanently.

R. H. Wight in his flower-planting on Rancho Pala, twenty-two miles east of Oceanside.

Arizona's spring lettuce crop blew up with a bang this year, said most of the growers are wondering whether they will go in so heavy another time. From an estimated crop of between 7500 and 8500 carloads, the final figure showed less than 5000 cars loaded. The trouble was the unusually high temperatures that hit Southern California and Arizona during the first week in April. Temperatures of 97 deg. were registered at Yuma and Phoenix on three successive days. This so advanced the harvest that it could not be handled. Previous to the spurt in temperatures, the State inspection bureau had estimated a yield of at least 150 crates to the acre as an average for the State's 21,300 acres. As the season closed, it was figured that the yield had averaged only sixty-three crates to the acre, by far the lowest ever registered in Salt River Valley.

To Cut or Not

The advantages and disadvantages of cutting fruit for drying are discussed in Bulletin 495, college of agriculture, University of California, recently issued, and available for free distribution at county farm advisors' offices and at the college at Berkeley. The publication is entitled Drying Cut Fruits, and is by P. F. Nichols, associate in fruit products, and A. W. Christie, formerly assistant professor of fruit products. Methods, materials and costs for apples, pears, apricots and peaches are discussed. Cutting before drying, the bulletin says, permits of drying large thick-skinned fruits, exposes more surface for drying, permits inspection, sorting and trimming, removes inedible portions such as pits and cores, makes a more attractive and more easily prepared product, and permits accumulation of pits or cores by by-products manufacturers. On the other hand, it increases danger of spoilage in drying and storing, deteriorates color, darkening being most rapid on cut surfaces. Cut surfaces are especially attractive to micro-organisms and insects.

University "Prof" Go Back to the California Soil

Ranching in Southern California is the only life for the outdoor university man, according to R. H. Wight, Stanford, '21, civil engineer, and now resident manager of Rancho Pala, twenty-two miles east of Oceanside on Rio San Luis del Rey. Several years ago, two Stanford professors, Dr. R. W. Dean, entomologist, and Dr. W. F. Wight, botanist, acquired Rancho Pala with its 1040 acres, formerly a barley and stock farm. They have laid out and installed an irrigation system, apon to cover all of the area that is suited to cultivation, drawing the water from the bounty of the river sands.

The ranch is now in its fifth year. It has seventy-five acres in deciduous and fifty in citrus fruits, much of both already fruiting. Ten acres are devoted to bulb flowers. The planted area is being increased as rapidly as is practicable. No subdivision is being planned here, now or hereafter, according to the manager, a son of Dr. Wight. It is to be the home of the two professors and their families.

Young Mr. Wight has had but little experience in horticulture, but he is learning. He ships out cut flowers to the Chicago market, the first moving east on February 1, the blooms being dry-packed. Shipments reached their destination in good shape and the deal has been profitable.

He is planning to specialize in rare flowering plants. A planting of 10,000 tuberous irises, Susiana or Mourning Iris, he says, is something quite new here, although more common in Europe. Wedgewood irises are being grown successfully.

"Growers of flowering bulbs," he declares, "must co-operate. A market for both the bulbs and cut flowers exists. Florida is the only other State that can be considered a competitor, with California irrigation and sunshine giving us enough advantage to balance the greater shipping distance."

Who Makes Money on Bees?

Apiarist With Below-Average Production May Find Himself "Working for Wages," Studies Show

By Harold E. Wahlberg
Farm Adviser, Orange County

[Cost studies are the thing among progressive agriculturists these days, so it is not surprising to find the beekeepers getting together to analyze the expenses in their business. Mr. Wahlberg has previously contributed interesting and valuable articles to Farm and Garden on costs in various farm operations.—Editor.]

WHEN the beekeepers' department of the Orange county Farm Bureau started out, three years ago, to analyze the cost of producing honey, they desired not only to secure cost data based on actual cash expenditures and overhead expenses, but also to establish, if possible, some standards of efficiency by which the individual beekeeper might compare his own items of cost throughout the year. The honey production business, like any other farm enterprise, comprises many operations during the year, and each operation has a bearing on the efficiency of the business. The cost study undertaken by the Orange county group aims to analyze these operations on their cost basis and to provide comparisons between the experiences of the individual apiary and those representing an average for the entire group.

In 1927, colonies to the number of 1365 were included in the study; 1461 colonies were studied in 1928, and 1821 colonies in 1929. Six commercial apiaries were represented. The average yield of honey per colony for these years was 40.9 pounds in 1927, 41.2 pounds in 1928, and 41.5 pounds in 1929. The range of production last lear was from 23.5 pounds of honey per colony to 66 pounds. Of course, there were higher yields in some single colonies, but the above figures are averages for apiary run. The average prices received by the beekeepers for honey during these years were 8.7 cents, 9.8 cents and 10.6 cents per pound, respectively, or an average of 9.7 cents for the three years reported.

The costs during each year were divided into three main headings—labor, material and overhead. In 1929, the average labor charges covering the 1821 colonies were segregated as follows:

Labor per 100 Colonies

Inspection and manipulation	$79.56
Feeding	2.66
Moving	17.74
Extracting	32.95
Miscellaneous	41.06
Average total	$134.63

There was a wide variation in the cost of inspection and a manipulation, as reported by this group of beekeepers—from $191.92 per hundred colonies to $34.67. It is certain that the higher one could approach more nearly the average figure, which was $79.56. The expense of extracting labor also varied from $45.40 to $12.60 per hundred colonies. Saving could no doubt be made here by the use of better labor-saving machinery and other extracting facilities. Fifty cents per hour was charged for the beekeeper's own time when working in the apiary. The above labor expense includes the owner's time as well as that of hired help.

The material costs per 100 colonies were reported as follows:

Feed	$ 18.07
Containers	30.78
Auto and truck	74.84
Miscellaneous	19.82
Average total	$140.43

The overhead expenses include taxes, rentals for locations, interest on investment and depreciation on equipment. In order to ascertain the interest and depreciation charges, inventories were kept of each man's equipment. The average items of equipment for 1929, and their values per 100 colonies, were:

Bees	$375.00
Hives	317.29
Building	40.48
Equipment	153.51
Average total investment	$886.28

With all items, except bees, the owners' valuations and rates of depreciation were used without modification. In the case of the valuation of bees, a uniform value of $3.75 per colony was established. The actual values of bees, as estimated by the apiarists, ranged from $2.84 to $7.00. It is not likely that there would be such a variation in the actual worth and strength of bees in these commercial apiaries, so the uniform figure of $3.75 was agreed upon for the purpose of the study.

The investment values also varied widely among the apiaries— from $1576.16 to $744.83 per hundred colonies. The highest yielding apiary had the highest investment, but the next highest yielding apiary had the lowest investment. There did not appear to be any correlation between the investment and production.

Six per cent interest was charged against the inventory items and depreciation was based on the operator's estimate of the length of service for the different items.

Computed Overhead per 100 Colonies:

Interest on investment in bees	$ 22.50
Interest on investment in hives	19.04
Depreciation in hives	39.43
Interest on investment buildings	2.43
Depreciation on buildings	2.85
Interest on investment, equipment	9.21
Depreciation on equipment	15.34
Average computed overhead	$110.70
Cash Overhead
Taxes	$ 5.69
Location rentals	20.39
General expense	14.75
Average cash overhead	$43.67

General expense under cash overhead is included as a charge of 5 per cent against total labor and material costs. It takes care of small items not otherwise reported.

In summing up all costs, briefly, then, we find the average to be $451.44 per 100 colonies in 1929.

Converting the above costs to a hundred-pound basis, the following values were reported:

All labor costs	$ 3.72
All material cost	3.39
Cash overhead costs	1.11
Interest and depreciation	2.97
Total all costs	$10.99

ROCKS DISPOSED OF AND GROVE SET OUT

By Robert T. Paine

ORCHARDISTS who expect to make plantings in rocky country, difficult to grade and clear, could take a lesson from a successful experiment in Valencia orange planting undertaken by a Redlands concern at Mentone near Redlands.

The Mentone district has for the past few years been the scene of efforts to extend the Redlands-Crafton citrus area out into the sagebrush toward the wide, rocky wash of the Santa Ana River. Most of these citrus plantings have been the work of inexperienced settlers having only vary small plots, the offerings of a subdivider.

The land is fertile enough, but exceedingly rocky, having once been a river bed, which makes the task of clearing for agriculture arduous. For one man alone, the job of clearing a tract large enough to put fruit growing on a really paying basis has been a huge one. Two or three acres of fairly well-cleared land might be all he could achieve in months of labor. Moreover, the terrain is irregular, being broken by many small gullies, and as grading is essential for gravity irrigation, that factor adds to the difficulties.

However, a group of Redlands citrus growers and business men, attracted by the fertility of the virgin top soil, were convinced that large-scale orange growing could be carried on successfully in the area if the right methods of clearing and planting were followed. For financial expediency, they organized themselves into a company, the Redlands Orange Investment Company. That was a little more than two years ago.

The result can be seen today a half mile northeast of Mentone, where fifty acres of thriving young Valencia oranges are irri-

Low Mortality Loss

Adelanto Poultrymen Make Very Good Showing This Year

By M. Blanchard

ADELANTO.—Adelanto, where turkeys are a popular "crop," is making some very fine records with early poults, and the general outlook at present is that flocks there this year will be double what they were last year. This San Bernardino county desert community has a general record of from 10 to 15 per cent losses among turkey poults for the first two months, but this year the lowest record is 5 per cent, and this in a flock of about 3000 birds.

Two of the best records at the present writing are those of Don Parmalee, who has made a success of raising turkeys for three years, although he formerly worked as an auto mechanic. It seems to "come natural" for Mr. Parmalee to take a bunch of turkey babies and bring them to maturity with small loss. Just recently his flock numbered 1700, two weeks old, with a loss at that time, according to his records, of only 1½ per cent. The other record is that of another beginner of two years' experience, C. L. Jackson, whose 600 poults reached an age of ten days with a 1 per cent loss. Mrs. William King, with a flock of 101, reports she only lost one in four weeks.

Larger flocks, naturally, when only one man is caring for them, have a larger percentage of losses. W. L. Chaplin, who also has a flock of 4000 White Leghorn chickens, brooded 1100 baby turkeys this season, and at almost three weeks of age, there was a loss of only 3½ per cent. The Turkey Farms ranch, under the management of Mr. and Mrs. Hans Rasmussen, is now brooding 3000 turkeys and the losses were about 5 per cent in the whole flock, with ages of the turkeys ranging from two weeks to two months. Mr. Rasmussen had his biggest loss from unsatisfactory heating methods, and, changing practically over night, he eliminated the danger.

Chickens also have made brooding records this season in the Adelanto district, which has an altitude of 3000 feet above sea level. Mr. and Mrs. Cal White, with 1000 chicks four weeks old, had a 2½ per cent loss. Henry Deutschman, with a flock of 1996 chicks lost four out of 2000, he reports.

Brooding methods on Adelanto Farms are quite uniform. Houses for the first three or four weeks are roomy but draft-tight. There are well-placed ventilators,

Poultry men and women of the Reseda district believe in getting together and exchanging problems incidental to their business. They chose the outdoors for the meeting pictured above, at which talks were given by experts. Visits are also made to plants of various kinds for observation and instruction.

and, when the weather permits, windows are open. Curtains of canvas, toward the east, are dropped in the mornings to allow sunshine and fresh air to enter. Oil-burning brooders, and hot air brooders using a specially prepared coal, are used. The cement floors of the houses are covered with clean sand to a depth of about six inches, a few putting in only about two inches of sand, and removing all when it is desired to freshen the brooder, in place of merely cleaning the top from the six inches of sand. A two-foot wire, canvas-covered, surrounds the brooder stove, keeping the little poults within about four feet of the heater.

After three or four weeks, most of the growers move the poults to the "cooler." This building is quite similar to the brooder, except that the "fence" is not used, and little roosts are placed along each side of the room at about a 30-degree angle. A room for about 400 poults is 12x20 feet, and the stove in the center is used for heating from about 7 or 8 o'clock every evening until morning for the first few days, then from midnight until morning for a few days more, gradually getting the birds used to the cooler sleeping quarters. All brooders and "coolers" have little outside pens and runs, for there are many sunny days when they are outside.

After about four weeks of the "cooler," the birds are moved to a covered roosting shed, usually made of galvanized iron, where they spend another four weeks. Then they are put out in open pens, with roosts and shade, and kept there until ready for market.

While methods of care and feeding are important in reducing mortality, local poultrymen feel that the climate of the desert should be given considerable credit for the extremely good showings recorded above. Snappy night air at this region's altitude induces proper feathering out, they say, and makes sturdy birds. Open-air roosts eliminate drafts, and because the birds are in the open, and have plenty of room, sanitation problems are reduced.

Notes From the Field

THE California Breeders of Rare and Fancy Fowl Club, organized in Los Angeles in 1924, now has 150 members in seven States and Hawaii, having thus outgrown the "California" part of its name. A meeting of the club is held locally on the last Thursday of each month, and is always well-attended. This organization attained such immediate success as one of the leading specialty clubs of the nation that it has become one of the firm supports of the poultry shows in furnishing quality and variety.

The B. R. Brown pen is leading for the month and to date at the Grossmont High School laying contest in San Diego county, the last monthly report shows. The pen has produced 947 eggs in four months and 226 for the month. The "to date" total is 105 better than the nearest competitor, the pen of M. F. Donahae, with 842 eggs, anr is a very creditable showing.

W. E. Newlon, poultry specialist of the agricultural extension service, University of California, was the principal speaker at a recent series of meetings for poultrymen of Riverside county. Mr. Newlon first addressed the poultry department of the Riverside County Farm Bureau, with B. G. Binmore of Glenavon, acting as chairman. Other meetings were held at Hemet, Norco, and Jurupa Heights. "Brooding of Baby Chicks" was the specialist's topic.

Extension-service poultry meetings in Los Angeles county this spring are being well attended, it is reported by L. D. Sanborn, assistant farm adviser of Los Angeles county. At these gatherings, held under the point auspices of the agricultural extension service and the Los Angeles County Farm Bureau, spring poultry management, disease control and culling are discussed, as well as other poultry problems. The following meetings still remain on the schedule: 10 a. m., May 6, H. J. Rockwell Hatchery, 670 Cedar street, Bellefiower; 10 a.m., May 8, Week's Colony, Owensmouth. The meetings are open to the public.

Bugs Just Laugh

Internal Medicine for External Parasites Ineffective

As a matter of economy the United States Department of Agriculture suggests that before investing money in "vermin eradicators" to be fed to poultry, the poultry keeper might better invest a penny for a postal card, address it to the Office of Information, United States Department of Agriculture, and request a copy of Technical Bulletin 60-T "Ineffectiveness of Internal Medication of Poultry for the Control of External Parasites."

The chances are, the Department of Agriculture believes, that after reading this pamphlet the poultryman will not want to spend any money for louse medicines, flea and mite medicines, or tick medicines to be given internally.

In a long series of experiments with a long list of such medicines and with about fifty such proprietary preparations in powder, liquid and tablet forms, the investigators of the food, drug and Insecticide administration were unable to discover any conclusive evidence that these advertised "vermin eradicators" were of any use whatever. On the contrary, some of the chemicals injured the health of the fowls and, consequently, made them even more open to attack by parasites.

As a result of the experiments reported in this bulletin, the food, drug and insecticide administration forced a number of manufacturers to withdraw these nostrums from the market. Some are still sold locally, however, and others are recommended by rule-of-thumb advisers as effective. The prevailing idea is that these substances given internally are taken up by the blood and then excreted to the surface, either to poison the parasites or to drive them from the fowl. Unfortunately for the theory, the results are not as predicted, the department men state.

Poultry require careful and effective treatment for control of vermin, and there are many excellent powders, disinfectants, sprays and dips that are of great value.

A WEEKLY REVIEW OF AGRICULTURAL ACTIVITIES IN THE SOUTHWEST

Coachella Reports from Lee and Knowlton, principal shippers of carrots from the Coachella Valley, state that approximately 160 cars of the vegetable have gone forward to date. The season is nearing a close as the firm has only about fifty acres yet to be harvested. The third week in April saw the initial shipment of the 1930 onion crop from the Coachella Valley, a carload being made up, principally from the Marshall Ranch in the Point Happy District. Prospects at present are for a good season. The present onion acreage in the valley is about 2000 acres as against 3000 acres grown last year.

Dr. W. T. Swingle of the government experimental station at Indio has announced that he has been successful in growing ephedral, a plant imported by him from China and from which a valuable drug is extracted. The drug, called ephedrine, is used in cold preparations and at present the entire supply is imported from the Orient. Mr. Swingle has made a series of experimental plantings near Palm Springs.

A round-up is being made around Palm Springs of so-called wild horses that roam the desert—and people's gardens—in search of food and water. Having been abandoned for years by their owners, they have caused much damage at various times in their struggle for existence. They are being corraled, fed and watered under the supervision of the poundmaster of the district. Several have been claimed by owners and turned back to them upon payment of expenses.

Fifteen miles of cement irrigation pipe have been installed in the completion of the irrigation system on the latest King C. Gillette grapefruit development in the Indian Wells district. The entire 480 acres has been fenced with rabbit-proof wire and 280 acres is being rapidly planted to young grapefruit trees. The rest is to be planted at a later date due to a shortage in good nursery stock at the present.

Ontario Within the next three years, if plans announced by the city tree-planting commission are carried out, a total of 5000 ornamental and shade trees will be planted on Ontario's streets, at cost of approximately $20,000. City Manager Austin Burt announces that a survey of the city has helped determine the city's tree needs and the best kinds to plant. There are ninety-three miles of streets in Ontario in which trees will be planted. All trees now growing in Ontario have been tabulated as to kind, size and condition.

La Habra Two more thieves are paying the penalty for taking fruit from avocado groves, having been sentenced to six months each in the Orange county jail for stealing fruit from the grove of H. A. Randall, La Habra City Councilman. The pair, after stealing the fruit, offered it in Riverside at very low prices, low enough to arouse the suspicion of the dealer to whom it was offered. The dealer notified the authorities and the suspects were arrested on the charge of illegal possession of avocados and with using unmarked containers. The officers, in an effort to trace the fruit, called on the Calavo Growers of California, who have a standing offer of $50 reward for the conviction of thieves operating in the groves of their members. By means of tree records, the Calavo Growers were able to identify the stolen fruit as having come from the Randall grove.

Porterville The outlook for deciduous fruits in this district is considered promising this season, especially as to plums, apricots and prunes, according to growers and exchange heads. Wiley D. Ambrose, manager of the Rosecrest Fruit Exchange, advises a careful thinning of the crop. Prices for plums have been very satisfactory for the past several seasons. A. M. Sanborn of the Poplar district reports a bumper crop of apricots, one of the best in years. Allen Blair, who has a large prune acreage in the Woodville district, reports a heavy crop there.

Bakersfield Twenty grape growers are co-operating in the 1930 cost of production studies being conducted in Kern county by the California Agricultural Extension Service. The records kept in 1929 by seventeen co-operators have been summarized and are available to the grape growers. Three nectarine growers and one olive grower are co-operating in a test of methods of thrip control. Failure of nectarines to set fruit has been blamed upon thrips.

"Fight Fires With Forethought" is the slogan of a campaign which began in Kern county in March and will continue until June 1. The agricultural extension service and the State Division of Forestry are co-operating in visiting the communities of the county and demonstrating the effect of fire on water supply, methods of control and prevention, and kindred topics.

Lancaster Control of aphis and foxtail in alfalfa by the burning method continues to interest local farmers. One burner which is being tried on a number of places consumes forty to fifty gallons of Diesel oil per acre. Satisfactory results, so far as aphis is concerned, are being reported. Reasonably good results are reported on those plots burned in late February and early March. A field tour to study the results was recently held.

Van Nuys A ten-year fight on puncture vine is being outlined in San Fernando Valley. At a recent meeting of the Valley Alfalfa Growers Protective Association the subject was discussed and a program was outlined which will entail considerable work, about $15,000 for the first year and $10,000 each year for ten years more, after which time it is believed that the pest will have been eradicated from the valley. Arthur Robinson was elected president of the organization.

Banning Prospects are for a good fruit crop in the San Gorgonio Pass section this season, although some orchards are reported to be more or less "spotty" in the set of fruit. The almond bloom, which was exceptionally heavy this year, has thinned itself out in many orchards and apricots, which bore lightly last year, are setting heavy this year. Moisture conditions are good and there has been no frost.

Santa Ana The beekeepers' department of the Orange County Farm Bureau met here recently to consider the honey sales contract of the new sales organization "Packing and Marketing" of Sacramento. The marketing plan embraces the handling of honey sales throughout the State. It has been approved by members of the executive committee of the State Beekeepers' Association. R. K. Bishop reported that there are 332 beekeepers in Orange county and between 9000 and 10,000 in the State. There are over 300,000 colonies in California, according to latest figures from the State Bee Inspector's office.

Farmersville Forest Pritchard, bee man of this section, has purchased the old Bingham site at the corner of Park and Cypress avenues and is employing a crew of workers felling trees and making room for expansion. He will construct a complete apiary, including extraction apparatus.

Hondo Milk production at the Los Angeles County Farm, is the highest it has been in ten years, at this time of year, according to Frank Moore, the farm dairyman. One reason for this he says, is the fact that each cow is fed according to her individual needs. High producers are fed to keep them producing at a regular rate and low produce is fed accordingly. In order to do this, it is necessary to keep a very detailed record. The cows are trained so that each knows its own stanchion and goes to it. The County Farm recently added three head of pure-bred Belgian draft horses to its stables. The institution now has eight mares and two stallions of this breed, all of which have won prizes at stock shows.

Cutler The newest development in dairy work in Tulare county is found in this district, known chiefly as a grape section. Many of the grape men are turning to dairies, apparently considering butter and dairy products more remunerative just now than grapes. About fifty dairymen in this section are meeting each month and studying dairy problems with the aid of their local veterinarian and M. A. Lindsay, assistant farm adviser of Tulare county.

No more interesting approach to a home could be imagined than this one at old Wickenburg in Arizona, created by running a bridge across a little ravine through the spreading limbs and arched branches of a peach tree. When the cameraman happened by, the tree was in bloom and the living arch was a bower of beauty.

Tempe, Ariz. The doctors had to "look for something" when they examined Dick Calhoun, son of J. H. Calhoun, Maricopa County Treasurer, in the annual health contest which was a feature of the 4-H Club County Fair, held here recently. Dick won with a score of 99.11 out of a possible 100 points. Katherine Mann, from the Cartwright school, was judged the healthiest girl, scoring 95.97 points. The fair was held on the campus of the Arizona State Teachers' College and was the largest ever held. The champion demonstration team, composed of Earl Skousen and Donald Davis, showed how to test skimmed milk and adjust a cream separator. Dairy judging was won by Waldo Kreiger, Lawrence VanSant and George Hussey from Carwright. Hog and sheep judging honors went to Lawrence Cook, Horace Smith and Howard Lydic of Peoria. The Roosevelt and Kyrene teams were tied for poultry honors. On the former team were Carl Miller, Henry Austin and Robert Gould, while Kyrene's team included Floyd Fields, Woodrow Redden and Arthur Hunter. During the fair the Maricopa County Farm Bureau held a picnic and stock-judging contest, which was won by the Kyrene team, made up of Lee Jones, Hubert Cate, F. G. Cate, I. T. Collier and Mark Redden. All of the winning teams will go to the State university at Tucson this month to enter the State competitive finals.

Redlands The bloom on the citrus trees of the Redlands, Crafton, Bryn Mawr and Highland district this year is every bit as heavy as it was two years ago when the largest crop in the history of the district was handled. Growers say this does not mean that the coming crop will be as large, for there may be adverse weather conditions in June resulting in a heavy drop. There is always danger of cold weather in the fall and early winter, but this has been minimized to a great degree by the general installation of heaters.

Now that the navel shipping season is about over, growers are beginning to get their returns. Some of them are happy, for it has been a good year for them, but those who did not have a fair crop of fruit are not so cheerful. Predictions are that, because of the light crop just past and because of the exceptionally heavy bloom this spring, there will be a bumper crop for the Redlands navel district the coming season. Growers are being urged to give their groves the best of care during the summer and fall in an effort to secure a large crop and a good run of sizes.

North Hollywood Some thirty years ago K. Muto came to California from Japan. He did not grow truck vegetables, but for several years has conducted a restaurant here. He says he appreciates what America has meant for him and for some time has tried to find a way by which he might show his gratitude. Not long ago he offered to present the city with some 100 seedling Japanese cherry trees. The gift was refused at the time because of the Federal plant quarantine, but the Los Angeles Park Commission has decided to accept the trees and plant them in the North Hollywood Municipal Park. Mr. Muto presented some of these trees to the city of Seattle recently.

Makes Little Farm Home a Success Despite Rocky Land

PIONEER New England farmers experienced no greater difficulties in clearing their lands than did W. H. Clute of San Fernando, who has converted a rocky two and a half acres of wash land into a productive poultry plant and small farm home in a remarkably short period of time. The property was a rock and cactus patch a little over a year ago.

The rocks that "grew wild" on the place are now fashioned into a comfortable dwelling and garage, and the entire two and a half acres is planted to crops, or in poultry houses and runs. It has been hard work, but Mr. Clute says that after many years of farming in the Middle West, hard work has become a habit with him.

The Clute place, in many respects, answers to the ideal in small farm homes, especially in the objective of its owners. Mr. and Mrs. Clute have reared a family of eleven children, none of whom are living at home. All of the work on the place is done by Mr. Clute, and a good deal of the living is produced on the property.

In looking over the property, the judges of the Farm and Garden-Los Angeles Chamber of Commerce small farm homes contest suggested a larger assortment of fruit trees and more attention to home beautification, that is increased plantings of flowers and shrubs. The place is new, however, and Mr. Clute says that these things will come with time and increased productiveness of the poultry plant.

In entering the recent small farm homes contest, Mr. Clute submitted the following letter, telling of the development of his home. "We came here just about a year ago and bought this little place in the rough. It was all brush and stones and cactus, but we bought it cheap, as prices go here. Still it seemed high—where we came from in South Dakota, land was only worth ten to twenty dollars an acre. But we paid $1000 for this property, on 'time.'

"The first thing we did was to clear off the land and dig out the rocks and build them into a double garage. Then we planted half an acre of tomatoes and they did fine, but the prices were low. We had all kinds of vegetables for home use and some to sell.

"The man we bought of gave us three old buildings in the bargain when we bought the place, so I made them into a brooder house and put in 1500 baby chicks. We got 710 fine pullets out of them and they began to lay at five months. When seven months old, they were laying a case of eggs a day, and this income certainly helped us out of the bad places. I have built two chicken houses, and the second batch of pullets are fourteen weeks old and will soon be in their new house.

"We have a nice piece of alfalfa started and will plant about a quarter of an acre to carrots for chicken feed. There are also fifty grape vines and a few trees. This is not our entire planting—we will set more this year. We expect to keep on raising chickens as fast as possible until we get what we can take care of without hiring any help. There are just my wife and myself in the family now, but we have reared eleven children, six girls and five boys.

"Our work is a pleasure to us and we like the country best, after having tried both city and farm life. We were born and reared in Iowa and raised our family there, but went to South Dakota and went broke in the cattle business. I wouldn't take Iowa or Dakota as a gift if I had to go there and live after living in this country. No more snow and 30 below zero for me. I am so well satisfied here that I cannot express my love for this climate. My wife and I are happy here and that is all that is necessary anywhere. We don't expect any premium but just want to let you knew we are here to stay anyway."

W. H. Clute had only a wash to work with when he started to develop his little farm, but he was out to win. Stones from the superabundant supply on the place have served him for building material, as this photograph shows, and he is working wonders with what most people would consider a tough piece of ground.

Japanese maids in their own national garb gave an attractive exotic flavor to Beaumont's first Japanese Cherry Blossom Festival, a recent Cherry Valley affair.

Cherry Fete Held

Many Japanese and Americans at Beaumont Event

BEAUMONT.—This community's first Japanese Cherry Blossom Festival, held recently, was attended, it is estimated, by 12,000 Japanese and Americans. The festival day turned off cold and cloudy, but was preceded by over a week of warm sunny days which hastened the opening of the cherry blossoms, and made the orchards a splendor of white beauty. Japanese children and maids clad in quaint colorful costumes entertained the visitors with music and dances of their native land.

Many prominent Southern California Japanese and Americans attended the festival and assisted in carrying out the program. The Japanese consul from Los Angeles, Frank A. Miller of the Mission Inn of Riverside, Artie Mason Carter, founder of the Hollywood Bowl; W. I. Clendennon, president of the Japan American Society; Mrs. Minnie B. Clendennon, chairman of the Los Angeles District, California Federation of Women's Clubs, international relations committee; Ayaka Takahashi secretary of the Japanese Chamber of Commerce, and others spoke words of praise in favor of the festival idea of bringing the Japanese and Americans into closer communion.

The festival was sponsored by the Beaumont Rotary Club, assisted by many organized societies of the city as well as by the Cherry Valley Farm Bureau. Guy Bogart was chairman of the festival committee and presided at the entertainment, which was held on a vacant piece of land in the south part of Cherry Valley. The entertainment followed a picnic lunch. Moving-picture operators filmed the events.

The Beaumont Japanese Cherry Blossom Festival will be an annual event hereafter, it is planned. There are over a thousand acres of cherry orchards in the Beaumont district and the trees are in continuous blossom from early in March until late in April, with the peak of the blossoming season the latter part of March. The long season of bloom is due to the several varieties of early and late cherries which are grown in this section. The early cherries begin to ripen here the latter part of May and the peak of the season is reached in June. The prospect is for a bumper crop this year.

STAG CAN DRINK HIS FILL ANY OLD TIME ON CANYON DEER FARM

By H. H. Bushnell

WHEN you and I (Maggie included) were young there used to hang on the wall a chromo (or was it a lithograph?) depicting most spiritedly "The Stag at Bay." To our untutored imaginations, that stag looked as big as a house; he had a noble set of antlers and the sight of him was enough to set our pulses hammering with the lust of the chase. And when we read that old classic, now, alas, almost forgotten, "The Lady of the Lake," we learned that "the stag at eve had drunk his fill," while tales of Robin Hood and his merry men, happily in literary fashion even in these degenerate days (credit Douglas Fairbanks,) taught us the joys of illicit pursuit of the red deer. We pictured ourselves evading the indefatigable foresters of King John, we imagined the gustatory delights of haunches of venison grilled over the coals in Sherwood Forest, and washed down with great foaming flagons (or was it beakers?) of nut brown ale!

Long long before horserace men stole the term, hunting the deer was "the sport of kings." And savages, in dim days before civilization spoiled everything, got much of their sport along with their sustenance from the pursuit of these shy and elusive denizens of the woody glades. Fleet-footed, handsome Cervus, whether elaphus, alces palmatis, or rangifer tarandus, have furnished fun and food for the people of Asia, Europe and America since the beginning of history, and before. There is something in the blood, sometimes crusted over, that wakens at the slightest excuse and longs for the wide open spaces and the pursuit of this noblest of all game.

R. Nadeau, contractor and builder of Los Angeles, has, I suspect, his full share of this love of the open. His business was sufficiently lucrative to enable him to save up (or it is more proper to say "lay") a nest egg, but it was prosaic, and so, in the course of years, he had secured a great domain of mountains and valleys up Soledad Canyon way, some six miles beyond Saugus. He liked to hunt deer. He liked deer themselves. And so he conceived the idea of establishing a deer ranch. Once the thought took hold, it was easy enough to think up arguments why it would really pay. As always, if we want to do a thing, reasons why we ought to do it appear. Perhaps the movie folks would want to stage westerns in the wild scenery of his hills, especially if they were peopled with deer. There ought to be a good market for venison, too. Parks and big estates would want to buy some, and, if he could put the deer on parade, no doubt the public would come to see them. However, the fact remains that Mr. Nadeau started his deer farm about a year ago, chiefly because he wanted to.

His first job was building fences. He put up good ones, something like twelve feet high, made of heavy meshed wire and steel posts sunk deep in the earth. These fences include some 150 acres of land. Today he has about three and a half miles of fences, and they cost him a pretty penny—something like $2600.

Then he went over to Kaibab Forest in Arizona and bought from the United States Forestry Department a consignment of mule deer. Mule deer are natives, so named because of their large ears.

"There isn't very much in print about deer and their diseases," says Mr. Nadeau. "The government bulletins tell something. I figured they would be something like goats because they browse."

A Deer Doctor

Anyhow, when these deer caught cold and coughed and sniffed and had pink-eye, Mr. Nadeau had to doctor them himself, and they got well under a regimen of range, mountain air, clean water, rolled oats and alfalfa hay. When one broke its leg he put splints on and there's hardly a sign of the fracture now. He's learning about deer right along, and admits that there's plenty more to learn.

Mule deer didn't fully satisfy Mr. Nadeau's craving, so he began to look about for more varieties. He has quite a collection now—Saki deer from Japan, Virginia deer, Panama deer, black dappled and white fallow deer. He also secured about twenty-five elk—really the proper name is wapiti—which appear to be first cousins to the famous aristocratic red deer of song and story. Mr. Nadeau has red deer, too, mamma does, papa stags—harts they call them when they're full grown.

Later on he thinks he may get some antelope, and once started on that family, there's no telling where he'll stop.

Saki deer, he says, are very pugnacious, the buck he bought having thrashed everything on the place that he could get at. He has shed his antlers now and this makes him a little milder. He watched the photographer suspiciously, especially when one member of his harem bounded out of her covert, darted lightly in a circle before the camera and back again; he stamped his hoofs but didn't charge.

Bucks have antlers, not horns. They shed these frontal weapons every year and renew them, each season adding a tine so that you can tell one's age by his antlers. The antlers are used for attack and defense, but more potent still are the sharp forehoofs with which they strike like lightning.

The water buffalo at the deer farm is a gentle soul and permits Mr. Nadeau to take liberties without showing any resentment. At left are two mule deer from Kaibab Forest, Arizona. They enjoy petting and are always ready to make friends with visitors.

A Bison Flirt

Bison, Mr. Nadeau got from Arizona and Yellowstone Park, a fine bull and three females. Mary, one of the lady bisons, took a fancy to the photographer and insisted in getting in front of the camera for a close-up. Finally Mr. Bison drove her away and told the cameraman what he thought about alienating the affections of Mary, fickle, light-minded creature that she is. He (the bison) grumbled and butted a fence pillar, but finally let it go with a warning.

Another member of the Nadeau family is a water buffalo from the Philippines, but he was away from home. He'd gone to the movies as he had a chance to help make a picture. A zebu bull gazes solemnly from behind the fence at the visitors.

"Why don't you add all the American fauna to your collection?" a visitor asked Mr. Nadeau. "Why don't you have cougars and coyotes and lobos and wild cats and bears?"

"Well, I trap wild cats and coyotes right along," said he. "Easy to catch—if you know how. I caged a few of the cats, but it kept me busy hunting rabbits and squirrels to feed them. Meat eaters are too much trouble. I'll stick to the vegetarians. I have about twenty acres in alfalfa, and the browse on the hills helps out. Besides I like deer better."

Mr. Nadeau has spent close to $38,000 on his deer farm. He bought a small tract of land right on the highway because it had some fine live oaks, and has fitted up picnic grounds, with fireplaces, seats, tables

Just the other side of the cross-fence is Papa Bison, Mary and the other ladies of his senana, seraglio, harem, or whatever bison domestic establishments are called. In the right, foreground, are white fallow deer, with their dappled relatives beyond them. They're all curious about the camera.

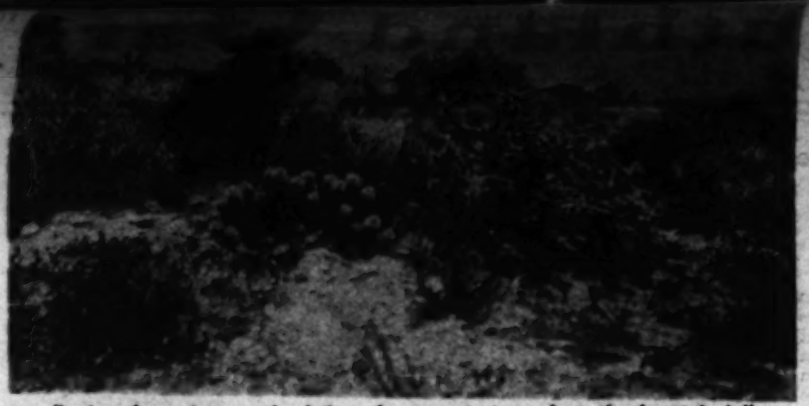
...tree can be made happy under cultivation. There are fine specimens in Memory Gardens at San Fernando and in the Blakeley Botanical Gardens at Santa Barbara, as well as in other places.

Another fascinating desert plant, in bloom at this time, was the ocatillo, a strange thing which sends up tall, stiff stalks closely set with small roundish green leaves and fiendish thorns, but topped during the spring season with brilliant orange-scarlet tufts which suggest the bracts of a poinsettia.

Some of the many varieties of cacti were in flower, but many of these will be coming along well into the summer. In fact, I understand that some are flowering during the hottest part of the summer season. Few blossoms of any plant have a more marvelous texture or more exquisite form. Their colorings range from the most brilliant of crimsons to the ethereal looking mauves, pinks and yellows. In one place I saw a plant which had luscious-looking apricot-colored blooms. They are so beautiful I think that it is only the provision of savage thorns which Nature has given them which saves the flowers from being ruthlessly stripped from the plants.

We are in the throes of enthusiasm about cacti and other succulents and it is a great temptation to those anxious to increase their collections to "lift" a plant from the desert, here and there. The conservation laws are making it a risky procedure and we can be glad, for it would take a surprisingly short time to denude our deserts of these valuable and fantastic plants. Propagation from seed and cuttings is so readily secured that this protective law need not work any real hardship on collectors. As for their being used for the manufacture of candy, as some varieties are, that practice is justly frowned upon. The sweet consumes a great amount of the plant life and it does not add tremendously to our delight. There are so many other sources from which we can derive our candy which do not entail destruction.



During the spring months, before the sun gets too ardent, the desert is full of interest to plant lovers. Many of the most beautiful blossoms are very transient and it's rare luck when you catch some of the plants in bloom. This picture was taken just below Banning on the way to Palm Springs.

The masses of soft pinkish lavender which could be glimpsed between sand dunes as the floor of the valley was approached spelled desert verbenas to those familiar with the wild flowers from our arid sections. Sheets of soft purple, splashed across fields of growing grain, were the lupins, much more scarce than in many seasons past. Perhaps this is due to the fact that the lupin is one of the few wild flowers which the thoughtless can cull and carry home with any hope of having the blossoms survive the ordeal. Even our golden poppies have been vanishing, to be found in quantities, only in the more inaccessible regions. The brodeia, the star-eyed grass, tidy-tips and many others have gone the same way. Many of these can be secured for cultivated gardens by a few cents expenditure for packet of seeds. The seeds are gathered by people who understand how to handle the plants and seeds so that no damage is done. Why not buy our wild flowers in this fashion and keep our consciences clear?? There is nothing to hinder our future privilege of journeying to the deserts and hills to see these lovely things except the threat of extinction.

Zinnia Plantings

er and plant, much of the stiffness that characterizes many of the zinnias was absent.

These pumila picotees are not to be confused with Lilliputs. They have compact, very double an rather rounded flower heads and come in many beautiful shades. The plants are of bedding type, but the flower stems are long—an advantage for cut flower use.

Timely Plantings

During this month, small plants of various seasonable perennials and annuals can be set out to provide your garden with further loveliness during the next few months. Seed sowing, in the open ground, should go forward without further delay. Cosmos is something that should not be overlooked at this time, the delicate blossoms will come along in the fall and be a joy for both garden and home decoration.

Gladiolus bulbs put in the ground now will flower in July and so sustain your succession of bloom. For these later plantings it always seems to be that the cooler shades are the most welcome. I remember encountering a group of fiery Dr. Bennetts last August that made me feel several degrees hotter than before I gazed upon them. Incidentally, a variety that consistently gave a good account of itself during our excessively hot summer last year was Mrs. E. J. Shalor; it managed to look cool and crispy under the most discouraging conditions

Vigilance is the by-word for this month in regard to insect pests. Don't take it for granted that your plants are all right today because they were yesterday. An appalling army of destructive creatures can mobilize in few hours' time.

A Lively Season

The flower show season is certainly a lively one this year, little ones and big ones in practically all communities in the Southland. A number of these events mark the closing of garden contests, also. All of which indicates that we are truly "garden-minded." The Pasadena show was a fine one and one few gardeners would have missed. In the immediate offing is the West Los Angeles show, the third such event staged there. The previous shows have been excellent and, really, second only to the Pasadena exhibition in general interest. The exact location of the tent which will house the show has not been announced at the time this goes to press, but it will be in Sawtelle and no one will have any difficulty in locating it.

The last three days of May and the first day of June will witness the novelty of an elaborate exhibition devoted to cacti and succulents, to be staged at the Ambassador Hotel Auditorium, no less! This ambitious undertaking is sponsored by the Cactus and Succulent Society of America. The name of the organization sounds rather imposing, but it is justified. It has almost 600 members on its roster and a great many States are represented, to say nothing of foreign countries. This organization issues a monthly magazine worthy of recognition from Kew Gardens, London, so that seems a sufficient recommendation for our consideration.

The displays will be drawn from some very famous collections and they ought to be very comprehensive. For those who have been recent victims to the lure of these rather weird and fantastic forms of plant life, this show will be of exceptional interest As far as that goes, the show committee announces that it will welcome the plants of any amateur as much as the collections of the experts. If you have two or three cherished specimens, why not take the committeemen at their word and make the show, in that sense, your show too? It is the surest way in the world to get a real "kick" out of such an exhibition.

A round whisk broom makes a good clothes sprinkler because it gives a finer spray, sprinkles more evenly and does the work quicker than the hand method.

Came to California, But Grasps Waiting Opportunity

LA MESA—Bernhard R. Pohlman used to be the owner of the Hillcrest Greenhouses of Illinois, where for fifteen years he grew flowers for the Chicago market. Three years ago he sold out his business, intending to retire, but before settling down he decided to see California. When he reached Southern California he was so delighted with it that he decided to remain and, a few months later, was once again actively engaged in business. He insists that he is not working, just "killing time" in an occupation he loves.

Mr. Pohlman raises pelargoniums and geraniums, still for the Chicago market. His cold frames require 200,000 cuttings at a single planting, he fills them twice. Shipping begins in August. His stock covers more than two acres and is to be enlarged from time to time.

Mr. Pohlman points at no less than a dozen other plants that might be grown in Southern California for Chicago florists.

"If I were now in business for money instead of fun," said he—he has a comfortable fortune—"I'd prove my statements. The eastern markets, now almost untouched, are waiting for Californians to exploit them; the flower marts offer many fortunes to those who will study their needs."

Another interesting nursery has been established here by Howard W. Johnson, for the particular purpose of growing native plants, trees, shrubs and flowers, many of which are in danger of extinction on account of the growing demands of agriculture and the ravages of forest fires.

Record Acres at Anaheim to Be For Sale in May

Focusing public attention on Southland citrus, the tenth annual California Valencia Orange Show will open at Anaheim May 22, to continue up to and including June 1. This year the show will celebrate the "golden anniversary" of the Valencia orange in Orange county, for it was fifty years ago that that variety found its way half around the world to its new home in Southern California. Its arrival was the start of Orange county's rise to pre-eminence among orange counties of the State. The crop this season is expected to bring in a golden harvest of dollars, 20,000,000 of them, to the growers of that county.

The Valencia show at Anaheim has risen from a small and unpretentious beginning a decade ago to one of the most beautiful expositions of its kind in the world. It is in effect a harvest festival, coming as it does at the height of the Valencia season. Every year a new motif is chosen, and this year the life of that leisurely character of old Dutch colonial legend, Rip Van Winkle, will supply incidents with which to provide the decorative scheme of the show, offering as it does a colorful background rich in old romance. A huge number of oranges will be used in building the numerous exhibits.

Many special events are scheduled, including the fourth annual world championship orange-packing contest, in which deft-fingered girls from every section of the United States and from Mexico, Nicaragua and Cuba will participate. Elimination contests are under way now in many of the large packing-houses of this State, by means of which the houses will each choose a team for the final event at the show. Besides the usual speed race, a fancy-packing contest will be held, giving the packers an opportunity to exercise creative skill.

Among the California communities which will build municipal displays at the show are Los Angeles, San Diego, Placentia, Long Beach, Riverside, Ventura county, Fresno, Orange county, the city of Orange, Sacramento, San Bernardino, Pasadena and Pomona. Scores of industrial exhibits will be shown, including a complete "course" in orange production, from planting to marketing. Amusements will also be offered.

The orange is a long-lived tree, and it is interesting to note that many of those Valencias planted fifty years ago are still bearing. They started to bear in their second year, came into commercial production in their fifth or sixth, and reached full maturity at 12 to 15 years. Based on experience with the tree in Spain, those in charge of the show declare, Orange county's Valencia pioneers should still be going good at 200 years of age. The Valencia is one of the two big commercial oranges of this State, the navel producing the fall and winter crop, the Valencia the spring and summer crop. The latter is unique in its ripening time, and hence finds a market of its own.

Plans are being made at the show to accommodate many thousands of visitors, it is announced by the manager, George W. Reid.

Martin Valve
Type F
For Row Crop Furrow Irrigation

This valve is designed with a heavy cast iron flange which is cemented over and around the end of the concrete pipe. Two siamese of surface pipe are controlled by the one valve. The valve is not open at the top, and therefore the water from the underground concrete line is turned into the surface hose without loss of water or pressure and at a considerable saving of time. Absolutely water-tight.

MARTIN VALVES AND GATES

Steel concrete pipe equipped with Martin Outlet Valves and Cut-Off Gates is the most efficient and economical method of controlling irrigating water that has ever been devised. Not Enough Grass

Sheepmen Have to Hold Down the Lamb Crop

McFARLAND.—The lambing season in this district is over for the year, and the lamb crop was better than 100 per cent, many twins having to be divided and weaker ones killed, on account of the scarcity of grass. The sheepmen hope to get 14 cents for lamb this year, which is 1 cent better than last year's price. It is estimated that there are about 7000 sheep, exclusive of lambs, pastured in the hills east of town, in bunches of from 1300 to 1500. Fifty-four carloads were shipped in here last fall.

The feed situation is unsatisfactory, as there has not been enough rain to bring up any amount of grass, and the sheepmen have been forced to buy hay and Indian corn. The corn is costing $40 a ton, and the hay around $23.50, although thirteen tons brought in on February 15, from Visalia, cost Pete Antoinette $31 a ton.

The sheep are usually kept in this vicinity until June or July, when they are taken over into the Owen's Valley country. This district is the only place where the owners can keep them at present, unless they should go to the expense of shipping them to the northern part of Sacramento Valley, where, it is reported, there has been enough rain to bring up plenty of grass.

and water handy. He fenced off spaces near by in which to keep specimens of his deer on view, where they can have shade, shelter, feed and clean water all the time. He has made pets of many of his 195 deer already. He whistles and the wapiti come running; he goes out in the buck brush and is immediately surrounded by a crowd of admiring mule deer, tugging at his coat, begging for attention.

Inquisitive Creatures

Deer, all of them, are simply eaten up with curiosity. A strange sight plagues them insatiably. The minute the camera was set up, they began to edge and side closer and closer. They wanted to know about that funny box with the winking eye. When nothing alarming happened, they grew bolder, and before the pictures were finished they were chewing the hat of the photographer, sucking the buttons on his coat, nibbling the leather straps of the camera box, tripping over the legs of the tripod and, making nuisances of themselves, like so many children.

Timid they are, easily startled, and then they go bouncing away on their delicate legs like animated rubber balls, but almost instantly they are back again, gazing up at you out of their big brown trustful eyes, investigating hands and pockets with their inquisitive noses.

Already the water buffalo has made his debut in movie circles. The meat end of the business looks promising, too. A representative of one of a chain of big hotels called recently and wanted to buy deer meat to try out on the guests. He said, if it "took," he would contract for all Mr. Nadeau could supply. When it was suggested, hesitantly, that it might come high, he replied that price was a minor consideration. Later on, when the population grows, Mr. Nadeau will be ready to talk—not turkey—venison.

"The does," said he, "commonly drop one fawn the first year and two thereafter. Deer aren't short-lived, especially when protected against their natural enemies. This isn't the most interesting time to see them, maybe, for the bucks have shed their antlers, but in late June and July the fawns will begin to arrive. We're expecting a baby bison, too."

It is probable that parks and large estates will be purchasers. It is going to be pretty hard for a lady visitor to resist the appeal of one of these shy, gentle little creatures, when it comes up to her to feed trustingly from her hand and beg for caresses. Fawns fulfill all the requirements for pets. They are playful, agile, graceful, affectionate and extremely ornamental. They blend into the landscape miraculously when they are still; when in motion, they are epitomes of activity and grace.

It begins to look as though the arguments with which Mr. Nadeau convinced and reassured himself, were sound.

Sudden Chills Blast the Hopes of Too-Advanced Zinnia Plantings

FOR several weeks past I have been urging Southern California gardeners to hold back on zinnia plantings. At the Pasadena Flower Show I encountered a couple of distressed garden friends whom I might point to as traditional "horrible examples," for they had let their eagerness get the better of them and the zinnias they had set out had perished miserably. I didn't see the plants, but from the description I had of their symptoms, I should diagnose the ailment as a sudden chill. That is one thing the zinnia seed or young plant is very susceptible to and, if you'll recall, we had some very warm weather and then a decided drop in temperatures recently. That is the trouble with April plantings for zinnias, asters and dahlia seeds. The dahlias aren't affected in quite the same manner, but they come along more thriftily, with better balanced development, if they aren't rushed into the ground too soon.

Each year brings new converts to the zinnia cult. It is a flower that, until recent years, has offered so little real beauty that it was rather scorned except in such localities as discouraged practically any other flower. A California grower took the poor thing under his care and accomplished wonders with it, getting it enviable honors from the Royal Horticultural Society and giving it real social standing. Several of our growers are now producing fine strains of zinnias and adding to the flower's charms, so we now have wonderful rich clear shades, providing a definite note of color in our garden plan, while the blooms range from the huge giants to the dainty Lilliputs or the picotees. We can buy exactly the plant form we wish for a specific location. And certainly there is no flower that will give us cutting blooms so generously during the long hot months of late summer.

The zinnia isn't a bit fastidious about location or soil or cultivation, but it does respond to a bit of extra care. It can't have too much sun. It will do on a minimum of water, but that is no reason for not providing a reasonable amount of moisture. You can buy small plants from the nurseries and set them out with a certainty that they will come along all right. Some poisoned snail and sowbug bran or bait spread about the young plants is a wise precaution, as it is with all such tender growths. They should have some sort of protection from the direct rays of the sun until after they've established their tiny rootlets. Keep the ground fairly moist, too.

Personally, I shall never grow zinnias again except from seed planted in the open ground. It is so simple, so much less bother than fussing with transplanting. If you begrudge the loss of the little plants that must be removed in the thinning-out process, you can sow the seed in an open ground seed bed and transplant from there. The seed is inexpensive, however, and even after thinning to the required space between plants, you will have several dozen plants from a single packet. Sow the seed thinly, to begin with. Just about 100 per cent germination will occur anyway. As soon as they are out of the ground do your first thinning, so that no two seedlings are left so close as to touch each other. Later, when two pairs of leaves have appeared, thin again to a distance of six inches apart. In the final thinning, leave the thriftiest specimens, of course, and leave a space of about fifteen to eighteen inches between plants for the large types and two feet for the Lilliputs. Pinching out the center when the plant is eight or ten inches high will make it spread out and not become quite so rangy. If you want exhibition blooms, a little disbudding will help, although if you buy the big, dahlia-flowered varieties you'll get enormous flowers anyway.

By dahlia-flowered zinnias we mean the massive, double forms with the full centers. These come in some delightful shades. An established favorite is Exquisite, a light rose with a deeper tone at the center. Then there is Old Rose, true to its name, and Canary Bird, a bright, clear yellow, and Crimson Monarch, for instance. Many other shades there are, of course, and fine ones. Two recent introductions of particular merit are Youth, a very lovely light rose variety, and Golden Dawn, somewhat deeper than Canary Bird, very large of bloom.

Last year at one of the flower shows, Delight, a pumila picotee type, was shown for the first time and made a great impression on those who saw it. I find people constantly referring to it. It was dainty in form, with its quill-like petals, somewhat curled, making the flower graceful. The colors were a salmon rose, golden yellow, buff, and lavender, all charmingly soft in effect. Being a dwarf in both flow-

The Desert Blooms

Elusive Flowers Come and Go in Wraithlike Fashion

A trip to the desert during the spring is a treat that all plant enthusiasts owe themselves and, judging from the number of automobiles going and coming on every highway leading to and from such sections of the Southland, most of these folks have been on such a jaunt this spring. It might be said in passing that a single trip isn't going to give anyone a real picture of the floral beauties of the desert. The plants vary greatly in different localities and, what is more, the succession of blooms comes on so rapidly and vanishes so swiftly that many varieties prove positively elusive. It is only the persistent seeker who sees most of them.

Possibly the most discussed and most difficult to "catch" at exactly the time of its inflorescence is the Smoke tree, truly one of the loveliest of the native desert plants. On April 13, on a trip to Palm Springs, I was fortunate enough to see three or four fine specimens in flower, which ought to demonstrate that there is nothing to that "unlucky thirteen" stuff. The small ball-like florets are an ultramarine blue and with the grayish bark in combination, the effect from a distance readily explains the origin of the name. It may not be the origin, but it might well be. There are surprisingly few of these trees left on our deserts and we can be grateful that the conservation propaganda is getting such widespread publicity these days.

At this particular time, the delicate beauty of the Palo Verde tree, another of our choicest natives, was at its best in the vicinity of Palm Springs. In the town, around some of the hotels and residences, these trees were a mass of yellow blossoms, very similar in size and shape to a cherry blossom. The branches of the tree are slender and graceful, bending down enough to create a "weeping willow" effect. As the blossoms pass, tiny leaves, a trifle broader and about the length of those on pepper trees, appear on the branches, growing in very much the same fashion as do the pep-

DESERT FOLKS HAVE BUILDING PROBLEMS, BUT THEY'LL SOLVE 'EM

By Iva M. McFadden

WITH vacation time just around the corner, it is interesting to note that Imperial Valley summer holidays are becoming shorter and shorter. Years ago, vacation time was a long flight from the summer heat by those who could get away. They stayed as long as they could.

Nowadays they don't have to flee. Better housing conditions and more home conveniences have made it unnecessary. One may stay throughout the long desert summer with no detriment to health and little to comfort, if he lives sensibly.

The greatest difficulty always has been with the houses; they were not built with any consideration of desert conditions. The living-room might be ever so commodious, the kitchen ever so convenient, the tiled bathroom ever so brilliant of hue, but narrow eaves, flat roof, thin siding, and a cubby hole of a cellar, would rob the dweller of the full measure of satisfaction which should have been his, and especially hers. In the towns even a shading tree might be lacking, although ranchers were pretty sure to have their groups of comfort-giving sylvan growth.

This matter of proper house building is one to which all desert sections of the Southwest must apply some study, for the desert is the last great colonization area. Sensible building is quite necessary. Winter is no problem—the winters are glorious. The summers are hot. No one would think of building a shack on Cape Cod and spending a winter exposed to extreme cold, without fire or adequate insulation. No one should think of suffering in a little "match box" of a house in Imperial Valley, or any hot summer climate, if he can possibly help himself.

Hotels are solving the problem with elaborate cooling systems, but these, of course, are too expensive for the average home builder.

Builders, however, tell us that many things which will add immeasurably to comfort in summer may be had with very little additional expense. They may seem insignificant, but they do tend to counteract the dividends of comfort through all the years the house is to stand.

The old and the new. The pioneer's big tent house, with a "sur-roof" of boards, is shown above. Below is a late type of Spanishy ranch house with living room running clear from front door to back, to get good ventilation. This building, while lacking eaves, has other things to recommend it for a hot climate.

And windows! How deep are the windows in a desert home? Do they follow the conventional type, or are they set long and low enough to bring the ventilation down close to the floor? Experts are beginning to emphasize the necessity for a movement of air in houses winter or summer, but anyone who has spent a time on the desert knows without being told that even a most insignificant breeze brings comfort in summer. Yet, too few house builders take into consideration the fact that low windows will bring the full effect of that breeze within the house. Even porches which are screened usually are boarded up too high, and if these are to be used for sleeping purposes, down should go the screen below the springs of the bed to allow the air a free circulation.

Small things, all of these, and of insignificant additional expense, yet they are the very basic principles on which comfort depends. With them, too, comes the matter of material, and though few people may know it, California has provided one of the best natural insulators—redwood. Builders who are using it for sidings are unconsciously employing a heat protector.

Another "made-at-home" heat-resisting material is the adobe. Once that humble material received slight consideration, but now we know that the old-time builders in California were very wise in using it, and if the bricks are wide and properly laid there is little need to fear the earthquakes that our western States must never quite forget. Aside from its coolness, an adobe house, if adroitly planned, can be most attractive, and nowhere does it seem to have a more natural setting than in the desert.

Better Basements

When it comes to the arrangement of rooms, individuals must plan for themselves, yet here, too, certain fundamentals deserve consideration. Going to the very bottom of things, what about a basement? Not the tiny fruit cellar, dark and scantily desert sun. For instance, eaves. How many persons could tell the width of the eaves on the houses in which they live? Very few. Yet watch when the sun is pouring down from overhead and see how unprotected is the narrow-eaved house, and how much shade a deep eave will actually cast down over the sides. Householders need to become eaves conscious, for in just such a small thing lies a promise of greater comfort.

A lumber dealer's home in the desert. Tall windows bring the air in close to the floor. Wide eaves give added shade to the walls.

There is another thing which can only be seen when the house is in the process of construction, and of which the housewife may know nothing at all. This is the studding. In most houses "two-by-fours" are used, which means that the air space between the outer and inner wall is only four inches. But change studding to 2x6 and the air space becomes six inches. That air space is a great insulator, and the cost of increasing it when building an ordinary house is only a very few dollars—certainly a happy investment, with ventilated, but a real below-ground room. Up to the present very few houses are built with any such plan in mind, yet all of us know there is a marked difference in temperature. The somewhat "stuffy" feeling about the ordinary cellar is due to improper ventilation. Those who have planned a basement large enough for a summer lounging room, with a real circulation of air, are finding it a remarkable addition to daytime comfort in hot weather.

Everything in the placement of rooms for comfort seems to revolve about that simple matter of air movement. It is achieved by planning both windows and doors to create a direct current across the rooms. Even porches, particularly those for sleeping, must not be tucked into the house, as it were. They must have openings at ends and sides to allow a sweep of air through and across them.

Ideas change quickly, and none more radically than those concerning porches. Where once expanses of porch were considered a requisite for coolness, now housewives are discounting their advantages. Some very comfortable houses have them only for sleeping, while the living-room stretches across the whole house, with French doors opening up both ends. Those with doors from side rooms, allowing cross currents of air, give a surprising amount of ventilation. Patios incorporated with the house may be a happy addition for some families, but the more desirable ones are screened against summer insects.

Authorities on building contend, and, rightly, that after all, the roof must bear the brunt of the sun. Various types of construction and numerous roofing materials may be advocated, but a lot of heat is going to get down to and through the ceiling unless that ceiling be insulated above. A proper insulation would probably cost more than many devices mentioned—several hundred dollars for an average house—but if this expenditure will cut the temperature 10 deg., as it is said, it is money well spent.

The truth is, that nature, while decreeing heat for the desert, has yet simple devices for offsetting it, and if man is to be com-

Compton Farmer Began Career As Hired Hand on Ranch

COMPTON.—C. H. Ellers of Dominguez and Alameda streets, Near Compton, is a rancher who has shown what one can do if he is fired by ambitions, willing to work hard and to practice economy. Forty years ago Mr. Ellers came to California, an emigrant boy from Germany. He hired out as a ranch hand at $25 a month. His day began with dawn, and even before, when days were short. He milked cows in the morning, worked in the fields all day and milked again at night.

"It cost $1.50, almost two days' wages, to go to town," he said. "Town" was Los Angeles, and the only means of transportation was by way of the Southern Pacific Railroad.

Mr. Ellers now owns 140 acres of land near the ranch where he began his career as a ranch hand, and farms it with his sons. An additional sixty acres are leased. This enterprising rancher has an unusual way of disposing of his farm produce. There are numerous dairies in his section, and he supplies many of them with green feed. At the present time he has eighty acres planted to alfalfa. This is cut green, raked and sold by the ton.

"Alfalfa," Mr. Ellers said, "is resown every four years. Between times we plant the land to sugar beets, or grain, usually barley. Then the ground is "dry plowed." Thus the Bermuda grass roots are left exposed to the sun and killed. We can then, if we choose, replant to alfalfa.

A truckload of alfalfa leaving the Ellers place at Compton for a nearby dairy.

"Our sugar beets are contracted for by a sugar company before they are planted. The grain is either cut green, when it is about one and one-half feet high, and sold to the dairies, the land being pastured, or the grain is allowed to ripen, baled and then sold. One year we planted Lima beans instead of grain. The straw was baled and sold to the dairies and to orange growers. They averaged fourteen sacks to the acre, without irrigation. Another year we grew watermelons. We irrigated the land before planting, but gave the plants no water. They were wonderfully sweet melons and we sold every one. We cleared $100 an acre on them. To this day people come and ask us when we are going to plant melons again.

"Another time we tried pimientos. This was a new line for us. A local cannery contracted for them before they were put in. We planted thirty-four acres and found them to be profitable, although requiring a good deal of work and lots of water. We irrigated about six times.

"One year we plowed up a piece of pasture land and tried out Irish potatoes. The field was irrigated before they were planted, but the potatoes themselves were given no water. They produced extremely well, yielding about 100 sacks to the acre.

"But of all the crops we've tried we prefer alfalfa. It always brings a good price, and we have no trouble disposing of it. It involves less work than most farm products, too."

Mr. Ellers uses both a tractor and horses on the ranch. About ten head of horses are kept, and the colts are raised. A cow is kept for home use, as are about 75 "Reds" and a few turkeys and pigeons. A fine family orchard adds to the attractiveness of the ranch, as well as supplying the table with delicious fruit. A vegetable garden is always maintained. Mr. Ellers has his own water system.

The Ellers ranch is a portion of what was known as the old Rancho San Pedro. This rancho was a Spanish grant and comprised over 43,000 acres, extending from the Los Angeles River to the sea. It was given to Juan Jose Dominguez, the original owner, by a Spanish king.

Spud Area Increased

An increase of 1000 acres in the area to be planted to potatoes in Nevada this year, or approximately 15 per cent more than the crop planted for harvest in that State last year, is indicated by planting intentions as reported on March 1 to the Salt Lake office of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Still Gardening

Old Folk at Winchester Produce Own Provender

By Edwin F. Lindesberger

After seventy-one years of teaming together on life's highway, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Rice are still very much in love with life and each other. For half a century they have resided in Pleasant Valley, of later years better known by the postoffice name of Winchester, Riverside county.

To the townspeople they are affectionately known as Uncle Jimmy and Aunt Lizzie, and they have been a part of the settlement for so long that every inhabitant admits that as long as there has been a Winchester, its activity and progress have centered round this pair.

Their longevity and good temper, say friends, might well be credited to their diet. They grow their own food—white meat only, from their poultry yard and rabbit pen, and vegetables that they have tended in their own yard. They have milk from a goat. Each day they may be seen in their yard, about the small garden plot or tending the live stock.

J. H. Rice and Elisabeth Stanfield were married May 4, 1850, and came to California fifty-one years ago. Mrs. Rice was fourth postmaster at Winchester. She was always active in community affairs and especially in church work. When a preacher at any time failed to reach Winchester on his circuit, Mrs. Rice could be depended upon to take the pulpit and do a good job of it.

Mr. Rice is a Civil War veteran of Company D, Fourth Infantry, Kansas volunteers. The Rices were among the promoters of the townsite and helped plot out its streets in 1886 and to plant its rows of street trees. They built and operated the first Winchester hotel.

Lighten Your Flowers

And That Lightens the Hard Work They Make

VAN NUYS.—Some years ago Mrs. George G. Capen came to Van Nuys and started, as many another woman does, to grow flowers. Gladioli and other heirloom flowers were her hobby. Mrs. Capen found that she could make quite a bit of spending money by selling bulbs and plants to her neighbors. Before many years had passed, the wholesale bulb buyers sought her out, so she reasoned that if she could grow them for a few, why not for many?

This year she says she will dig more than 500,000 gladiolus bulbs alone from her seven-acre field on Vanowen street. One acre is devoted to daffodils. Except for the plowing and tractor work at the beginning of each season, she does every bit of the labor herself, including the setting out of the bulbs, irrigation, cultivation and digging. She has erected a flower stand on the boulevard where she displays her products and sells cut flowers to passing motorists in season.

Mrs. Capen says that the outdoor work keeps her in good health and the fact that she loves each flower lightens the heavy work. Of course, the money she gets from the sales isn't to be scoffed at, either.

SCALYBARK FINALLY BECOMES INCURABLE

By M. B. Rounds
Farm Adviser, Los Angeles County

SCALYBARK is probably the most important disease of citrus in California from an economical standpoint, the losses in the citrus orchard from this cause reaching many thousands of dollars each year. Many orchards have a low percentage of efficiency because of the presence of long-standing cases of this disease, which differs from many others in that cases in the advanced stages are known to be incurable. Trees are perhaps not capable of being brought back into profitable bearing after once becoming nonproductive because of it. The disease is one which is confined to orange varieties, and does not affect lemons, thus differing from shell bark, which affects only lemon varieties. The sweet orange is the one which is most commonly affected. Of our commercial varieties, the Valencia appears to be the most severely affected, the navel not being quite so susceptible. Grapefruit it also affected, but usually in a lesser degree than the Valencias or navels, and tangerines are subject to the trouble to some extent. Sour oranges appear to be immune.

The disease first affects the bark and is usually manifested in the beginning stage by the cracking of the outer bark and the formation of scales. It sometimes first appears as a small area, not over half an inch in diameter, and at other times is manifested by a splitting and the formation of scales through an area possibly six inches in diameter. At first, the disease is confined only to the outer layers of the bark, leaving the underlying layers still alive and active. If the disease is quite active, gum will form and exude from the lesions.

The condition described is called the first stage, especially when the bark is scaly in an area not more than two to three inches in diameter. The three stages, first, second and third, are more or less arbitrary. When the disease is in the first stage, a slight scraping of the exterior or outer portion of the bark will often show yellowish-green in place of a normal green, with a woody brown discoloration at the base of the pustules in the outer bark. A study of a larger number of these beginning stages has led to the conclusion that the disease attacks the tree first in the outer bark and progresses inward as the disease advances.

The second stage is manifested by an increase in the affected area, covering more than a third of the perimeter of the trunk of the tree, and frequently encircling the trunk or a large limb. At this stage, the bark presents a very roughened surface. The advance of the disease appears to be in the outermost layers of the bark.

As the disease advances throughout the tree on trunk and branches, it penetrates deeper and finally enters the wood. Eventually there comes a condition where the top begins to die back. This is known as the third stage. The tree becomes stunted and decay of the wood sets in. Production gradually decreases and finally, after a few years, the tree may either die or become so unprofitable that it is more economical to remove it entirely. The disease is possibly caused by a slow growing organism, but such organism or causal agent has not yet been isolated. It is apparent that after inoculation takes place the disease develops very slowly, so slowly, in fact, that even after the first indication, years may elapse before the tree will become decadent.

Scalybark is more active during the growing season, especially during summer and early fall. During those periods, when gum formation and exudation are taking place, it proceeds quite rapidly. The gum itself is not the disease, but a result of the disease.

While we do not know the cause of the trouble, we do have some information on some of the contributing conditions for its development. It is apparent that trees which are stunted or weakened in any way are more susceptible. Some of the contributing factors are severe or heavy pruning, including the top working of trees, poor soil conditions, improper management of the soil, including irregularity and over or underirrigation, as well as lack of maintenance of fertility. Methods of cultivation may also have their effect, especially where intense cultivation is practiced. Deep cultivation, when root pruning is a result, is no doubt deleterious and affects the tree.

The program for preventing this disease, then, is one in which the best possible care is given the soil and the trees, in order to keep the latter in a vigorous, growing condition from the time they are first planted in the orchard. Other precautious, having in mind prevention, would include the disinfection of tools which have been used on infected trees where those tools are to be used on healthy ones later. The use of a fungicide such as Bordeaux mixture on the trunk and large limbs will also, probably help to prevent infection.

Inspect Each Tree

If first-stage scalybark can be detected in the orchard, probably the disease can be cured. One should take the time each year to inspect each individual tree for incipient cases, as well as for the advance of the disease in the case of already treated trees. A cure can be effected much more easily when the condition is discovered early. When the disease is detected on the trunk and branches of trees, especially in the first two stages, treatment is advised. The procedure for treating is to scrape the infected area, removing all the roughened surface, as well as a portion of the good, green outer bark, being careful not to go too deeply into the middle or white portion of the bark. It is also necessary to scrape in the same manner an area of good bark surrounding the affected portion to a distance of approximately six inches. Special scalybark scrapers are sold which are satisfactory for this treatment.

The scraping of the bark is probably the operation which effects the cure. However, it is advisable to apply some good disinfectant. Any kind of disinfectant or fungicide can be used, providing it does not injure the bark. We recommend for this work one which is inexpensive, easy to make up and not very poisonous. Such a material is permanganate of potash and can be obtained by the grower at any drug store in crystalline form. One teaspoonful of this chemical dissolved in a pint of water and applied with a brush makes a very good disinfectant.

When treating old cases of scalybark, where most of the trunk and some of the branches are affected, it may be advisable only to treat areas of good bark outside of the affected portions in order to check the advance of the disease. Many old cases can be treated satisfactorily and the disease checked somewhat, although it is impossible to cure severe cases.

We would recommend that the control work be done during the spring, summer and early fall. It is hazardous to attempt treatment during that portion of the year and in those districts where there is a severe frost hazard.

They Grow "Cukes"

And the Dill That Flavors 'Em Later On

NORTH LOS ANGELES.—Local growers of cucumbers for the canneries have begun their busy season in this locality and from now until the crop is gathered they will have plenty to do. Perhaps the best-known growers here are Reece brothers, M. B. and Henry. M. B. Reece is planting seven acres in the valley this year, and gets his seed from one of the big canneries. Henry plants for another concern, which also furnishes seed. In addition to the "cukes," M. B. Reece will have four acres of dill for use in the making of dill pickles.

The yield from cucumbers usually averages about six tons to the acre. Last year was a banner year, eleven tons to the acre having been grown on one of the Reece tracts. The biggest crop ever grown, a few years ago, produced fourteen tons to the acre. The cucumbers grown in the valley are planted in the early spring and transplanted in about a month. The picking season lasts about six weeks.

M. B. Reece will also grow fifty-six acres of tomatoes, from seed already sown. The tomatoes are transplanted after danger from cold weather is over. The full crop of tomatoes will go to the cannery.

Besides the crops which they grow here, the Reece brothers are farming at Tracy in the northern portion of the State and they divide their time between the two localities. The process of growing in Tracy differs from that followed here. There the seed is planted in hot beds during February, and after one month's growth the plants are transferred to cold beds for a month, after which they are put out in the field.

The apiary averaging fifty-seven pounds of honey per colony had a production cost of $7.30 per hundred pounds. The apiary reporting twenty-three pounds per colony had a total cost of $19.41 per hundred. It is very evident, therefore, that the greater the honey yield, the less the expense per pound and the better the margin of profit. This study did not show any correlation between the size of the apiary and the cost of production. Some of the large apiaries had high costs, due to low yields.

The beekeeper's business is a very fascinating one, but to make a commercial success of it requires close application to details and an understanding that will harmonize the sensitive but willing honeybee with its external and internal environments. The strength and production are very susceptible to good or poor management on the one hand and to climate exigencies on the other hand and these are not within effective control of the beekeeper. We see this reflected in the Orange County study. The spring of 1927 was very late; the rainfall for the calendar year 1928 was 9.8 inches, and that for 1929 was 6.4 inches. The nor-

SANTA ANA.—Contented sugar-beet babies from pedigreed seeds, developed for something like 300 years, are flourishing on 5500 acres in Orange county and are expected to produce a total of more than 53,000 tons of beets and a return of nearly half a million dollars to the 300 growers of the district, R. H. Tallman, field superintendent for the Holly Sugar Company, said recently. The pay roll this year at the plant will total more than $225,000, it is estimated.

Seed for Orange county's sugar beet crop is imported each year from Germany and every seed has a pedigree longer that that of many of the European royal families, according to Mr. Tallman. Constant breeding and development by German scientists has raised the sugar content of beets from mal for the county is 12 inches. The climatic factors, therefore, have materially limited production during these years. We find that in 1927 it took fifty-two pounds of honey per colony to pay all expenses of production. In 1928 it took thirty-five pounds; in 1929, forty-two pounds; and forty-three pounds average was required for the three years.

Now, the average production for the three years was 42.8 pounds per colony, as indicated at the outset of this story. There isn't much left for the average producer then, if it takes forty-three pounds to pay all expenses. Of course it doesn't mean that the beekeeper is "broke," for he has made wages from the labor he put into the business, and he has made 6 per cent on the investment, which we charged against the business. He could have got that interest in some other safe investment, too.

The honey business, however, is no different from any other farm business or even city business. There is little, if any profit, in the average business. One must be better than average to get ahead, financially.

4 to 18 per cent. The Holly Sugar Company ships the seed here from the Fatherland and sells it to the growers at cost.

Early spring rains have placed the Orange county beet crop in better condition than it has experienced for several years, according to Mr. Tallman. Acreage has also increased about 10 per cent over last year, although it is not up to that of some other years. The big sugar factory south of Santa Ana is expected to run to capacity this year when it starts the season, about August 10.

About 3500 acres of beets will be grown in the section south of Santa Ana and on the Irvine Ranch, sugar company officials state, while an additional 2000 acres will produce beets in the Los Alamitos district. Planting started late in December and continued up until the middle of February.

Growers will be paid on a basis of the net receipts for sugar. Purchase of the sugar locally has helped the sugar situation here materially, said Mr. Tallman. He explained that the old idea that beet sugar would not "jell" is not correct nowadays.

"Housewives are learning that beet sugar is just as good as, if not better than, cane sugar," he declared. "Chemists who have analyzed the two sugars declare beet sugar to be superior to cane sugar from a dietetic point. They have found that beet sugar contains a substance which enables it to ferment more rapidly than cane sugar and so entails less wear and tear on the body's digestive system. Beet sugar means better health and less stomach trouble," he insists.

The beet harvest will start about August 1, some ten days before the factory opens. A force of from 60 to 250 men will be kept at work at the plant from the present time until November 10, when the season will close.

fortable, he must take thought to make use of them. Trees and grass without are something everyone can have. Owners of old houses may have to employ awnings or flaps to shade the house sides, and electric fans to create ventilation, but new houses may incorporate much that was lacking in the past.

In fact, agriculture has advanced so rapidly on the desert, that other things have a rather breathless time of it keeping up, and house building is one of them. But all farmers know that happiness and comfort go hand in hand. Quick has been the change from the first tents of the pioneers to the houses of today. And who can say about tomorrow? Perhaps architects will devise something uniquely beautiful for the desert. If they do, surely simplicity and comfort will be fundamental to it.

Wants Effective Duty

Ventura Beet Grower Wires His Arguments to Congress

OXNARD.—John Eastwood, secretary of Oxnard Farm Center, Ventura County Farm Bureau, recently wired the tariff conference committee of Congress at Washington D. C., as follows:

"A prosperous beet-sugar industry would not be a tax upon the housewives of the nation, but it would be the best business tonic that the merchant, the manufacturer and the nation could have. Where wheat will grow, sugar beets will grow. With all due respect to the ability and integrity of Messrs. Legge and Teague and the whole Farm Board, many farmers doubt the wisdom of the government trying to carry the surplus of a product of the soil. The sugar-beet industry would eliminate surpluses which the government cannot carry and the markets will not absorb. Why try to buck the markets of the world by exporting grain when we could use the same land for raising our own sugar? The greatest industrial progress Germany ever made was when it was fostering its beet-sugar industry. Please establish rate of two forty on Cuban sugar."

Mr. Eastwood, a member of a pioneer family of Ventura county, has been growing sugar beets in his district for many years.

ROCKS DISPOSED OF AND GROVE SET OUT

gated by an overhead sprinkling system. The land has been left ungraded, leaving available the valuable layer of topsoil often lost in the grading process. The larger gullies have been filled in with the top strata of rocks that once made the land unworkable. The trees, which have been planted a year, are in excellent condition.

The crux of the undertaking was the feasibility of leaving the land ungraded, a process necessary where gravity irrigation is to be employed. The overhead system of irrigation, independent of a gravity flow of water, solves the water problem. However, to utilize this type of irrigation system best, there had to be a constant supply of water under pressure. A well seemed the most practical solution, particularly as the Mentone district is underlain by the Santa Ana River water basin.

Before other work was begun, a casing was sunk to bed rock, bringing in a 70-inch flow of water. This was an ample supply and when the well flow was run through a booster pump, more than enough pressure could be obtained for a fifty-acre sprinkling system needing a maximum pressure of thirty pounds.

Rocks Disposed of

Clearing of the land prior to planting was carried on in a manner different from that usually employed in reclaiming rocky sagebrush country. Two small gasoline shovels were put to work enlarging the gullies that ran through the property. Then with fresno scrapers, tractors, teams, chains and sheer man power, the surface rocks were hauled into the enlarged gullies instead of being removed to the edge of the field in the usual way.

The gullies were not filled completely to the top with rocks, however. Fertile top soil from adjoining property was hauled in by dump trucks to bring the fills to the level of the surrounding ground. Gasoline shovels were used to fill the trucks, cutting down labor expense and speeding up the job.

In this way the troublesome boulders were disposed of at a minimum of cost and labor, and a splendid drainage system was installed at the same time. Incidentally, the process of digging out the rocks eliminated most of the sagebrush, making it comparatively easy to grub out the remainder and burn it.

When the ground was cleared, contractors began the installation of an underground pipe system for the contemplated overhead irrigation. Two main lines were run through the field, independent of one another with smaller side branches During the ditch digging more rocks were uncovered, which were used to fill in low places or dragged to the borders.

Simultaneously with sprinkling system installation, preparation of the soil for planting was started. Auger holes were sunk thirty inches in the ground and half-stick charges of 20 per cent blasting powder were exploded at the bottom. These charges shattered underlying rocks and aerated the soil for several feet in all directions, allowing for good water penetration. The loose dirt was shoveled out of the blasts for tree holes and when the irrigation system was in the land was ready for planting.

Two-year-old Valencia stock was set out on the square, 20x24 feet apart, in the blasted tree holes. Water was immediately available for the young trees from the sprinklers, so the work of planting went ahead rapidly. The sprinklers were so arranged that one sprinkler head supplied four trees.

An enormous cover crop of hubam clover and whippoorwill peas was grown the first spring and summer, in 1929. Half of the fifty acres was sown to hubam and half to peas. The clover seemed to make the best stand, attaining a height of five feet in many places. It will probably be the cover crop used in the future. This cover crop, when turned under in the fall, supplied a large tonnage of humus and vegetable matter per acre.

Watering on the grove is carried on mostly at night during the hot months. About eight acres are watered at one time, the sprinklers being allowed to run from six to ten hours, depending on the condition of the soil that the auger brings up. This schedule allows for the entire fifty acres to be irrigated in a week.

Watering often and not too long has proven the best method of getting results, the owners say. The water falls from the sprinklers and is absorbed immediately by the porous soil, preventing washing and consequent removal of fertilizer elements. The run of water can be so controlled at all times that both commercial fertilizers and water can be used more economically.

The company is so satisfied with results to date that it is planning to set out another fifty acres on a similar scale, on property immediately north of its present holding.
